On the eve of his trip to the United States to fight Tami Mauriello, Bronx idol, men in oil-grimed overalls presented a cheque for £1,024 ($4,527) to the Doncaster Infirmary to endow a Bruce Woodcock bed. They had raised the money in appreciation of the boxer winning the heavyweight boxing title of Britain.

Woodcock is expected to make about £6,000 ($27,000) on his trip to the United States.

Great Britain's 1947 amateur golf championship will be held at Carnoustie and the open championship at Hoylake, scene of this year's open.

The open title has been played twice previously at Carnoustie but never the amateur.

Charlton Athletic and Derby County, soccer cup finalists this year, are scheduled to visit Europe during the summer.

Derby has been invited to Czechoslovakia and negotiations now are under way for the Athletics to play in France and Sweden.

The MacKinnon of MacKinnon, the oldest clan chief in Scotland and the oldest test cricketer in Britain, received a cricket-bat on his 98th birthday April 9. He travelled 200 miles from his Forres, Morayshire, home to Glasgow for his birthday celebration where he was given a civic welcome by the Lord Provost.

An eight-year-old MacKinnon presented the old Highland Chief with a bat bearing 98 signatures of clansmen and former prominent cricketers.

He toured Australia with Britain's test team in 1878 and was Kent County's opening batsman when Australia returned the visit in 1884.

Alfred Common, one of the best-known football inside-forwards of the early 1900s and the first man to bring his club a four-figure transfer fee in the history of the game, died at his Darlington home recently.

Middlesbrough paid £1,000 ($4,500) to Sunderland for his services in 1905 and since then transfer fees steadily climbed until the record figure of £14,000 ($63,000) was reached in 1938 when Arsenal paid Wolverhampton Vanders for Bryn Jones.

William D. Broderick, former Irish half-mile swimming champion, died recently at his Belfast home. He represented Ireland in the 1928 Olympic games at Amsterdam.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 17 — (CP) — If King Solomon were around today, and especially if he lived in Ontario, he'd have his mind on one thing — a little bit of horse racing and particularly the King's Plate.

That, it can be said, is the right goods. Because aside from being a man of great wisdom King Solomon was a man with an eye to fast hossflesh.

Even if he lived in Toronto where, as an "outsider" he might find it hard to be accepted as one of the boys generally, he could find men of kindred likes out among the shedrows of Woodbine where they're talking of Kingarvie and Bluesweep and Palermo as Plate top notchers.

In Solomon's time the thoroughbred probably wasn't quite what it is today but in Old Testament days he is reported to have paid the equivalent of $3,000 each for thoroughbreds he imported from Egypt.

In this connection George (Belleville Ontario Intelligencer) Carver notes that some 3,000 years later Senor Unzue of Argentina paid $265,000 for Tracery, an American thoroughbred. In the thoroughbred breeding business of today where the investment tops $250,000,000 in the United States alone King Solomon's $3,000 would only be a bit of oats money.

The way the thoroughbred business goes — after 200 years or so of ultra-selective breeding — there are only three daddies of them all. Direct descent being traced only through the male line in thoroughbred breeding you can take any thoroughbred you want and eventually get lineage that leads back to Byerly Turk (1689), Darley Arabian (1706) and Godolphin Arabian (1724).

All three were Arabians and, imported to England, they were bred to Barb mares, also imported, and so was established the thoroughbred line and it was a son of Darley Arabian, named Bulle Rock, who came across the sea and got the line going in Virginia.

George Carver remarks too that the British, not in agreement with the Americans, do not recognize Man O' War as a thoroughbred. Strange, but true.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, May 17 (AP)—Richard Burton, British open golf champion who is coming here for a tussle with Byron Nelson, is a native of Darwin, Lancashire, a fact which has P.G.A. drumbeater Tom Sheehan a bit worried... Tom picked up a Lancashireman in Italy during the war and says he still doesn't know what the guy was saying after a half hour of conversation. But maybe Dick has lost some of his accent. He's been a golf internationalist for years and played here in the 135 Ryder Cup matches....Look for Indiana's Earl Mitchell to turn in a 4:10 mile this spring if someone pushes him...Earl won't forget how fast he can run because he's official keeper of the I. U. track team scrapbook and most of the items concern a guy named Mitchell.

Any Takers?

Ever heard of two triple plays in one baseball game?...It happened last Sunday in a tussle between the Forstburg, Md., and Romney, W. Va., clubs of the Bi-State Amateur League and fans there probably will bet a few pence that the feet never has been equalled.

Sweet on Sauer

Charles Black, star Kansas basketball player, could be the best decathlon performer since Jim Bausch according to guys who have seen him pole vault 13 feet, run, jump and toss the weights. But Charles has taken such a liking to coach George Sauer he says he'll play football if he breaks both legs.

New York, May 16 — (AP) — The Cardinals' Eddie Dyer says Cincinnati showed him the best pitching and catching around the National League so far and that Bert Haas played a whale of a game at first against St. Louis ... Frank Stranahan, the Toledo strong man, leaves today to get in some practice with a small golf ball and a big wind before the British amateur starts May 27 ... How come? The Auburb football team has a centre, Sommie Poss from Athena, Ga., home of Georgia University; a quarterback, Charlie Wright, from Starkville, where Mississippi State is located and a tackle, Jim Ball, from South Bend, Ind., home of you know what.

Post-war Problem

A survey made about a year and a half ago showed that only 22 of 125 American College presidents questioned had studied their athletic programs with a view toward post-war changes ... Then a flood of sports - minded veterans descended on the schools and at the same time they found they couldn't build new sports arenas if they wanted to ... The athletic departments, of course, got the headaches.

Say Welsh Expect Some Autonomy Of Administration

London, May 17 — (CP Cable) —Welsh sources said Thursday that early government action is expected to satisfy persistent Welsh demands for some autonomy of administration, with the possibility that a minister to direct government policy affecting Wales may be chosen.

A Welsh parliamentary group of 36 members of different parties has sought a spokesman in the Commons like Scotland's State Secretary whose department has its headquarters in Edinburgh.

In effect, England and Wales are grouped for administrative purposes, but Welsh members argue the transport, agriculture, education, culture and exercise of citizenship could be promoted best within the limits of the Welsh region.

It is unlikely a secretary would be appointed at once with an organization like that of Scotland, but Welshmen said they hope for formal government recognition and a promise of future administrative autonomy.

"THE SPECKLED TROUT"

Based upon a picture painted for Carling's by Shelley Logier

This is one of a series of illustrations on the subject of the Conservation of Canada's natural assets designed to emphasise the fact that the beauties of unspoiled nature that we enjoy today are a precious birthright which we must protect for tomorrow.

"A Beauty"

A swirl beneath the surface, a ripple where a moment before quiet water had mirrored the leaves above . . . And then—an explosion of iridescent beauty as the speckled trout leaps high in search of food.

Since the days of Izaak Walton the joys of angling have captured the hearts of many men, and we in Canada have been endowed with a stock of fighting fish unparalleled in the world. But by our very enthusiasm we have endangered the sport we love. Many waters which formerly teemed with fish are now barren. Many species have vanished entirely from their old haunts.

Our governments, both Provincial and Federal, have instituted restocking programmes, built fish hatcheries, and passed laws for the protection of game fish, but without wholehearted and active public support, mainly in the observance of daily catch limits, these measures will fail.

Conservation is not just a doctrine to be preached to hunters and fishermen. It is a vital part in the continuance of our national economy, and must, of necessity, fail if its measures do not receive the full support of all Canadian citizens.

Boston Red Sox Power Wanes, Startles Major League Fans; Cards Lengthen Lead in Nat.

In Last Five Games Boston Has Dropped Three Contests Due to Poor Hitting

JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Baseball's most puzzling question today: 'What's happened to Boston Red Sox?'

Held to three hits by Jack Kramer in last night's 3-0 defeat by St. Louis Browns, the receding Red Sox stumbled through their fifth consecutive contest with not more than four safeties. Not even Chicago's hitless wonders of 1906 were that anaemic.

In the last five games, of which they've dropped three to reduce their first place American League lead to five games, the once-deadly Red Sox have made 15 hits in 147 times at bat for a team batting average of .102. Compare this with their .297 compiled in their first 24 games?

Before the slump, six regulars were batting over .300, Johnny Pesky and Ted Williams above .400. Now only Williams, Pesky and Dom Dimaggio are .300 hitters.

In handing the Sox their third shutout, Kramer faced only 31 batters and did not allow a runner to reach third until the ninth inning.

In a parade of players including nine pitchers, St. Louis Cardinals edged Boston Braves 9-8 in another arc-light contest to solidify their National League lead. With 33 players participating, 17 for the Braves, the Cards had to go 10 innings to gain the decision.

Twice the Braves came from behind to deadlock the count, but went down in order in the 10th after the Redbirds tallied on a steal of home by pinch runner Joffre Cross. Cross had gone in for catcher Ken O'Dea, who had opened the final frame with a double.

Enos Slaughter of the Cards treated Mort Cooper, a bridegroom of a few hours most harshly by clubbing him for a pair of homers, each with a man on base.

Ken Burkhart, fourth of five Card hurlers, was the winner, while Jim Konstanty, last of four Boston flingers, was the loser. The victory gave the Redbirds a half-game advantage over the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers.

Rain washed out the rest of the major league schedule.

Woodbine Track Will be Heavy For the Opening

Toronto, May 17 (CP)—The weather and the entries were immediate concerns today as everything was set for the opening of the Canadian racing season at Woodbine Saturday, featured by the running of the King's Plate Trial which will give a definite line on probable winner for the 87th running of the King's Plate itself a week hence.

A downpour of rain in the Toronto area lasted practically 24 hours but clearing skies were promised today. It appeared likely the track would be heavy, or slow, unless bright sunshine rules today and tomorrow.

The trial will be run in two sections over the six furlong route and the best of runners will go for the King's 50 Guineas and $10,000 added by the Ontario Jockey Club over the mile and an eighth distance in the Plate.

The crowds and the horses and the trainers and the stable-workers were all set, and there'll be no scarcity of riders. A total of 58 jockeys have secured licences for the meeting and a few more are expected up from United States tracks before the meeting opens. Of the 58 riders, 17 are apprentice jockeys.

Jumping Players Would be Welcomed Back by League

(By The Canadian Press)

On arrival in Mexico City yesterday for a "visit" with President Jorge Pasquel of the Mexican Baseball League, Herman (Babe) Ruth predicted the jumping players would be welcomed back by Major League clubs with open arms. The former home-run king recalled that the Majors had reinstated players after the folding of the old Federal League 30 years ago. He was one who had turned down a $200,000 offer to jump the organized baseball because he had been told he would be barred for life.

Ruth said he had not been offered a post with the American circuit and planned to return to New York May 28.

Davis Cup specialists of the United States are looking with some alarm toward Felicisimo Ampon who will lead the Philippine team against the American cuppers at St. Louis in June. In the 1939 competitions Ampon extended Bobby Riggs to four sets and later forced Jack Bromwich and Adrian Quist of Australia into extra sets before bowing out.

Pitcher John Wright, one of the two colored players signed by Brooklyn Dodgers for Montreal Royals, was released on option yesterday to Three Rivers in the Canadian-American League. Second-baseman Jackie Robinson has been joined by pitcher Roy Partlow, colored hurler from Philadelphia, in the Montreal squad.

The $50,000 Western Grand Pace, Saturday's closing feature of the harness meet at Santa Anita Park, yesterday drew the entry of 22 horses including Blue Again from Windsor., and Merry England from Chatham, Ont.

Hamilton Wildcats and Ottawa Trojans, both of the senior O.R.F.U., yesterday announced plans for home-and-home exhibition games to wind up their spring training season. The match in Ottawa is scheduled May 31 with the return fixture at Hamilton June 5.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Lee Oma, American heavyweight, whose name incidentally rhymes with "aroma" has fired the first ringside salvo anent the Bruce Woodcock-Tami Mauriello fight scheduled tonight (no foolin') at Madison Square Gardens. According to Oma, if Woodcook were an American heavyweight he wouldn't be able to sell peanuts to Mike Jacobs' Gardens patrons. "He's merely a good prospect" remarks Oma, in what may be sour-grapish tones.

* * *

"Mauriello's got too much experience and drive for him," goes on the pugilistic "expert". "Why, (fancy this) when you knock Tami down, he gets up and wins the round. I'd say Al. Hoosman could lick Woodcock."

* * *

That's two and one-half strikes on the bloomin' Britisher who has won all his 25 starts over 'ome, 24 of them by the knockout system.

* * *

When Jack Dempsey the old Manassa Mauler was here last year refereeing a wrestling match, he removed a twenty-five dollar benny from his thinning locks, and in answer to a query remarked with his eyes squinting closer than usual: "Louis will beat Conn next summer." That was all for the moment, but in a recent issue of Cosmopolitan, Dempsey again calls the champion to repeat, but in a shorter time than the last fight.

* * *

"In their last set-to," writes Dempsey," Louis, after the first six rounds, fought Conn's kind of fight, which of course was a great advantage for Billy the Kid. It was only in that fateful thirteenth that Joe turned on the heat and fought his own kind of battle.

Besides boxing skill and ring savvy, the challenger must have something more—a punch, and the stamina to withstand the heavy blows Louis will throw at him."

* * *

Today Louis hasn't got all the money he needs; the incentive must be there to win, as strong as before he gained the title.

Conn has the style that figures to give Louis trouble—fast, clever, shifty boxing. And Billy professes unbounded confidence in his ability to turn the tables on Joe.

But I also note Louis, never one to brag, has said he is certain he can repeat over Conn, and in quicker time than he did before. From the time there was talk of a return match, Louis expressed willingness — even eagerness to meet Conn again. He has repeated frequently that Billy Conn would get first crack at his title when he returned to the ring after his hitch in the Army.

No other inference can be drawn from this except that Joe Louis considers the Pittsburgh Adonis a Christmas package all done up and ready to be opened.

* * *

"It's an old ring axiom that every fighter reaches his peak in one battle, and after that he begins to slip. I hit my peak in my fight with Jess Willard at Toledo that hot Fourth of July afternoon in 1919, when I won the championship. Seven years later I lost it."

* * *

"Louis, I believe was at his pinnacle of perfection the night he annihilated Max Schmeling in their second fight, knocking the German silly in the Yankee Stadium on June 22, 1938, eight years ago.

I also believe that Conn hit his peak against Louis. That was five years ago.

Now, according to all this arithmetic, it would seem that Joe is about ready to be taken, while Conn still has a few years to go. But there are other things to consider.

* * *

I do not think Joe Louis's training has been hampered by the absence of his old manager, Jack Blackburn. He has Mannie Seamon, who assisted Blackburn in training Louis in several of the champion's later fights, and Mannie is an excellent man at his job. Mannie trained Benny Leonard for all his important bouts leading up to the lightweight championship and until Benny retired, an undefeated champion. Mannie is capable of doing every bit as good if not a better job than old "Chappie" Blackburn — though Blackburn was a master teacher of boxing.

* * *

"Before their last fight I said I believed Conn had a chance to beat Louis, but that it was a remote one. Conn possessed the speed and skill to outpoint the champion in fifteen rounds, but I didn't believe he had the strength, stamina and punch to turn the trick. Billy did a grand job until he ran out of gas. And he didn't have the punch to finish the Bomber. This time, Billy the Kid can't afford to make any mistake. He must fight a perfect fight, or Joe will tag him again.

* * *

"The champion has told me that this time he intends to carry the fight to his man from the start. "I've got to win quickly," he said.

* * *

When he was "getting in condition to get into condition" last winter, Conn confided to friends his intention to sneak over a couple of real battles in secret. Lee Savold, a thirty-year-old six-footer and a pretty rugged heavyweight, who battled Billy in the star bout Madison Square Garden November 29, 1941, and who has been pretty active since, was the Pittsburgher's choice as an opponent. Conn planned to pay Savold thirty thousand dollars for the two tests. Whether Billy ever did meet Savold, I can't say.

* * *

"I think the one great advantage Conn has in his favor is his comparative youth — that three years and five months which Louis will have to spot him. But he'll need that youth. And then some.

* * *

"Officially Conn weighed 176 pounds to Joe's 199½ for their first bout, although there are tales that Billy actually weighed only a fraction over 169 pounds.

* * *

No matter what Billy weighed then, this time he will be about 180 pounds, and that's big enough to lick any heavyweight that ever lived. But it's not the size of the package, it's what's in it.

And I can't get away from the idea that Joseph Louis Barrow will be the one full of dynamite in the Yankee Stadium ring. So I look for a repeat performance which will end sooner than the first show.

* * *

"TIMBER-R-R-R"

If Wladyslaw Talun, the Pestiferous Pole and Frederick Von Schacht, the Milwaukee Mastodon, were laid end to end, they would cover approximately thirteen feet which is sufficient to bridge the Moira River at points. Tonight the elongated Behemoths meet in a battle of the giants for the tent-pole championship of the Hume Arena. Both the Pole and Von Schact are past masters in the art of villainous tactics, and anything will go, including the referee. There should be plenty of excitement, not to mention roughhouse, and mayhem. Patrons with stilts will be requested to leave their gear at the front office. The Sharpe brothers, six foot six Apollos of the ring, handsome beggars, they be, will be here in person and will take on Jan Gotch and Bunny Dunlop respectively. Looks like a fine evening's entertainment, wot?

* * *

Rain put an effective quietus on the baseball situation here last night, and the million dollar drops caused postponement of the Stewart-Warner, RCAF tilt and the Border Loop opener in Kingston between the Ponies and Odgensburg. Weather and grounds permitting, the Ponies game scheduled for tonight at six will go on. Incidentally, Bobby Bunton, junior pitcher here, has been invited to try out with the Ponies.

BRUCE WOODCOCK IS UNDERDOG IN THE BETTING

British Boxer Lightly Regarded by Boys in the Know in New York

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, May 17 — (CP) — If odds ride with the underdog, Bruce Woodcock could be headed for a shot at the world's heavyweight boxing championship. The slugging Yorkshireman, who holds the British Empire heavyweight title, is a five-to-13 shot for his 10 round battle tonight at Madison Square Garden against Tami Mauriello of the Bronx.

Although Woodcock is lightly regarded by those who have seen him in training at Bear Mountain, N.Y., along Jacobs' Beach the word is that a victory for the Briton could mean a match with the winner of the Joe Louis - Billy Conn heavyweight tilt at Yankee Stadium June 19.

Bruce will weigh about 187 and Mauriello about 195 when they climb into the ring before a near-capacity crowd of 16,000 which is expected to pay in $100,000 at a $20 ringside top.

The odds are that the bout won't go the limit as both Woodcock and his opponent are punchers and lack defence. Woodcock has a record of 24 knockouts in 25 professional fights and he won 397 of his 400 battles as an amateur.

Mauriello, a journeyman fighter who has met such opponents as Lee Oma and Bob Pastor, has rattled off 50 kayoes in 76 pro starts — the last 10 in a row. Neither fighter has ever been knocked out.

Woodcock won his Empire crown from Jack London last July 17. His best punch is a short right to the body following up a left jab.

On the whole, the fight experts are having a hard job calling the shots because few have seen Woodcock in action and Mauriello is as unpredictable as the weather.

Oshawa Fighters Win Boxing Titles

Toronto, May 17. (CP)—Eight new Ontario amateur boxing champions were crowned last night in the finals of the provincial championships at the Central Y.M.C.A.—four from Toronto and four from out-of-town.

Henry George of Port Colborne, defeated Tiny Ainsworth of Oshawa in the heavyweight final, althought outweighed by 25 pounds.

Oshawa fighters however took two titles. Bobby McPhee, 112-pound bantam from Oshawa, won the decision over Alfred Geehie of Toronto, in the speediest scrap of the night. Bruce Lidster of Oshawa showed superior ringcraft to score a technical knockout over Glen Ray of Sault Ste. Marie in the 118-pound class.

Bob Street, five-footer from St. Catharines, fighting at 175 pounds, gained the decision over six-foot George Murray of Toronto at 175 pounds.

Other results:

160 pounds: Bruce Richardson, Toronto, defeated Eddie George, Kitchener.

147 pounds: Mike Eizerman, Toronto, won technical knockout over Bruce Unroe, Toronto.

126 pounds: Solly Bonaparte, Toronto, defeated Joe McPhee, Oshawa.

JACK ROBINSON IS EXPERT BASE STEALER, HITTER

Colored Boy With Montreal Royals Making Good in Organized Ball

(By The Associated Press)

Jackie Robinson isn't breaking any International League fences despite his .326 batting average but the speedy Montreal Royals' infielder is a whiz on the base paths.

The 26-year-old former football star has swiped 13 bases and scored 26 runs. In the entire league, only teammates Red Durrett and Marv Rackley possess higher figures. Durrett has tallied 28 markers and "Rickerty" Rackley has stolen 16 bases.

It's the way Robinson runs the sacks that drives the opposition into fits of frenzy. He can stop and start with unbelievable suddenness, a trait that is a carry-over from his football and basketball experiences.

Clay Hopper, Robbie's manager, recalls an exhibition contest at Daytona Beach when Robinson was trapped between first and second with all of the opposition attempting to run him down. The fleet infielder would run up at full speed to an opponent and stop dead before reaching him and then reverse his tracks. He finally made second.

In the field, Robinson is proving a better second sacker than was anticipated. Teaming up with Stan Breard, sold to San Diego of the Pacific Coast League last night, and Al Campanis, Robinson has figured in many of the 34 double plays the Royals have reeled off.

Robinson has collected 30 hits in 92 trips to the plate including a homer, triple and four doubles. A number of Robinson's blows have been of the infield variety and his fleetness of foot has caused opposing infielders to hurry their throws, and commit errors.

Rain caused the postponement yesterday of scheduled games between Newark at Syracuse, Baltimore at Toronto and Buffalo at Rochester. Jersey City and Montreal were not scheduled.

ORILLIA TERRIERS WIN

Orillia, Ont., May 17 — (CP)— The Orillia Terriers made their local debut in the new Ontario senior lacrosse season a winning start with a close 13-12 victory over Hamilton Tigers last night.

A crowd of 1,200 saw the Tigers apparently sure winners until rover Mike Cunningham of Orillia went on a scoring rampage that netted three goals, the last with only 25 seconds of play remaining.

INFIELDER SOLD

Detroit, May 17 — (AP)—Sale of Bill Hitchcock, Detroit Tiger utility infielder, to Washington Senators was announced today by the Detroit American League club. The price was not disclosed.

ATTENDANCE WAY UP

Chicago, May 17 — (AP) — Attendance in the first month of play in the American League, unofficial figures disclosed today, was near 1,800,000, a gain of 1,000,000 over the turnout in the eight cities in a comparable period last season when the loop set its all-time paid attendance mark with 5,580,420.

LESSON NO. 989
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When partner leads a deuce, he has a good excuse. That lead of his unfolds how many cards he holds. It also tells you the kind and number of cards in that suit held by each of the others.

The lead rule is: Follow the order of choice in tops, longies, shorts; don't lead a suit bid by opponents; against a suit contract, don't lead away from an ace or a king.

A small card lead is assumed to be the fourth best in that suit. Therefore, the leader of a deuce tells you he has exactly three cards higher in that suit.

There are no cards lower than a deuce. So, the leader must have started with exactly four cards. Looking at dummy and your own cards, you know exactly how many in that suit are held by each player.

Against a suit contract, his lead shows he has neither the ace nor the king. Of these two high cards, what you do not see in dummy and your own hand must be in the hidden declarer's hand.

See the hearts in the four hands as shown here:

NORTH
WEST EAST
♥J 8 6 2 ♥Q 9 5 4
SOUTH

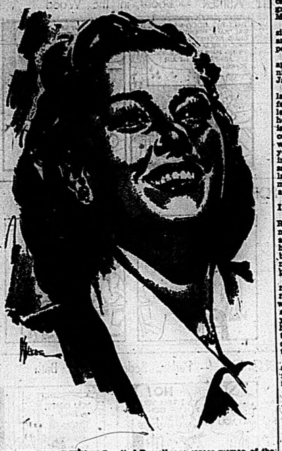
Your partner in the west starts with an opening lead of heart deuce. Holding the east hand, how much information can you dig out from the lead of that innocent little deucy?

Having led from a long suit, partner says he has no honor top. So, he has no suit with an ace alone, or ace with one more card, or A K, K Q J, K Q 10, Q J 10, Q J 9, J 10 9, J 10 8, 10 9 8, 10 9 7.

He has neither the ace nor king of hearts. Nor has dummy or your own hand. So, both the ace and king are in the south declarer's hand.

Partner has exactly four; dummy three; you four. South can have no more than two. He must hold A K of hearts alone. Partner must have started with J 8 6 2. Because you can see all the others.

Wrap it up in cellophane.



AT THE McCARTHY — Rosalind Russell, ace career woman of the screen, this time plays a brilliant psychiatrist in Columbia Pictures' new comedy, "She Wouldn't Say Yes," current at the McCarthy Theatre. Lee Bowman is co-starred with Adele Jergens and Charles Winninger are seen in important supporting roles.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 17 — (AP) — Charles Boyer is getting ready for his role of Ravic in "Arch of Triumph." In fact, he has already started training on Calvados.

The main character in the Erich Maria Remarque best-selling novel was a constant drinker of calvados — French applejack. Although he rarely indulges, Boyer has been taking a nip of the stuff now and then, just to get in the mood.

Many readers of the novel have expressed the belief that Ravic is not ideally suited for Boyer, among them the actor himself. "But Remarque wanted me to do the role and I agreed, if certain changes were made," he told me. The changes:

1. Ravic will be a Viennese, not a German.
2. He will not drink so darn much calvados.

"Otherwise the character is the same age and size as I am," he said.

Girls, you'll be simply thrilled by Walter Florell's new hats. I guess! The designer gave me a preview before his big show next week and no doubt the hats are pretty, but I was more interested in the blond model who would look good with or without a hat.

Florell, a man who wears uncontrolled hair, a wide metal bracelet and wedgies, said he created his 115 new lids in three weeks. "I'm a designing rabbit," he explained. Most expensive of the bunch is a white mink thing for which some husband may pay $500.

The designer displayed several of the hats, including black question mark, a high whatchamacallit with black fur doodads for Carole Landis. "That's a cheap one—$65," said Florell, who once sold a chinchilla hat with matching gloves to the Duchess of Windsor for $900.

Civilization marches on!

AT THE BELLE

If you have any preconceived ideas about Screen Star Ray Milland prepare to shed them now. He's not the sort of fellow that you think he is.

Until Paramount presented him to movie-goers in "The Lost Weekend" as a stubble-chinned drunk given to stealing the hard-earned wages of cleaning women, he has been pictured on the screen as a suave, charming, happy-go-lucky lad. He was supposed to breeze through pictures, the faster the better, because that way he could get back to his serious business of having fun.

"That", laughs Milland, "is a baseless canard, a libel. I wish it were true, though but, unhappily, it isn't. Actually I sweat through every role. Some actors can fly through a part with the greatest of ease. Not little Ray Milland."

As to being "little", he stands six feet two inches in his socks and weighs a hard, lean 180-pounds.

Nor is he the lovable souse he appears to be in the award-winning picturization of Charles Jackson's book.

To be absolutely truthful, Milland is inclined to be moody and fellow workers in films have learned to leave him alone when he's that way. Mostly, though, he is as bright and cheerful as they come, the life of the party and always anxious to help out any young player who happens to be in a picture with him. Just the same, he's a "worrier," particularly about his career, but admits that he has nothing to worry about.

"I'm a Welshman," he said, "and I guess that explains it."

Born in Neath, his real name is Reginald Truscott-Jones, not Raymond Millane, nor Jack Millane, although both of these names have been given to him in error by movie writers. His uncle's name was Millane, which explains things.

He was raised on his uncle's ranch in Wales. (Yes, they have real ranches in Wales, complete with cowboys) and there he learned to ride. When he was still a youngster he joined the Household Cavalry, the swank regiment that guards the King of England on such ceremonial occasions as the opening of parliament.

"I was never an officer," he said, "despite stories to that effect. I was an ordinary trooper, not even a corporal."

For two straight years, 1927 and 1928, young Truscott-Jones won the rifle championship of the British Army. It was his reputation as a crack shot that won him his first acting role, shooting a mirror out of an actress' hand. He has been a movie actor ever since.

He is a big fellow, stands six feet two inches in his socks and weights a lean 180 pounds. He was educated at King's College, Cambridge, and studied engineering at the University of Wales. He is an omnivorous reader, prizes one of the finest collections of guns in the United States, is an expert on skis and is devoted to his wife, Muriel, and his five-year-old son, Danny.

When he's through with acting, Milland would like to be a motion picture director.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

J. R. MacNicol (PC-Toronto Davenport) expressed criticism of the requirement that a British subject coming to Canada would have to spend five years in the Dominion before becoming a Canadian and said this would hamper immigration from the British Isles.

Start Payments Next Month.

After the House opened, Trade Minister MacKinnon said the Canadian wheat board was confident it would be able to begin payment next month of 1943 wheat participation certificates, but he could not indicate the amount to be paid per bushel.

Finance Minister Ilsley said the Canadian government will continue to co-operate with the governments of the United Kingdom and the United States in the supplying of food to keep starvation at a minimum in Europe and Asia.

In the Senate, debate on a bill to change the name of Dominion Day — July 1 — to Canada Day continued. Senator G. G. McGeer (L-British Columbia) suggested representatives of the Senate and Commons get together during the weekend to try to work out a compromise on the bill.

Senator Vincent Dupuis (L-Quebec) and Sir Thomas Chapais (PC-Quebec) supported the bill, but Sir Thomas said he would like to see July 1 known as Confederation Day. Senator Iva C. Fallis (PC-Ontario) opposed the bill.

MOONHOLLOW

By Maurice Dekobra and Jessie Ernst

Chapter 2

"I never mentioned all this because I didn't want to, Gordon," she said. "You were so real, so different in being honest. And you married a girl, Gordon, because you loved her. All the gaudy trappings didn't mean anything then - and they won't now. Anyway - what are these things worth compared to the value of the precious things you have in your heart and mind? Now come along - look at your new home."

She arose and pointed out the windows to the twilight shadowed land. "Moonhollow - Moonlight and evergreens and Long Island sound always grumbling to our sandy beach. What's it say Gordon? You know the answer."

"Forever and ever," he answered, "ever and forever."

She smiled, and lowered her eyes. Then she stood gazing out the window, hands thrust in the slashed green pockets of her back-buttoned dress; legs outstretched in the flared skirt. "Simple little things." She caught his approving eyes. "Do you like me better than before? In Sun Valley?"

"I don't know yet," he answered.

She took his arm, pirouetted him. "I've changed some of the things in this room. It's finished there - - by the prints. Next I'll start working on this side, by the mantel." He swung toward it, turning her with him until they both came face to face with the face in the portrait; then he turned toward Audrey. Her eyes had lost their sparkle — taken on a far-away look; her jaws were tightening.

"Yes," she added, "yes - there's still more to be done - heaps to shift and alter." She glanced again at the portrait, then disengaged her arm from Gordon's and walked away from him. "Now over there - I think we could get a Sheraton side table, maybe a kidney one, and on it we'll have a little gallery dripping with roses from the cutting garden or the hothouse. I'll tell Oliver about it."

Her voice had become more matter of fact, cooler. She was standing away from him now, gesturing, talking quickly, with words of little import, as though she had been disturbed - by what? Gordon saw her steal another quick glance at the portrait - then turn away with, "Come along, Gordon; this isn't the only room in Moohollow - let's go."

Up the gleaming staircase to a broad light hall done in pearl white, bas relief. "This is the door. Your suite." He smiled at her, put an arm below her capable shoulders. "Audrey - I couldn't carry you across a threshold before. Let me do it now." After a momentary protest she was in his arms. He pushed the door with his foot - carried her inside and kissed her gently in the darkness. "Wait, I'll get the lights," she whispered.

"Let it stay dark, I like it more."

But she flashed the lights on to show the new master his bedroom; gold and blue with huge windows glistening beneath draperies. "I hope you like it, Gordon. There may be one or two changes; color, furniture, we'll take care of it." There were rows of leather-bound books. He went closer to them..."Decline of the West" - "Church vs. State." "The Higher Necromancy." "Securities Exchange Fallacies."

"That's an odd crew," he commented. "Did you buy them for me?"

"No. No. These are Clifford's books. You can put in your own books if you want," she answered. "I didn't choose these." Then quickly, "See this? A radio and phonograph in this cabinet. And here's the control box next to the bed."

She opened one of the countless drawers in the old "bachelor" chest. "And when you want to write another poem - or essay - come over here." She pulled him to a Sheraton desk inlaid with boxwood and satinwood with six tapering supports in dark mahogany. On it were two staffordshire pottery figures of the vestal virgins in blue robes, holding urns for oils and wicks. And best of all - an inkstand with four bottles, and a double silver tray for the pens. He fingered one lovingly. "George Third. Maybe Thackeray and Browning and Byron wrote with that pen you're holding. A better man couldn't hold it. Clifford got it in a Saville Street Shop."

"Clifford? Clifford who?"

"Morley. My ex-husband - oh, darling. Of course you wouldn't know." She went on, rapidly explaining how Clifford had an excellent taste in books and bric - a -brac. Gordon asked whether the excellent taste went to other things. "Why I don't know. What do you think?" She evaded "I hope so for your sake."

"I wonder," mused Gordon, "I wonder whether she is completely indifferent to these things of his? I'm not." And it was that thought that kept gnawing at him through his first night at Moonhollow - a sleepless night - that should have been deep and peaceful because of their love-making before the moon had vanished.

When the sun's rays touched his eyes, he got up, shaved and showered in a crystal and silver bathroom - touching many a monogrammed "C.M." and was about to slip quietly out of the house when he walked in the dark against a taboret, sending it and a vase crashing to the foor. He heard quick footsteps from within and a hard quick voice, "Stop - who's there?" Then the door opened and Oliver hurried to him - a gun gripped in his putty-colored hand, his other hand clutching his robe. "Oh, it's you! I thought it might be a prowler."

Gordon flared. "I got up. Sometimes I work early. Do you mind?"

"No sir - of course not - anything you wish to do...Nothing's ready though. You see, Mr. Morley always slept late." Oliver turned with that.

"I'm going for a walk. Mrs. Blake and I will breakfast when she is ready. Did you hear?"

Oliver turned at the farther door.

"Yes sir. Madam gave me orders to give you whatever help I can."

With that, he disappeared.

Gordon headed eastward toward the sun that appeared like - burning ship on Long Island Sound. He strolled through the garden. The formal beds were set against a background of natural woodland and along a gentle slope. Beyond, through the arch of a wisteria arbor, Gordon saw a vegetable garden. Tall hibiscus hedges served as windbreaks. There were annuals, marigolds and zinnias adding their many hues to the color pattern. Outside the formal garden were more flowers equally well set off with shrubs and evergreens. The dahlias beside the front entrance had grown unusually tall to reach toward the sun on the southeasterly exposure. Nasturtiums trailed from the wall - a trencher table was there, with benches, and four linden trees formed a canopy. Roses climbed from each end of the pergola.

Gordon passed there, thinking, "What a place for the two of us!" Then he closed his eyes and listened to the sound singing, "Forever and ever, ever and forever."

From the house came a long melodious, "Halloo there, Gordon!" She was breathless when she got to him for a good morning kiss.

"Good to see you up. Air's swell - puts a spike in a fellow."

"I thought I needed it this morning. I never used to bounce out of bed to meet Mr. Sun. But Oliver told me there was a man hanging about the grounds."

"I like to rise early and shine. And I'll keep doing it. Now come along, woman."

She wore a rust-colored dress, with buttoned down pockets — shallow yoke giving her that trim look. She chatted about luncheon. Would it be mushroom caps - crisped sausages - and cubettes!

"For our guests," she explained, "You'll like them. They'll be here later; old friends. I think I ought to give them my strawberry meringue glace."

Gordon walked silently by her side, pleased with the feminine trills as she pointed out her garden. "I love it, Gordon. Look, and it's all ours." Her rock garden was artful with pastel shades except for tiny grace notes of crimson phlox and alyssum blended in a yellow and lavender scheme amoung mountain and dwarf plants. The garden looked as though created by a stream or glacier. There were rocks of intriguing form with well-rounded edges; stones with moss on them.

Audrey pointed excitedly to left and right, "My perennials, pink cushions, anemones and phlox. Look at that shiny green of those yew trees. See the color of the spectabilis and dogwood? And along that wall and walk, they're evergreen bittersweet and trumpet creeper. They're grand for covering up sore spots. Look!" She held up the creeper. Both followed it to the wall where the creeper had wound about a sundial, half hiding it.

"See how it covers up?" she asked. "You'd almost think the sundial weren't here. It's been covered for months." She lifted the creeper off the dial, adding, "I made this too. Part of it."

"Morley help you?" he asked. "Yes," she said haltingly, "We made it from sheet lead. This is rectangular, but you can cut it any shape because it doesn't matter where the edge cuts across the hour lines. Main thing is that the shadow caster stands perpendicular to the dial. Look closer."

He did; looked at the hour signs and the inscription; rubbed off mould and read, "Point only to moments of ecstasy for her and for me." He repeated it, added, "That's strange. That's original. Isn't it?"

She nodded her head. "Yes, he wrote well but never for publication."

They left the garden for the stables, Audrey speaking little, Gordon hoping her silence was due only to the fatigue of the walk. He attempted to tittilate her with pleasantries, a memoir, a phrase, swinging his walking stick gaily, telling her about college, and his dreams when he was young and 20, a decade before. He told her of his studies and the sports he liked, swimming, skiing, ice-skating. He told her how he got the scar over his eye - at a sit-down strike in a Detroit plant where he'd gone - just before the trip to Sun Valley.

A slavering growl shattered his narrative, and at the turn of the path he saw a wolfhound, brown and white, lean jaws flecked with foam. It stopped then sprang at Gordon.

"Down, Boris, down!" Audrey ordered.

The hound's anger was deep in its throat. Gordon's rough walking stick was raised; he shoved it between the hounds jaws, twisted it quickly. The hound turned on its back, went down, Gordon on top of it, his arm in a steel grip around its throat. A stablehand ran up, quirt and muzzle in hand and in a minute, the dog was bound.

"Sorry Ma'm," fumbled the wiry hand, "he broke away mhen he heard you. Can't do nothing with him lately." The perspiring helper pushed the dog between his legs. "He seems to miss Mr. Morley more and more."

"Please be more careful of Boris, Mike," she said. "This is Mr. Blake. I wanted him to see the horses and dogs."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was opening her mail at breakfist, saying to pop, Well, here's an answer from the Billows Hotel at Magenta Beach.

An anser to what, for Peet sake? pop said, and ma said, Why, I told you I was going to write them to reserve us their most exclusive sweet of rooms for the intire month of August, just for the personal sattisfaction of getting a reply to the general effect that they're extreemly sorry and so forth and so on. Because naturelly everybody knows they're absilutely filled up to dubble capacity for the remainder of the season, so I thought we could injoy many quiet chuckles over their letter while we're staying home economizing this summer, she said.

What larks, pop said, and ma opened the letter, saying, Oh my goodness, low and behold, they're actually reserving a sweet for us. It seems they had an unexpected cancellation. I wont even tell you the rates they quote, she said.

I'm not even intristed, pop said, and ma said, Oh dear, now I hardly knowwhat to do.

I'll tell you precisely, pop said. Write and cancel that cancellation as quickly as you can get to a postage stamp, he said, and ma said, But William, do you think it would be safe?

A telegram might be safer, pop said, and ma said, I dont mean that, I mean supposing they sue us? They'd probably lose the suit, naturelly, but even so you know what it costs to get mixed up with lawyers, even in self defense. What I means is, in that case it might be cheeper to simply change the reservation from a sweet for a month to a small room at their minimum rate for a few days or perhaps only a week end, just to show our good faith in case by one chance in a million they get in inexpensive cancellation. What do you think, William? she said.

I think it's a women's werld, pop said.

Meaning go ahead if she wanted to.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, May 17 —(AP)— Selective demand continued to prop parts of today's stock market although many leaders were neglected in moderately lower ground.

Canadian Pacific had a loss of 1-8 at 18 1-2, Distillers Seagram was off 3-8 at 112 1-8, Dome Mines was plus 1-4 at 24, International Nickel moved up 3-8 at 39 5-8. Hiram Walker, down at 135, registered the only large change.

Failure Percentage Far Less Among Veteran Students

Toronto, May 17 (CP)—The percentage of failures among veterans attending the University of Toronto is less than half what it as among students taking the same courses during the war, Dr Sidney E. Smith, President of the university, said today.

"That's definitely in line with our experience," he said, commenting on a statement by Dr. A. E. Kerr of Dalhousie University Halifax, that marks of veterans are "considerably higher" than those of non-veterans.

Failures among 128 veterans taking applied science and engineering last summer was five per cent, he said, compared to 25 to 30 per cent failures among non-veterans.

WHITE RAJAH RETURNS TO SARAWAK

Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, the White Rajah of Sarawak, recently returned to his 50,000 square mile realm to see how his 500,000 subjects felt about his recently announced intention of ceding the empire to the British crown. Absent since 1942, when the country was invaded by the Japs, the arrival of the Rajah and Ranee was the occasion for much rejoicing among the natives. Sir Charles and Lady Brooke are shown with two Dayak chiefs who were enthusiastic in their welcome, coming from their jungle homes to lead the welcome home celebration.

MIDDLE-OF-ROAD CATHOLIC PARTY WINS ELECTION

Labor Prime Minister, William Schermerhorn, Resigns Following Defeat

Amsterdam, May 18 (CP)—The government of William Schermerhorn, Labor Prime Minister, resigned today following yesterday's election defeat. Queen Wilhelmina is considering the resignation and has asked the ministers to continue at their posts for the time being.

The Labor Party was defeated narrowly by the middle-of-the-road Catholic Party which gained 30.8 per cent of the more than 4,750,000 votes cast.

The Catholics received 1,466,519 votes and won 32 of the 100 seats in parliament, compared with 1,347,664 votes and 29 seats for the Labor forces.

The Labor total of 28.3 per cent was disheartening to followers of William Schermerhorn, Labor Prime Minister, who had expected to win between 35 and 37 seats.

Calvinists won 13 seats, Communists 10, Protestants (Christian Historian Party)eight, Conservatives (Party of Freedom) six, and the Protestant Union two.

First Election since '37

The balloting was the first general election here since 1937. Some districts reported voting difficulties because of incomplete records, and thousands of persons were informed their names were not on the registry lists.

The Communist Party, which polled only 3.35 per cent of the 1937 total, received 502,935 ballots yesterday, or 10.57 per cent. Thirty per cent of the Amsterdam and 18.3 per cent of the Rotterdam votes were Communist.

There was some speculation that the middle-of-the-road plurality might result in a proposal for a government of national unity parties, headed by Dr. Carl Romme, Catholic leader.

Lebanese Govt. Resigns Office

Beirut, May 18. (CP)—The Lebanese government of Sami Solh has resigned, it was learned today. The move was expected following the resignation yesterday of two ministers.

In a statement, Premier Sami Solh referred to the opposition and manoeuvres against his government inside and outside the House.

The ministers who resigned yesterday — Saadi Munla, Home Minister, and Hamed El Assad, National Defence Minister—did so at the request of their party, the Independence Party.

The Cabinet had been reorganized, for the second time in a month, 17 days ago.

Weather Forecast

Synopsis: Low pressure area centred in southern Michigan is moving north-northeast preceded by light rain over southwestern Ontario which will probably move into Northern Ontario during the day. Warm humid weather still prevails in the southeastern United States but relatively cool and cloudy weather dominates all the rest of United States and Canada.

Crown Says Quartet Will Face Other Charges Armed Robbery

Toronto, May 1. (CP)—Neither the Crown nor the defence is expected to appeal the manslaughter verdict and sentences of 15 to 20 years imposed yesterday on four youths convicted in the slaying of Meyer Tobias, dress shop proprietor.

The four young prisoners charged with murder in an abortive hold-up at Tobias' North Toronto store on Dec. 26 had been convicted of manslaughter —not murder—Thursday night, and yesterday they were sentenced. Twenty years was the penalty for William Mullen, 20, and Edward Martin, 19, the two who carried guns into the store. Fifteen years was the penalty for Howard Urquhart, 19, who waited outside in a stolen car, and for Donald Warner, 17, who entered the dress shop unarmed.

Crown Prosecutor W. O. Gibson said last night that now the murder charge has been disposed of the four would be tried on charges of armed robbery arising from previous holdups. There are four such charges against Martin; three against Warner; two against Urquhart and one against Mullen. No date has been set yet for these trials.

The prisoners have thirty days in which to appeal against either the sentence or the conviction, or both. Indications however were that their efforts now would be bent to defending themselves against the pending armed robbery charges. Uruqhart's mother had suggested in an interview that a public subscription be raised to finance an appeal, but her son's lawyer, Al O'Marra, said he would advise against an appeal.

So far as the Crown is concerned Deputy-Attorney-General Cecil Snyder said that the case would be discussed as a matter of course when Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell returns to Toronto early next week. But Mr. Snyder had nothing to say about any Crown appeal. He pointed out the department made every effort to obtain a fair trial for the accused and he said that the department is paying full counsel fees in three of the cases and perhaps a portion of the fourth defence counsel's fees. Ontario has paid counsel fees in nearly all important murder cases in recent years when supplied with proof that accused were without funds.

BIRDS TAKE MAIL

Tillsonburg, May 18 —(CP)— Mailmen on rural routes long have been accustomed to birds making their nests in the mail boxes. But when the birds start flying out the mail, that's too much. John Carruthers, mail contractor in this district, was approaching one rural box today when a starling flew out with a letter in its beak. He frightened the bird which dropped the letter.

Herbie, Colorful Little Character Of Canadian Army, Goes Literary

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 18 — (CP) — They gathered Herbie from the pubs of Aldershot, the battered villages of Italy and the battlefields of Europe, put him together in a 192-page book.

Herbie, the colorful little character voted Canada's man of the year by Canadian troops in Italy just two years ago, had gone literary. But in a way those fighting gents will understand.

Just about everyone overseas knew Herbie. Brainchild of cartoonist William (Bing) Coughlin, he grew to lusty manhood on the pages of the Maple Leaf, Canadian Army daily. He was the army's most famous private, was, indeed, the Canadian Army.

The book, just published, (Thomas Nelson and Sons) will bring a bit of nostalgia to many a serviceman. Any Canadian who served overseas probably can find a counterpart in the nearly 200 of Bing's best cartoons.

Running through the book are some 25,000 words of colorful, gusty text by Douglas MacFarlane, the Major who put out the Maple Leaf in Italy and Northwest Europe until he tangled with the "brass" in a couple of fighting editorials over Canada's repatriation system.

Both Bing and MacFarlane were awarded the O.B.E. for their services. Both knew the problems and tricks of hundreds of guys like Herbie.

MacFarlane explains that to Herbie, anyone of a higher rank than private was a public menace, that, in short, "the army was hell."

"But in his own rebellious, civilian way, Herbie was known to like it at times.

"He didn't know exactly what he was fighting for besides to keep alive. He knew it had something to do with the four freedoms, but he — never could remember more than three.

"He had as good a time as the army would allow, and a much better time when he was breaking it .. he was brave .. he was scared a pale, sickly green at times.

"He was a gentleman in the parlor, a bum in the backyard."

Perhaps one of the better cartoons for a straight "belly-laff" is that in which filbert-nosed Herbie, guarded by a hated provost, is being told by a florid fellow of high rank that "in future, young man, you'll refer to them as Colonel So-and-So, or Major So-and-So, and not as the high-priced help."

Just before the war ended, Bing came out with one of grim reality, more than humor. The locale was near Meppen in Germany, and Herbie, gun in hand, relaxed near an empty German dugout, said to his handlebar-moustached sidekick Beanie, "what I want to get most out of this war is me!"

That's Herbie, irresistible, and like the jeep he disliked, ubiquitous. Now he's back in Canada. That he overshadows his creator and Bing's wartime boss, MacFarlane, is a tribute to their combined skill.

HOUSE DISCUSSES WIDE VARIETY OF FARM TOPICS

Farmer Members of The Commons Have Field Day in Debate On Agricultural Estimates

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 18—(CP)—Farmer members of the Commons practically ran the gamut of agricultural topics yesterday during continued debate on the estimates of the Agriculture Department.

The debate touched on such subjects as the work of scientists in combatting diseases and pests; of experiments with new strains of wheat efforts to control the sugar beet nematodes; sprays to kill weeds without affecting crops; blight resistant potatoes, and the freight subsidy on grain moved to Eastern Canada from the west.

Discussions were interrupted for an hour at the evening sitting to permit adoption of Trade Minister MacKinnon's motion, sending to the agricultural committee a private member's bill advocating that the Canadian Wheat Board take over marketing of all grains.

Against Bill

Mr. MacKinnon said the bill, sponsored by Robert Fair (SC — Battle River), would, if adopted in its present form, do away with the services of elevator companies and grain exporters. It might throw the wheat elevator companies, including the three western pool organizations, out of business.

Preceding the agricultural discussion was Finance Minister Ilsley's announcement that Mr. Gardiner will head a 13-man Canadian delegation to a 14-nation food and agriculture conference in Washington May 20. The conference will discuss urgent world food problems.

Among the items passed in the agriculture estimates were eight providing for a total increase of $913,591 in estimated expenditures for the science service branch of the Agriculture Department. The 1946-47 estimates for the service were $2,814,684 compared with $1,901,093 for 1945-46.

Urge Increased Pay.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, and J. A. Ross (P.C.-Souris) urged that more money be paid to agricultural scientists and to civil servants generally. Mr. Gardiner said some increases had already been granted, but the government realized further increases should be made.

Part of the discussion centred on the work of experimental farms and Mr. Gardiner said efforts still were being made to find a rust and sawfly resistant wheat which would produce a high yield and a high quality. There were no new developments in investigations with respect to root rot in wheat.

Experiments were being made on how to control the sugar beet nematode. The results of the experiments indicated that some of the commercial fumigants greatly reduced but did not eliminate the nematodes. However, the results indicated a sufficient control to treble the yield of sugar beets in the areas where the tests were carried out.

Can Kill Mustard Weed.

A spray had been developed which would kill off the mustard weed while leaving the grain crop unharmed. Efforts were being made to find ways of killing off other weeds.

Experiments with blight resistant potatoes were going forward, but of the 20 varieties under test none was ready for release.

The minister expressed the hope that no rural member would urge discontinuance of the policy under which the government pays freight rates on feed grain from Western Canada to Eastern Canada.

Under the policy eastern farmers could feed the grain at practically the same price as the western farmers.

Several western members did not agree with this statement and said that actually the eastern farmer was getting the better of the deal..

Cash Return Higher Claim

Mr. Gardiner, owner of farms in Saskatchewan and Ontario, said figures showed that the average cash return to the western farmer was higher than that to the eastern farmer.

Mr. Coldwell urged that Mr. Gardiner make a statement of government policy on food production in Canada over the next few years. Famine conditions in Europe and the Orient would not end this year and it possibly would be 'even more acute' a year from now.

Rail Crisis At-a-Glance

Cleveland, May 18 — (AP)— Here is the outlook for the United States in event a strike by members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers materializes today:

Industry would face shutdowns within a week.

Food shortages would develop rapidly, with perishables disappearing from store shelves in a matter of hours.

Travellers would be stranded away from homes.

Buses could handle only a fraction of train passengers.

Trucks could handle only a small percentage of freight.

Mail service would be disrupted.

Not affected in the strike call are troop, hospital and milk trains. Brotherhood officials have instructed their members that so far as their legal right to strike is concerned there is no difference between a mail train or any other train.

Brotherhood members employed on Canadian lines have been instructed to remain in service.

RENEWED HOPE FOR SETTLEMENT OF B. C. STRIKE

Labor Minister Expects Some Move to End the Lumber Industry Tieup

Vancouver, May 18 — (CP) — Renewed hope for settlement in the British Columbia strike of 37,000 loggers was seen today after Provincial Labor Minister George S. Pearson said he expected something would be done during the next few days to bring the dispute to an end.

Mr. Pearson was quoted in a dispatch from Victoria to the Vancouver News Herald as saying "I am satisfied that some move will be made in the next two or three days to end the strike."

His statement was backed up by Chief Justice Gordon M. Sloan's report to Federal Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell which, although making no specific recommendation, urged that procedure to determine the dispute in a manner binding upon the disputants be exercised.

His report continued that neither the union nor the operators would recede from their stands and "I was unable to suggest any mutually acceptable formula which might break the deadlock."

Set Deadline

In Northern British Columbia next Wednesday was set as a strike deadline by the union representing 1,000 workers.

The decision followed a union-operator meeting which failed to agree on a basis of settlement in their dispute which involves demands similar to those in the rest of the province.

British Columbia's strike scene was further clouded with yesterday's strike of 500 foundry workers and the possibility that 1,500 other workers dependent on them would also have to stop work.

Only eight days remained before the deadline for 2,500 miners to strike in B. C. gold mines on similar demands for a pay boost and 40-hour week.

The loggers strike was in its fourth day. Workers left their jobs Wednesday following the failure of an 11th hour attempt by Mr. Justice Sloan to effect a settlement.

In his report to the Federal Labor Minister, the chief justice said "I am unaware of any course of procedure to determine the

U. S. REACHES ZERO HOUR IN RAIL CRISIS

Question Whether Govt. Can Keep Nation's Vast System Working In Face of Strike Call

SAYS RAIL STRIKE ON

New York, May 18 (AP) — Thomas J. Harkins, representative of the Eastern Division of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, today said "the railroad strike is on" and "any hope of averting it ended when the union leaders left Washington to return to Cleveland."

Washington, May 18 —(AP)— The zero hour came today for the showdown whether the United States government can keep the nation's vast railroad system operating in the face of a called strike.

In the balance hung the threat of a complete paralysis of the country's economy.

The railroads already were under federal control — seized by order of President Truman — but the big question was whether the 250,000 trainmen and engineers involved will continue to work for the government after the strike deadline set for 4 p.m. (local standard time).

Top union leaders insisted the strike will occur on schedule — and that will tie up 227,335 miles of trackage if all effected employees obey the call.

The Office of Defence Transportation, which took over the roads for the government, asserted it expects to keep trains operating, although possibly at a "very much reduced" rate if the walkout is effective.

Banks on Appeal.

President Truman evidently banked heavily on his personal appeal to trainmen over the heads of their leaders, urging them "to cop-operate with the government . . . by remaining on duty."

President Makes Seizure

The immediate climax in the rail crisis made worried Washington forget momentarily that the soft coal dispute emergency is still very much on the doorstep. Negotiations in this controversy were at a weekend standstill.

Government intervention in the rail situation followed this sequence:

1. Mr. Truman directed government seizure of the roads effective yesterday and gave the job of operating the roads to O.D.T.

2. O.D.T. directed J. Monroe Johnson appointed Charles H. Buford, executive vice-president of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad, as federal manager for the seized roads.

3. Mr. Buford announced no immediate curtailment was planned in rail traffic and said, barring some further developments, there will be no inconvenience to the public in travel or shipping.

Union chiefs met these moves with silence.

Acted Under War Powers

Mr. Truman acted under his war powers in ordering the seizure and continued operation of the carriers as essential to the "war effort." Use of these powers was possible because the nation is legally still at war.

The engineers and trainmen, who are two of the "big five" rail brotherhoods, issued their strike call a month ago after wage increase negotiations broke down with the railroad operators.

The three other operating brotherhoods — conductors, firemen and switchmen — are not involved in the walkout, although they too have been seeking wage increases and adjustments in working conditions from the carriers.

South African Government's Decision To Ration Cereal Food Well Received

Johannesburg, May 18 (C.P. Cable) — South Africa has welcomed a government proposal to ration cereals — a proposal which comes rather late in the day in the opinion of most average consumers who, however, take the attitude that it is better late than never.

The proposal is to ration bread, wheat-meal and maize-meal in nine larger urban areas with each consumer to get eight ounces of bread daily, or six of wheat-meal or 10½ of maize-meal, but not all three.

For convenience, consumers will be able to buy two days' rations of bread on any one day. The ration proposals are particularly welcomed by lower-paid workers, including natives, who had to go short previously because goods often were favored by shop keepers if bread and other basic grain foods were short.

Another government decision is that all consumers must register with a particular dealer for other scarce commodities such as tea, sugar and soap. Dealers will be punished heavily if they supply any but registered customers.

Contravention of regulations probably will be punishable by cancellation of trading licenses.

Both ideas spring directly from the report of Sir Henry French, British food expert who came to South Africa at the government's invitation.

Hand in hand with cereal rationing goes a proposal for a 29-ounce loaf replacing the regular 32-ounce loaf. The reduction was gazetted today with a half-penny lower price.

Germans Lost More Men to the Allies Than to Russians

Wehrmacht Had 17,000,000 Men Under Arms During War

Berlin, May 18 — (AP) —Statistics compiled by the armed forces division of the American military government, with the aid of captured German records, showed today that, counting prisoners, German armed forces lost far more men to the Western Allies during the war than to the Russians.

The figures compiled on the dead and wounded were incomplete, but reckoning civilian bombing casualties, there was also an indication that the western forces killed more Germans than did the Russians.

According to captured files of the German Bureau for notifying next of kin of casualties, the Wehrmacht had 17,000,000 men under arms, including the air force, during the war.

Out of this total the American armies alone captured more than 8,000,000, the British bagged 2,663,000 and the French took 35,000.

Thus, the Western Allies captured, or accepted the surrender of nearly 60 per cent of the German army. Officials noted that many thousands of German soldiers fled westward into Allied captivity, rather than surrender to the Russians.

There is no accurate figure on the number of German soldiers killed. The Wehrmacht's known dead, according to American records, total more than 2,250,000, with another 1,500,000 missing.

This figure, however, is incomplete. When the Americans captured the German Registration Bureau, they found it had broken down in November, 1944, and was behind 1,000,000 deaths in its task of notifying next of kin.

The Bureau's file on Eastern front casualties was sketchy, gathered from scattered sources, because the Russians did not report them through the International Red Cross.

Boys Scouts Save Drowning Man At Campbellford

Campbellford, Ont., May 18 — (CP) — Samuel Petroff, 59, of Montreal, was saved from drowning in the Trent Canal last night after falling in while walking along the edge of the swift-flowing current. The man was carried along for some distance before Bobby Bennett and Murray Locke, two Boy Scouts, heard his cries for help. They pushed a log in the water and swam with it to the aid of the drowning man, succeeding in pulling him ashore. Hydro employees successfully applied artificial respiration and Petroff was taken to hospital for further treatment.

STRIKE VOTE CALLED

Brantford, May 18 — (CP) — A strike vote of textile workers at the Brantford Cordage Company is called for May 21, not May 31 as was erroneously reported yesterday, officials of Local 107, United Textile Workers of America (A.F.L.) said today.

After eight months of negotiations with the management, the union decided upon the strike vote action after a meeting with company officials failed to meet an agreement, union officials said.

The proposal is for a strike, not later than May 28, unless demands for a wage increase of 15 15 cents an hour are granted.

Premier Stalin Turns Down Truman's Appeal

Washington, May 18 (AP) — Anglo-American hopes of enlisting Russia in a united fight on world famine received a fresh setback today from the report that Premier Stalin has turned down an appeal from President Truman for Soviet participation.

The Truman-Stalin exchange was reported by a strategically-placed official, who asserted the Russian reply contended previous Soviet relief commitments made the American request too late.

Mr. Truman was not content with the reply, according to unofficial reports, and apparently still hopes to get Moscow to reconsider its attitude toward the world food problem.

Fresh stress, meanwhile, was laid on the urgency of the relief situation.

A joint British-United States communique issued here last night reported that a 3,400,000-ton grain deficit now was likely in the May-September period efforts to meet requirements of needy nations.

"A risk of famine remains," the announcement said, despite the best Anglo-American efforts. "Even more energetic measures" were called for "throughout the world" to meet that risk.

Some diplomats detected a possible veiled reference to Soviet non-participation when the communique mentioned that the situation could be improved "insofar as other sources of supply can be found in addition to those at present in sight."

Former President Herbert Hoover, speaking in Chicago last night, described the present picture as the "grimmest spectre of famine in all the history of the world." He said it threatened 800,000,000.

The report of Mr. Truman's efforts with Stalin on the food situation brought no immediate confirmation from the White House. However, it was recalled the President told his press conference Thursday he had been in touch with Stalin on the subject.

Pravda Writer Attacks Senator A. Vandenberg

Moscow, May 18. (AP)—A Pravda writer on Friday called Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg "a town crier of reaction" and said he tried to play the role of grave-digger at the four-power foreign ministers conference just concluded.

Commenting upon a transatlantic telephone interview Sen. Vandenberg (Rep.-Mich.) gave the New York Herald Tribune from Paris last week, the writer, B. Izakov, said "the interview actually was a direct attempt to bury the conference prematurely."

"Being an official participant of the conference (as a member of State Secretary Byrnes' delegation), Vandenberg stated he considered its outlook gloomy," the Russian wrote. "Vandenberg appeared as the grave-digger of the Paris Conference but, at the same time, tried to unload guilt from a sick head into a healthy one and busied himself with insinuations against the Soviet Union.

"He stated literally: 'the outlook is rather gloomy—if only you don't want to repeat Munich daily. And I don't want to repeat Munich.'"

Former City Resident Presents Concert Here

On Monday evening, citizens will have an opportunity of hearing a first-class, youthful vocal group in the auditorium of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, the North Toronto Youth Group Chorus, under the leadership of Adjutant Arnold Brown, a former Belleville boy.

Adjutant Brown, who was prominent in Salvation Army circles in this city some years ago, and who left to become a full-time officer in that organization, is now assistant editor for Salvation Army publications in Canada, Bermuda and Newfoundland. As a young man he was a valued member of the local Salvation Army band, and during the intervening years has continued his musical studies, now being known as a composer and conductor of band and vocal music. He has been guest conductor at a number of music camps in the Central States, and this coming August will be the director of the all-Ohio State music camp.

Adding to the interest of this musical festival is the announcement that Mr. Alec Gordon, organist at Bridge Street United Church, and Master Douglas Wareham, Christ Church chorister, will participate in the program.

The local Salvation Army Youth Group is responsible for the arrangements.

HOUSE DISCUSSES

He felt Mr. Gardiner should advise Canadian farmers what would be required of them over the next two or three years. They should be told whether they should concentrate on grain or livestock.

He said he believed the food situation overseas was "desperate" and that if the Canadian people were informed of the situation they would accept stricter conservation measures, even an extension of rationing.

Campaign Urged

Mr. Gardiner took under consideration a suggestion that a Dominion-wide campaign for the eradication of Bangs disease among cattle be instituted. The campaign was urged by Dr. W. G. Blair (P.C.-Lanark), who said a country-wide program was the only way to control the disease, which is the cause of undulant fever in humans.

Dr. Blair, a physician, said he was concerned with the "apathy and the listlessness" with which the department regarded the disease. There still was no cure for the disease but it could be controlled through the vaccination of calves.

John Blackmore, (S.C.-Lethbridge) suggested control of the disease be considered at a conference of all provincial agriculture ministers.

J. A. Charlton (P.C.-Brant) also suggested that calves be vaccinated. Mr. Charlton, a veterinarian, said Canada had much to learn from the United States in controlling the disease.

CENTENARY

Family Hour Held by Church

Centenary — On Wednesday evening members of the community held a "Family Get-together Hour" at the church. Sponsored by the Sunday school superintendent and teachers, it was a most successful and enjoyable evening for those present.

Mr. Edmondson acted as chairman and opened the meeting with a short devotional period. He then called on Mr. Edgar Ray to lead in community singing; several old time favorites were sung most heartily with Mrs. E. Ray at the piano. Rev. Mr. McCallum was called on to say a few words, explaining the purpose of the gathering. Miss Dorothy Ray was in charge of the school children's recreation period and all enjoyed the fun provided for them.

Miss Shirley Hall and Mr. R. Edmondson conducted an amusing quiz game contest, points were given for the right answers and prizes given for the highest score. Mrs. B. Christie, Mrs. F. Aikens, Mrs. R. Edmondson, Mr. E. Ray and Mr. D. Holton were the lucky winners. The ladies provided light refreshments.

Rev. Mr. Wagar made an appeal on behalf of the Cancer Fund and closed the meeting with the benediction.

City Police Co-operate In Safety Campaign

In keeping with the campaign which commenced Wednesday and which is being carried on simultaneously throughout Canada and the United States, the Belleville police department are participating in the traffic safety check being sponsored by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, according to Police Chief Walter Probert.

The traffic safety check, according to Chief Probert will be conducted by police officers and will be applied only to cars that are involved in traffic accidents or in violations of traffic regulations. The check will consist of on the spot inspection of brakes, lights, tires, windshield wipers and horn. Drivers whose cars show obviously marked defects will be urged to have proper repairs made immediately.

Officers checking cars will make out duplicate forms, giving a copy to the driver and retaining the original for unofficial police records. Drivers, Chief Probert said, will not be penalized because of mechanical defects in their cars unless they are in violation of local ordinances.

Leaflets outlining safe driving practices will be widely distributed during the program, which will continue for not less than six weeks.

"We can expect the number of passenger automobiles on the highways to increase at a rapid rate from now on," Chief Probert said. "The traffic accident rate will inevitably rise unless drivers keep their cars in the best possible mechanical condition, and, at the same time, learn all they can about driving safely."

"The used car problem is increasingly hazardous," the police chief continued, "and we must keep these rapidly aging cars in good operating condition until they can be replaced by new ones. Then, as the new cars, with their higher speed possibilities, come onto the roads it is going to be necessary to develop new skills in driving. We hope the program will increase public awareness of safer driving and thus reduce the toll of highway traffic deaths and injuries.

The police traffic check is an outgrowth of the highly successful brake check program which was conducted by the International Association of Chiefs of Police one year ago.

ALL WENT ON HONEYMOON

Seattle, May 18 —(AP)— James H. Sim, boatswain of the Liberty Ship Allen C. Balch, slipped away to a justice of the peace with bride-to-be Josephine Chappo for a "quiet" wedding. The couple dashed away amid a shower of rice and a promise from the crew that their honeymoon destination was no secret, either — "and we're all going along."

Quarter Million Gardens

Many more gardens must be planted throughout the Dominion this summer than in previous years, if Canada is to fulfill her increased food commitments to the hungry of Europe and the Far East.

Canadians are already calling them Victory Gardens — the long familiar name comes naturally and is appropriate for victory over want is the objective. Vegetables grown in such gardens all over Canada will help to make possible the sending overseas in greater quantities of the other vital foodstuffs for which the hungry countries are calling.

A quarter of a million gardens has been suggested as the Dominion's Victory Garden target for the summer of 1946 by A. M. Shaw, chairman of the Dominion Government Information Committee — a quarter of a million gardens to provide Canadian families with home-grown vegetables, while releasing more wheat, meat, eggs and cheese for hungry families in wartorn countries. Wise householders will plant not just enough for their summer needs but will plan for a surplus of those vegetables which may be canned, frozen or stored for winter use and which provide an excellent substitute for the less perishable staple products being shipped to Europe. A booklet on "The Home Garden" may be obtained free from the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The appeal to plant more gardens and grow more vegetables is urgent.

In Praise of Canadian Troops

Ottawa Canadian Club was privileged on Thursday to have as guest Canada's recently arrived Governor-General, Viscount Alexander, one of the greatest military leaders of the world in the late conflict. His Excellency was happy in his remarks as he spoke of the natural appeal of the Dominion, of family links with Canada and of his contacts with Canadian servicemen in the Mediterranean theatre of war. He was particularly struck with the beauty of Canada and of its capital city.

His reference to Canadians serving in Sicily and Italy was one of high praise for the Canadians and the other Allied troops. It provided him with the opportunity to stress the advantage which a common ideal and objective had meant in bringing Allied victory.

Comradeship in arms with Canadians were the contacts which he said he was very proud of, the meeting "with your splendid fighting men during the war . . . It will always be a pride and pleasure for me to remember those great soldiers and the vital role they played in the achievements of the 8th Army — the capture of Sicily in 38 days — the great advance through Italy, when after landing in the most southerly point, they marched and fought their way up that long peninsula from Messina to the Appenines, a distance of 600 miles, over some of the most difficult country in Europe.

"The Canadian army have earned many battle honors, but there are none finer than 'Ortona.' They captured that key point on the Adriatic coast against the finest fighting formation in the German army — the German 1st Parachute Division.

"There later in the spring of 1944, the Canadian Corps broke the Hitler line at Ponte Cervo and, as the spearhead of the 8th Army, opened the way to Rome. The Canadian Corps were again the spearhead of our attack some months later, when they broke through the Gothic line at Pessaro, near Rimini and set the stage for the final assault in the Valley of the Po, which led to the breakup of the Germans in Italy, that great mass surrender of a million enemy soldiers which heralded the collapse of the Nazis in Europe — and final victory.

"I have now said farewell to arms but though I am no longer a soldier in outward appearance I have a very large place in my heart for those great warriors who not only fought my battles for me, but won them for me.

"It always gives we a great thrill when I meet a man wearing the ribbon of the Africa Star or the Italian Star on his breast. In many ways I should like to see these honorable distinctions worn on civvy dress. By such a sign one can spot an old comrade. Friendships made on the battlefield are lasting because they are made of the real stuff."

Analysis of the Allied victories shows, the Governor-General said, that co-operation stood out foremost. "During the Mediterranean campaign we had armies, navies and air forces composed of most of the United Nations." And he added, "All these different races, creeds and colors fought and won their battles as a great and united team. Of course we had a common objective to gain, namely, the overthrow of a common enemy — in other words we fought for our ideal, which was our way of life — against tyranny and oppression — and because of our wholehearted belief in our cause we won. Today the struggle on the battlefield is over and done but ahead of us lies the struggle to maintain and uphold those principles of right and justice which we fought and sacrificed so much for in the war. Those trusted Allies and friends of our battlefield day must still be our friends and comrades who will stand by us in rebuilding the future world."

Human Figures

Ordinarily one of the most unobtrusive of federal agencies, the Bureau of Standards seems to be working in one direction that may lead to hot water. An apparel technologist has been devising a system of sizes for men's, women's and children's clothing to make shopping easier. No swift or magical results are expected from this research, but for small children, at least, it is now possible to relate new standard sizes to ages with some degree of accuracy. The project will doubtless arouse much public interest, as returning veterans, in buying civilian clothes, have helped draw attention to marked changes in the proportions of the average young American male. One clothing dealer recently disclosed that in terms of long and short suits nearly all veterans have required larger sizes than most stores have been able to stock.

The Office of the Quartermaster-General found, by frequency of issue, that the average soldier wore a 15 shirt with 32-inch sleeve, trousers with a 32-inch waist and size 11 socks. But the American figure has been subjected to gradual evolution. The curator of physical anthropology of the American Museum of Natural History, Harry L. Shapiro, writing a year ago in Natural History, cited findings of scientific study to the effect that in the Gay Nineties the average young man and woman were shorter than those of today; that women had narrower waists, and that the average girl of today is both taller and "stockier" than were girls of 1920 as college girls of 1920 were taller and heavier than their mothers. No doubt the Bureau of Standards is prepared to devise a system of apparel size numbers which will be adjustable to such alteration of the human figure every few decades as records show is probably inevitable.

Good Neighbors

In a world that seems to be given over to strife and suspicion, a simple thing like a barn-raising can restore our faith in the human race. When 35 neighbors of Mr. Adolph Armstrong gathered at his farm near South Woodslee and worked like Trojans all day to put up his barn, they were demonstrating that the heart of humanity still beats true.

For Mr. Armstrong is blind. He has not allowed his handicap to interfere with his usefulness, but still operates his farm. His display of courage in the face of adversity has won for him the admiration of his friends, which was exemplified in their neighborly act. The world is not so bad a place, after all, when such things can happen.

TRAINING

How to be a robin wise
When the little fledgling flies,
Braving life from birth to close,
This the mother robin shows.

How to find its food and nest;
Where it will be sheltered best,
Ere away from home it turns,
This is what the robin learns.

What to look for; what to fear;
How to sense that foes are near;
Seeing cats, stay out of reach—
Mother robin tries to teach.

Only humans here suppose
Life to them a living owes.
Mother robin merely tries
To make sure of robins wise.

Early King Banned Coal Burning

By DAVID ENGLAND
(In Toronto "Saturday Night")

Coal is front page news today. It is difficult to realize that there was a time when coal was highly unpopular. Legislation was introduced to prevent its use.

In the reign of Edward I coal was regarded with the deepest suspicion and disfavor. Its use was forbidden in London.

The penalty against infringement of this law was most severe — a large fine or even the suspension of a business. One Londoner was convicted and sentenced to death for breaking it.

The outcry against coal was most bitter among the higher grades of society. The landed gentry, on their infrequent visits to town, complained bitterly of the "noisome smell and thick air" caused by burning coal.

It was not until the reign of Edward III that the ban against coal was lifted. A law was then passed allowing the citizens "to dig stones and coal in the common soil without the walls of the town."

Oxford and Cambridge students were not allowed to light fires until the reign of Henry VIII. If, in winter, they felt "a shrewd nip in the air," they laid aside their text book and took violent exercise or sought the comfort of a friendly tavern.

• • •

The first mention of the use of coal in Great Britain was as early as 852, when it is recorded that "the Abbot of Peterborough let the land of Sempringham to Wulford, who was to send each year to the Monastery 12 loads of coal."

References to mining in Staffordshire date back to 1315, and there are indications that coalfields existed in Scotland at least a century earlier.

Towards the end of the Tudor regime the prejudice against coal began to disappear and its use became more general.

By the end of the reign of Charles I the use of coal had become widespread, but the price was so high that it soon became a luxury beyond the purse of the poorest classes.

Charles II, always short of ready cash, was ever on the lookout for new ways of raising money.

In 1662 a hearth tax was imposed. All householders, except cottagers, were called upon to pay two shillings per annum for each fireplace. This tax raised nearly £200,000 a year, a considerable sum in those days. This tax, very unpopular, was abolished in 1869.

• • •

The proceeds of a further tax on coal, in 1667, the year after the Great Fire of London, were used for rebuilding St. Paul's Cathedral and fifty other city churches.

In 1677, Charles, with characteristic ingenuity, found a means of providing for some of his numerous illegitimate children, who were an ever-increasing strain on the Royal Purse.

He granted to one of his favorite offspring, and his heirs the proceeds of a duty on coal of one shilling per chaldron, popularly known as the Richmond shilling.

It continued to be a source of considerable income to certain of his descendants until the beginning of the eighteenth century, when the Government brought them out.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 18 (CP)—Recent alarming reports of expert surveys give the impression that this tree-shaded, flower-decked national capital hides under a beautiful exterior almost unbelievable depths of slum-life, vice-crime and disease sources.

A servey conducted by the Metropolitan Health Council has revealed that 100,000 humans live in 25,000 "slum dwellings" which lack even indoor plumbing.

This report warned that the continued existence of outdoor toilets and common water taps might well precipitate an epedemic of typhoid fever through seepage into the city's otherwise excellent water supply.

Other reports on health conditions have described alarming shortages of hospital facilities, inefficiency in hospital adminstraton leading to unnecessary deaths and mistreatment in some institutions.

The slum and small-business areas are infested with huge rats which do an estimated $15,000,000 a year damage to property, not to mention occasionally attacking children.

Murders, rape and common assaults are the almost daily feature of the local newspapers and so many escapes have been made from the district jail that it has become the subject of congressional investigation.

All this is a matter of official record in the capital city of a country looked upon by much of the world as a heaven on earth and from which is directed much of the humanitarian effort to carry light and comfort to dark places abroad.

Washington is administered by a congressional committee. It is a Federal district and the residents have no vote. The head man of the committee is Senator Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo of Missisippi. He now is in that state campaigning for re-election and one of his arguments is that he must be kept in office so that he can continue his efforts to keep Washingtonians from getting the vote.

Canada's Ambassador, L. B. Pearson, is one of the best active workers among those who are trying to stretch the world's food supply thin enough to ensure that none starve. Mrs. Pearson is a leading member of a Washington Spanish-language study class for the wives of diplomats and cabinet ministers. They hold monthly Dutch treat luncheons and scheduled one for the Canadian Embassy May 24. Mr. Pearson said it was all right on one condition: no cereals, fats or oils—the major food shortage items—may be served!

I HOPE I NEVER HAVE THE GOUT

No one as yet has expressed the wish that I may get hydrophobia just to show whether I'd really take my chances without Pasteur treatment. Of course if I had rabies I might not be capable of judging about that. But in my normal—or shall we say ordinary state of mind I'm positive I would not take Pasteur treatment in any conceivable circumstance. Incidentally it is my offhand belief—I can't go through the vast amount of data in my files now—that there are no cases on record in which Pasteur treatment effected the cure or saved the life of a person presumably ill of rabies. All of the "cures" credited to Pasteur virus are cures of people who had nothing the matter—they had been licked, touched or bitten by an animal that was presumably rabid. If I were bitten or scratched by an animal, whether the animal were presumed to have rabes or not. I'd want immediate or the earliest obtainable surgical treatment of the wound and a prophylactic dose of tetanus (lockjaw) antitoxin or serum, and probably a second injection of the same antitoxin 5 to 7 days later. That's all.

But many a reader has wished that I might (1) catch cold from exposure, (2) get the rheumatism from cold and dampness, (3) have a nervous breakdown from overwork, strain and worry, or even (4) get the gout. They are not malicious about it, just anxious to teach me the facts of life—and they imagine I'll have to believe in such things if they happen to me.

Well, let's table the first three hypotheses and discuss the gout.

I still say there is no scientific basis for the notion that too much uric acid; a deposit or accumulation of uric acid or mono-sodium urate or other salt of uric acid in the tissues or the joint is not the cause of any trouble, call it gout or what you please.

In various disease chemical analysis reveals more than the normal proportion or amount of uric acid in the blood. Few of these diseases have any resemblance to the condition described as gout.

On the other hand most good physicians today recognize the deposits of urates or uric acid salts in tissues or joints is a result, not the cause, of the trouble, whatever it may be.

So it is my belief that the numerous acute and chronic ailments or diseases called gout are one thing or another, certainly not due to high living, drinking, lack of exercise—if these factors produced gout there should be more gout today than ever before. It is actually almost a curiosity when a doctor finds a case he does not hesitate to call gout.

On the whole I feel as secure against the possibility of suffering any illness from exposure to cold and wet or of having a nervous breakdown as I do against the possibility of getting the gout.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Warm Fresh Bread

What is the objection to eating warm fresh bread? (Mrs. C. T.)

Answer—I never could discover—maybe some old timer developed a bellyache shortly after eating some and pronounced anathema upon all freshly cooked or baked bread. Ma'am, it is nearly nine hours since nourishment has passed these trembling lips and you had to bring up——wow! wow!

Umbilical Hernia

Child aged 8 months seems in good health but belly button protrudes about one-half inch.

(B. S.)

Answer—Apply a pad of six or eight folds of muslin, gauze or linen over the bulge and retain it in place with two strips of adhesive plaster six inches long, 1-2-inch wide, applied to skin crisscross with skin drawn together somewhat so as to pucker it around the navel. Change the dressing once a week or oftener—use waterproof adhesive plaster. Continue this several months and it will probably cure the hernia or bulge.

Painful Feet

Granddaughter, 17, suffer agony with painful feet. Can you suggest anything?

The Norwegians are among the tallest people in the world; their neighbors, the Lapps, are among the shortest.

According to a curious popular belief, Cain was the progenitor of the colored race. This notion is incompatible with the Bible, because, according to Genesis 7:21, "all flesh died that moved upon the earth" at the time of the flood, except Noah, his wife, his sons and their wives, and Noah was descended from Seth, not Cain.

William Wordsworth, famous English poet, wrote virtually no poetry of importance after he was appointed poet laureate.

AbductorsRelease Purported Boss Policy Gambling

Chicago, May 17 (AP) — Detectives said today that Edward P. Jones, wealthy Negro and purported boss of "Policy" gambling in Chicago, had been released by abdductors who kidnapped him last Saturday.

They said the 50-year-old Negro was "safe and sound" but did not say whether a ransom had been paid.

Mr. Jones' counsel, Aaron Payne, told reporters he had not been in touch with his client since his release was reported. On Thursday Mr. Payne said Mr. Jones had been kidnapped for ransom, but "there has not been one ransom demand made."

Later Mr. Jones appeared Central police station and to reporters, "I was taken."

He said he did not know a of the abductors or where he h been held for the last five d and said he "did not remembe if the kidnappers demanded ra som.

Jones disclosed that duri time he was held by his abdu tors he was forced to lie o bed and was under const guard.

Atomic Energy Plants Practical Possibility

Washington, May 18 (AP) —Dr. Leonard I. Katzin, West Coast scientist, today rated large commercial atomic energy plants a practical possibility in two years and saw them curtailing industry's reliance on other sources of power.

A research chemist with the Plutonium project at the University of California, Dr. Katzin described why he considers such a development financially and scientifically possible in an article written for the current issue of Army ordnance magazine.

Through industrial application of atomic energy, undeveloped areas rich in minerals like Canada, could be made highly productive, waste in general could be curtailed and life made more liveable, he theorized.

"In its present state of development, atomic energy does not compete with common fuels, but this need not be the case in the future."

One pound of uranium completely consumed by fussion, he said, will release as much energy as the combustion of 1,500 tons of coal, 250,000 gallons of fuel oil or gasoline, 80,000,000 cubic feet of artificial gas or 40,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

Whether atomic power can compete financially with ordinary fuels depends on the cost of production. In order to compete with bituminous coal at $5 a ton—the 1942 wholesale average in the United States — a pound of U-235 should cost not more than $7,500 to produce, Dr. Katzin said.

"Competition with 15-cent gasoline is effective at $39,000 a pound. To compete with artificial gas costing 50 cents a 1,000 cubic feet it may still cost $39,000 a pound, while natural gas at the same cost would demand a competitive price of about $20,000 a pound for U-235."

Capital Closeups

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 18 (CP) — Canada's active Governor General, Viscount Alexander, disclosed in a speech here this week he had made his first flight over the United States but he didn't say he was at the controls of the plane himself.

The energetic field marshal who drove his own vice-regal train on one lap of his arrival journey to Ottawa and who has since "Jeeped" through the Gatineau Hills, guided a lumbering RCAF Dakota transport on his most recent excursion.

After his speech the other day this reporter asked him if he had done the piloting. "Oh, yes," said the Governor, "I always pilot myself. It's one of my hobbies."

He said he had gone to Rockcliffe—a tricky field because of its location under the brow of a ridge of hills—and had "borrowed" one of the Dakotas. He took the crew along for the ride and they pointed out the various points of interest.

The Governor has been on the go since his arrival here a month ago. He now knows all the milkmen in the Rockcliffe area near Rideau Hall and they are familiar with the slim figure in brown tweeds, cap and cane who swings along in an hour's "constitutional" bright and early each morning.

He is personally interested in two main projects. One concerns an improvised art studio in an old shed on Government House grounds where he finds time to paint and sketch and the other concerns a fresh coat of paint for a motor-boat now being overhauled at an Ottawa River boat house. He plans to take his family on weekend cruises and mechanics working on the little craft say the Governor won't have any trouble if the engine "conks" for he is a handy man around a gasoline motor.

UNDER THE HAT: A sprightly miss is 14-year-old Beth Gardiner, leggy and comely daughter of the Minister of Agriculture. She is regularly a gallery listener when her father is on Speaker's list and her youth, up until this week, got her hatless past the doorman.

But she's a big girl now and the doorman insisted she wear a hat in conformity with parliamentary rules. She didn't have one and she wanted to hear her father pilot his estimates so she went to his office and appeared in a jiffy in the gallery wearing his natty black homburg.

The minister, paused in the middle of a list of figures, to look up in surprise and then he grinned.

Joe who spent five years in service and 2½ in the South Pacific." Neighbors now are helping Joe with hammers and saws.

Apps May Become Athletic Director At Guelph School

Toronto, May 18 (CP) — A rumor hit town that Syl Apps, that great forward with Toronto's National Hockey League Maple Leafs, had been mentioned as a possible successor to Baldy Baldwin, as athletic director of Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, Ont. But Syl hasn't heard of it.

The directorship is vacant through resignation of Baldwin several weeks ago. Recently he was appointed coach of Ottawa Rough Riders of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union.

Around Guelph speculation is that Apps, along with two others, is under consideration as successor. The others are Jack Mitchell of Ottawa, former O.A.C. football star, and Redmond Kinchsular, of the Collegiate staff, at Delhi, Ont.

Apps, a great all-round athlete at Hamilton's McMaster University several years ago, said he would "think it over" if the position was offered him.

Possibility Local Marshes Will Be Sprayed With D.D.T. To Check Mosquito Nuisance

That the city is considering doing its share this year to combat the annual mosquito menace, was evidenced at the regular council committee meeting Thursday evening when members voted to obtain full particulars and the approximate costs for spraying local marshes with a D.D.T. mixture.

According to the recommendation passed in council the city comptroller will contact Leavens Brothers regarding costs of aerial spraying of marshes in the city.

100 Acres of Marsh

In a letter to council from City Engineer Charles Mott, it was pointed out that there are approximately 100 acres of marshland in the city, including the marsh along the north shore of the Bay of Quinte and the city quarry in Coleman Flats. It has been estimated by Dr. Berry of the Ontario Department of Health that approximately 100 gallons of spray would be required, while costs of spraying would be in the neighborhood of $1.75 per acre.

May Build New Dock

The welfare of local boat owners is also being considered by councillors who recommended that Aldermen Allin, Chamberlain and Follwell with Mayor Frank Follwell be a committee to investigate the advisability of constructing a landing dock at the foot of St. Paul Street or at some other suitable location. It was pointed out that visiting boat owners at present have no place to tie up their boats, while the same applies to local boat owners.

May Open New Streets for Sewer

Council also recommended that the special property committee make a report on the feasibility of opening up a portion of Lewis St. and Benjamin Street for sewers and water service as a preliminary to a home building program in that area.

May Change Course

The city engineer will be asked to provide council with an estimate of the cost of diverting the present open water course on the vacant city-owned lot on West Moira Street opposite the Cedar Street intersection. The open water course drains Coleman Flats and it is recommended the course be changed and "fill" placed so as to provide three building lots on the north side of West Moira Street.

A number of city-owned lots were recommended sold to prospective home builders, while an additional light was recommended placed at the Bleecker Ave. and Station Street intersection. Exact location of the light was left to the committee in charge.

Mrs. Meyer Tobias Not Satisfied With Verdict

Toronto, May 18. —(CP)— Mrs. Meyer Tobias, widow of a shopkeeper slain during a holdup attempt by four youths last December, said Friday that reduction of murder charges to that of manslaughter against the youths "isn't right at all."

"Manslaughter!" she said to a newspaper reporter. "These boys come in my husband's store and shoot him in cold blood. What do they consider murder? How can it be manslaughter when the pistols were cocked and my husband had no defence?"

The verdict was returned Thursday night and Mrs. Tobias said she hadn't slept throughout the night. She attended only one day of the 10-day trial, said she is in ill-health.

Citified Cottons

By ALICE ALDEN

SOME OF THE best prints seen this season are members of the cotton family, beautiful cotton prints made up into sleek, urbane fashions, vastly different from the old-time little cotton dress. For proof we submit this handsome New York dress, ideal for smart summer city wear. It is a pink and black cotton Morocco print garnished with broad pink bands on the sleeves, made with a neckline that is slashed to the zipper that closes the dress. The skirt has its fullness concentrated in the centre front. The belt is black patent.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Noses and Ears

Beautiful eyes! Noble brows! Smiling lips! Peaches and cream complexion; These features, in full state of loveliness, are what the beauty-seeking lassies have on order. If they possess these four, what else matters, as far as the countenance is concerned? Still, there is the nose and there are the ears. They are a part of the facial family. Let's give them a once-over.

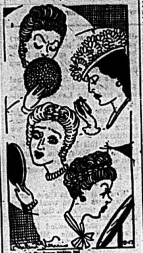
Small, beautifully-formed ears, placed close to the head, give a woman an aristocratic, high-born appearance. They should be played up, powdered lightly, lobes touched with rouge. A curious thing in connection with this feature is that the ears may not conform exactly in shape and size. Peculiarities of contour have been handed down for generations in some families.

Some ears are almost round, others are long, some are pointed. The lobes may be large or there may be no lobes at all. Some time when you are in a public conveyance or hall, look around you and regard your neighbors' ears. You'll be surprised. There are many departures from the accepted standard.

One good thing about ears; they retain their youthfulness into old age, though the flesh in front of them may be the first area that takes on wrinkles.

Now for noses. Young girls seem never satisfied with the noses nature has given them. Yet few noses are disfiguring. Usually, the size and shape passes unnoticed if other features are attractive and compelling, so we urge the pretty ones to cease their fretting. A writer who specializes in face reading says:

"The size of the nose, controlled by quality, is a measure of power; the shape of the nose denotes the kind of power. The nose is the central and most radical feature of the face and indicates more of the bodily and mental qualities than any other feature." Good enough. But to the female of the species the big question is "Does it or does it not shine?"



Young girls are never satisfied with their noses.

One thing is sure: nothing is more disfiguring than a red nose. When that becomes the affliction of the good-looks seeker, she is cast into the depths of woe.

Redness may be due to an oncoming infection, in which event one should consult a medical man who specializes in diseases of the skin and scalp. It may indicate anemia or chronic stomach trouble. Or, it may be due to dietetic errors, rich foods, highly spiced dishes, an excess of pastries.

The nose is a favorite lodging place for blackheads. Besides washing the face well with soap and water at bedtime, this area should have an occasional dry cleaning. Pour a little eau de cologne over a moist cloth, go over the skin surface lightly.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Courteous Notes Vs. Discourteous Printed Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine was married at a large church wedding which was followed by a reception in a hotel. Now, two months after her wedding, she has sent printed thank-you cards to thank for her wedding presents, and these cards were mailed in envelopes stamped with a one cent stamp. What do you think about this way of acknowledging wedding gifts?

J. M.

For this bride's friends it must have been a bitter pill to swallow. . .to receive from her such a bleak, discourteous form of acknowledgment for their kindness and generosity to her. Most of us, when we plan to give a wedding present, take a considerable amount of trouble in choosing it, try to be generous in our gift-budgeting. . .and then, when we send the gift, high-heartedly hope that it will be really welcomed and our thought and taste appreciated. Although a prompt note would indicate to us the prospective bride's mannerliness, we may perhaps forgive the delay if eventually we receive some warm words of enthusiastic approval of our gift. But after that long wait of anticipation of receiving a gracious acknowledgment, it's certainly a shock to receive a ready-made card of thanks (if you can call it "thanks"!) and most certainly a shock to receive it second-class mail.

It's no wonder we hear some people say, when they receive such an atrocious form of gift-acknowledgment, "What an affront! That's the last time I'll ever give her a present." And the other day I heard a woman say, "She sent me a printed thank-you card. . . .I was so surprised, for I had always thought she had learned to read and write!"

Plans for Second Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A very dear friend of mine, a widow, is to be married in June, and she and I would appreciate your help in making the plans for her wedding. Her groom-to-be is a widower, they are both in their early forties, and the former mate of each died last December. The ceremony is to be solemnized in a Catholic church at five o'clock in the afternoon.

1. Is it proper for the bride to be given in marriage?
2. How does the wedding party walk to the altar?
3. Would it be a good taste to give the bride-to-be a personal shower?
4. There is to be no reception. Is it good taste to send out announcements?

M. E.

1. Yes, if this procedure is permissible in the church in which she is to be married. Often, in a Catholic Church, the father of the bride (at either her first or second marriage) escorts her down the aisle, but does not give her in marriage.
2. If, as is customary, the bride-for-the-second-time is to have only one attendant, this attendant walks first, alone, down the aisle, and is followed by the bride and her father or whoever escorts her down the aisle.
3. There isn't any rule against this; but considering her so-recent widowhood, I think it would be in far better taste to omit such parties.
4. Yes.

REFUSED TO START TRAIN

Toronto, May 18 —(CP)— A "rod rider," unable to find an empty boxcar on a northbound freight train which stopped at siding here Friday, climbed into the engineer's cab and informed engineer W. R. Sharpe that he intended to ride with him as far as Parry Sound.

The engineer refused to start the train although he was ordered to by the man who kept his hand in his right pocket as if he was carrying a gun.

"Finally he got out of the cab and disappeared," Mr. Sharpe said.

Black and white polka dot printed crepe is used for the dress that has a soft bow at the neck, bishop sleeves and unpressed pleats in the centre front of the skirt. Over it is worn a cut-away vest of black ottoman faille.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Doesn't Think a Husband Should be Allowed Out at Night Alone

Here's a woman who thinks a husband ought to confine his recreation to the daytime—that is, unless he's ready to take the whole family along with him when he goes out. If he shows signs of wanting a night out to himself, then a wife had better be prepared to hear of his unfaithfulness, in her opinion.

She writes:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I wholeheartedly disagree with you on the theory of the right of a man to a night out once a week. I, for one, have paid in full for such nonsense.

"Don't you know that this sort of thing most of the time leads to philandering? And I'm not speaking from my experience alone.

"This business might be all right for some men, but every one I know of always ended up in the philandering class. Give them an inch and they will take a yard, and that one night out becomes seven.

"This is my theory of a happy marriage: I think a husband can get plenty of diversion by going fishing and hunting or engaging in any other sport he may like in the daytime on his days off and still be with his family at night and not out having a spree. After all, most men are away from home every day, and should be happy to spend their evenings with their families.

"I may have the wrong solution and the wrong slant on life, but it's working for me now and I still think it's a good one. Remember, what's good for some is real bad for others.

"Mrs. B. P."

To quote your own thoughts in other words, Mrs. B. P., what may work for some, won't work at all for others, and the program you've adopted for keeping your own husband home nights might be the very thing that would send another woman's husband off in the wrong direction.

If you've been able to persuade your husband that his place is with his family every single night in the week, that's just fine—for you, Because you obviously do not trust your husband. You imply that he has taken advantage of his freedom in the past and instead of spending his night off in legitimate recreation has gone off on the prowl. So now you think the cure for his wanderlust is to keep him right on the premises all the time where you can see what he's up to.

Maybe,—as I say, this is all right for your particular problem and if it is, then more power to you for having been able to solve it. But somehow I don't believe it would be a very sound program for the average family.

Because, while you say that your theory of a happy marriage is that the husband should be home every night with his family, and only go out by himself during the day, most people's theory of a happy marriage is that husband and wife should be able to trust each so completely that either could go out when and where they like without the other having an anxious moment. Surely, a husband who has no intention in the world of abusing his wife's faith in him would resent it if she insisted that he must remain under her eye after dark,—and, on the other hand, it's hard to believe that a husband who wants to play in some one else's yard won't find a way even though he is required to check in for the night the minute he's through work.

"The next place I live in is going to have..."

Many an over-expanded household has endured the "bathroom problem", but lack of ADEQUATE ELECTRIC WIRING is a more subtle irritation. Having to move the chesterfield to plug in the vacuum cleaner, for instance, just because the only wall outlet is back there ::: with all the lamps and the radio hooked up to it. And then there is the new range or water heater you would like to have if the main wiring would only stand the strain. That is where the real rub comes ::: when you can't use some new electrical convenience until new wiring is installed for it.

Many homes are not wired for modern demands. As more appliances become available, the use of electricity keeps right on climbing, and makeshift wiring adjustments lead to trouble.

That is why it is so necessary for you to insist on adequate wiring for your home, be it old or new. Hydro rates have been reduced until they are now among the lowest in the world. Enjoy full benefit of low-cost electrical servants by having your home adequately wired. A good electrical contractor knows how to wire adequately, and your local Hydro will gladly give you information.

If you are improving or building a home, ask your Hydro for the booklet, "Adequate Wiring for the Postwar Electric Homes of Canada."

Ponderous Pole Unleashes Furious Attack on Von Schacht To Win Bout in Straight Falls.

567 Pounds of Human Flesh Wrestle Both in and Out of Ring With Talun Having Better of Exchanges

Yeah?, and what would you do if 316 pounds of ponderous Polish fury picked you up bodily; slung you across his shoulders like an oxen yoke with the middle of your spine against the back of his neck, and proceeded to tie a grandmothers knot with you? Sure you would. And that is what Frederick Von Schacht, 251-pound Milwaukee Mastodon did last night after six minutes of milling in the second and final fall of the main bout at the Hume Arena.

Wladyslaw Talun, the walking Empire State Building of the Warsaw underground had little difficulty in disposing of the gent who hails from the town a certain brew made famous. He pendulumed his way through sixteen minutes of the first fall climaxing it by hurling Van Schacht into the lap of a lady who screamed her delight at having the first man in years on her lap, but who was strangely absent when Von Schacht politely placed the Pole in the same position. The two milled about the ground outside the ring, and when the German-American finally got his bearings and dashed for the ropes, Referee Powers was already hoisting aloft the Polish paw in signal of victory.

Second Fall Short

The second and last fall was short, but not sweet. "Vody" (Wladyslaw to you (guys) was peeved. His moustachios curled upwards like the toes of a 1812 pair of skates. There was Polish fire in his eyes. What happened is a mystery. But suffice it to say, that his blood was well up along the Fahrenheit trail and it took him just six minutes to make the opposition say "uncle."

Vody, after slapping the Milwaukeean in and and out of the ring, and taking some of the same punishment on the side, decided to call it a night. After all, the little woman was waiting in the pews and the Montreal train left early. So he applied for the first time in Belleville, his famous difficulty of disposing of the gent was sufficient.

Boys Not Gentle.

The boys were as gentle with one another as a pair of half-starved wildcats over a luscious rabbit. They clawed, kicked, heave-ho'ed one another out of the ring, combined at times to make referee Ernie Powers, the "pickle in the middle" with plenty of mustard on top and beneath him; spurned his attempts to conduct the bout according to rules; marked time on each other's Adam's apple and displayed a pronounced yen for battling outside of the ring, and hitting each other with everything but the Post Office and the Belleville General Hospital.

But for showmanship and action, the Bunny Dunlop - Mike Sharpe bout stole the show. The old perennial from Toronto, grimacing his disgust at the young, but handsome, upstart who dared to oppose him, staged one of the most villianous displays of villainy ever attempted here. Dunlop gouged the Sharpian eyes, dislocated his tonsils, rubbed gravel in his hair, and on his teeth and at one time suspended him feet first in the ropes while he mildly chastised referee Cliff Fox with a couple of right hooks.

Bout One of Best.

The bout, one of the best seen here in some time, had the faithful standing in the aisles and on their seats howling for the Dunlop blood. "Bunny" covered himself, at least his chest, with the Sharpe gore, which he drew in quantities from that young gentleman's nose at times, and was in his gory glory. But his self-imposed victory boomeranged. The gong rang to end the bout and referee Fox promptly awarded the fall to Sharpe on points.

Ben Sharpe, brother of Mike, the other half of a wrestling duo that physically is the answer to a bobby-soxer's prayer, turned back the villainy of Jan Gotch, whose unorthodox methods earned for him the consistent boos of the crowd and won the decision on points.

MAURIELLO K.O'S BRUCE WOODCOCK IN FIFTH ROUND

British Heavyweight Gives Game and Effective Display at Gardens

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, May 18 — (CP) — International good will glowed along Jacobs Beach today as calloused fight followers praised Bruce Woodcock, British Empire heavyweight champion, for his North American debut.

Woodcock, 25-year-old Yorkshire railwayman, was knocked out in the fifth round of his 10-frame thriller at Madison Square Garden last night by Tami Mauriello, Bronx tavern-keeper, but his game and affective display did much to erase the low reputation of previous British heavyweights.

Promoter Mike Jacobs told Woodcock as he recovered from his pummelling that he was welcome to fight in the Garden anytime he wished. Jacobs also had a pat on the back for Mauriello, saying he favored a match between him and the winner of the June 19 world heavyweight title match at Yankee Stadium between Joe Louis and Billy Conn.

Meanwhile, there was the prospect of a rematch between last night's stars. Both Woodcock and Mauriello said they would like to meet again, possibly in London.

A crowd of 13,749 paid $98,590 to see the fight and cheered Woodcock consistently.

11-Pound Advantage

Mauriello, with an 11-pound weight advantage, was in the best condition of his ring career. He said afterwards condition was responsible for his victory and admitted that Woodcock, especially in the third round, had hurt him with his right.

After a fairly even and cautious opening round, Woodcock took the second and third. He shook up Mauriello in the third with a hard right which cut the New Yorker's eye but lacked his rival's experience and failed to finish him off.

In the fourth, Mauriello rallied and almost knocked Woodcock out with hard left hooks. The 22-year-old ring veteran pushed his advantage in the fifth and cut up Woodcock's face with hammering rights and lefts. Woodcock, showing considerable gameness and durability, came back with punishing right hand body punches and had just landed a stiff right hook when Mauriello caught him with a savage right hand blow on the point of the chin.

Stopped the Fight

The Empire titlist whirled and fell to the canvas on his back. He staggered up at the count of nine but was obviously finished. Referee Eddie Josephs stopped the fight and led the tottering Woodcock to his corner.

Woodcock will leave late today by Clipper for London, where he will meet Freddie Mills, Empire cruiserweight (light heavyweight) champion, June 4. Woodcock pulled down about $30,000 for his share of last night's battle.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Bay of Quinte Country Club golfers tee off in the season's opener tomorrow on links that, following Thursday rain should be the answer to a golfer's dream. The card of events appears elsewhere in this edition, and with anything like good weather prevailing the boys and gals should enjoy a grand day's sport.

• • •

There will be some outstanding golfers from out of town attend the teeing - off ceremonies. Among them will be Bill Ezinicki, Toronto Maple Leaf hockey star who it is claimed, can drive the little white pill 300 yards, or better. Along with Bill comes from Oshawa "Smoothy" Burden, diminutive brassie-wielder who can do practically any course below 70. The little guy tips the scales at about 125 and can rub his chin with the handle of his putter while resting his foot on the steel. He is said to be the champion of the Oshawa golfing fraternity.

Schmeling Gets a House

Though Germany is suffering an unprecedented housing shortage, too, Max Schmeling doesn't need to worry over having a roof over his head for the next three months, at least . . . The only fighter who ever won this world's heavyweight championship while resting on the seat of his trunks has just got the jailhouse, with the best wishes of the British military government officials in Hamburg . . . Three months there and a fine of 10,000 marks, for building a house without authorization.

• • •

It seems as though you have to have a touch of cannibal instinct in order to be a successful handler of members of the pugilistic fraternity. One of Gus Lesnevitch's handlers performed an "unusual" operation at the end of the seventh round in his world light heavyweight title fight with British Freddie Mills at Harrangay, London the other night. Lesnevitch's eye was so badly swollen and filled with bad blood that he complained of pain making his head throb.

Dick Gutteridge, who was in his corner, acted quickly: He bit into the swollen flesh to allow the blood to flow. Lesnevitch said he felt relief immediately and it seemed as if a "ton weight" had been lifted from his head.

Racehorse fans are reserving judgment on Assault in spite of the double win in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness of the nag from deep in the heart of Texas. They feel that the Belmont Stakes scheduled for June 1st will be the real test for Lord Boswell, who finished 4th to the Arden horse in the Derby and second to him in the Preakness. They recall, too, that the Belmont is a meander of a mile and one-half, a quarter mile longer than the Derby and five-sixteenths longer than the Preakness. Boswell was driving hard in the latter race and was breathing down Assault's neck when they flashed across the finish line. But they overlook the fact that Assault was bred, like Boswell, to go the distance.

• • •

Assault did not get away any too well in the Preakness. He was back and between horses going past the stand for the first time. Jockey Mehtens, up on Assault made his move early in the race, lifting his horse to the extreme outside on the far turn, with the result the horse went by others in the race as though they were standing still. By the time Assault hit the head of the stretch he had a three-lengths margin, but faced the tremendous task of carrying his run for the better part of a mile. He was tiring as Boswell challenged. The two made it a horse race right to the wire with the Texan hanging grimly on.

• • •

"That attractive young lady over there," murmured Phil, (The Voice) Lawson, wrestling impresario, and manager of one William, the Whippah Watson, in the Hume Arena last night during a lull in the pachydermic proceedings, and accompanying his stage whisper with a nudge like a miniature pile-driver in the reportorial ribs, "is former Polish lady wrestling champion of the world."

• • •

He inclined his well-groomed noggin in the general directions of a well-dressed blonde girl, who sat in the front tier of seats, watching quietly, the mat pyrotechnics of Wladyslaw Talun, and Frederick Von Schacht, who were endeavoring to dismember one another after the procedure laid down in Amendment 614; Section 119; Para. 3467, of the 5th supplement to the general textbook used by the Mayhew College of Applied Pachydermy.

• • •

Knowing that the "Voice" was going fishing, and being a strict observer of the book of rules as laid down to those of Benedictian (correct, not 'benediction,' please, Mr. Operator) persuasion the locale of the best brook trout spots in Hastings came quickly forth from the reportorial tonsils.

"She's a beautiful intellectual girl," gushed forth in dulcet tones from the Lawsonian gullet.

"I know two guys who got seven speckled beauties near Moira Lake last week," we countered.

"When this lady was wrestling in the States, she defeated men who were regarded as top-notchers in the game," went on the Lawson build-up.

• • •

"The best bait in these parts is minnows if you want to get 'em while they're in the mood," his in desperation.

"Yep, she wrestled in Nebraska, California, Michigan, Dakota and Florida," went on the irrepressible Lawson. "C'mon over and meet her."

The reportorial mouth opened, then closed suddenly, breaking off two molars and three bicuspids, (replaceable), as a sudden jerk (not Lawson) propelled us in the general direction of the attractive young lady.

• • •

And that is how we met Mrs. Wladyslaw Talun, who has given up wrestling and is still the undefeated Polish champion of the world. She devotes her time to looking after her 6 foot 8 husband and is his official manager (wrestling). They live in a comfy cabin on the outskirts of Montreal and the only other member of the family is Kili, a two months old black Pomeranian puppy.

• • •

Gleaming white teeth flashed in a merry smile as Mrs. Talun recalled the first time her husband took Kiki out for a walk. "Can you imagine the furore in Montreal when 'Vody' plus his white ten-gallon sombrero, and his six-foot eight of manhood ambled down the boulevard towing a six-inch high black pup on a leash?"

• • •

Mrs. Talun's wrestling name was Jedviga Zbysco. She trains with her husband and can lift his 316 pounds of brawn and muscle clear off the ground. "I defeated all the male contestants I was matched with," she smiled, "that is all but one. And the only way I could record a victory over him was to marry him. I did."

• • •

Mrs. Talun weighed (out goes the official neck) 160 pounds when she was wrestling. Right now she tips the beam at — well, you ask her. She keeps in perfect physical condition thru daily workouts, and "never felt better in her life."

• • •

She flexed her right arm. "Feel those biceps" she invited. We did. And immediately decided the rest of the interview would take place via telephone.

This was her first visit to Belleville and she immediately fell in love with it. Would like to live here, in fact.

• • •

She looked over the reportorial shoulder and her eyes suddenly lighted up. A huge shadow fell athwart the Arena dance floor. A large white sombrero loomed up far overhead. "This is . . ." Mrs. Talun began to say. But she never finished the sentence. Her interviewer, suddenly remembered the little woman and "Joe". Anyway the paper went to press early on Saturday, and he couldn't let the boss down. He negotiated the first 100 yards in nine flat, and got pinched for speeding up Church street in the family jalopy.

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, April 18. (AP) — The All-star college baseball game, cooked up by the college coaches and fostered by the Red Sox, may go a long way toward settling one of the season's hottest arguments—who is the best college player. . .stirred by stories about the speed and hitting of Army's Glenn Davis, various and sundry fans have come in with "as good or better" plugs for Dale Mitchell of Oklahoma, Charley Trippi of Georgia, Lee Eilbracht of Illinois, Dan Robinson of Michigan, Joe Landrum of Clemson and maybe a few others. . . Mitchell, they say, has everything, including plenty of speed and a cloud of major league scouts around him. Trippi hit .500 for 20 games, knocked nine homers and stole 17 bases. . .Coach Wallie Roettger calls catcher Eilbracht, hitting .585 in conference games, "the best major league prospect in the big ten." . . .Freshman Landrum pitched a non-hitter in his college debut.

Long Range Scouting

When the Villanova ball club visited Penn State, Joe Bedenk, the home coach, asked Phil Weinert if he didn't have a catcher-third baseman named Norm Kline on the club. . . Phil didn't, but when Kline's home town folks in Lancaster, Pa., put in a few plugs, explained he had been too busy with engineering studies to play ball . . . But he came out and in his first game belted three singles and a triple against Princeton. . . .Now Bedenk is wondering what sort of persuasion Weinert used. His own second-best hurler, Bob Gehrett, is so wrapped up in chemical engineering that he'll take time out to pitch home games but refuses to leave the campus.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 18 — (CP) — Either the Ottawa Rough Riders are going to learn the good old art of blocking for the Big Four football campaign this fall or they will be nursing sore backs.

When Fred (Baldy) Baldwin breezed into the capital to take over the coaching reins he told Bill (Ottawa Journal) Westwick about the barbed wire persuader he used to make the blocking lessons sink home.

He told Bill: "This football has become a game of blocks. I've looked it all over and I can't see anything else to touch it in importance . . . My assistant, Lou Barnes, has a big job ahead of him but I'll guarantee he'll show results. We have a barbed wire arrangement with strands of wire from four to four and one-half feet high. You might say the barbed wire is something of a persuader. The boys either keep low on those occasions or else—."

The "or else" caught the ear of manager Jim McCaffery, who left off his study of an equipment cost sheet to ask: "Do I understand the players keep running under this barbed wire? What happens if they don't keep low enough?"

"Nothing, except they lose a bit of hide the first few times and rip a few sweat shirts," said Baldy. The idea of ripped sweat shirts brought a hasty look of alarm in McCaffery's eyes and Baldy hastened to assure him:— "But they soon get on to it Jim. I've tried this system and I've lost only four sweaters in all."

Thus relieved, McCaffery said: "That's not so bad. There's a lot of hides around but those sweaters aren't so easy to get."

Swimming Too:

Hamilton isn't satisfied with being the track and field centre of Canada this summer with the first post-war championship meet being scheduled for its centennial week in July but it's to be a swimming centre as well.

To start off with the Ontario section of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association plans to hold its championships at the mountain city June 8. That will be followed up by competition for 24 Canadian titles July 5-6 in centennial week.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 990

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Great dope carriers are the choice of leads, flanked by their do's and don'ts, and paced by the rule of 11. The combination gives you little time to pick up your knitting while playing a hand.

The lead rule is: Follow the order of choice in tops, longies, shorts; don't lead a suit bid by opponents; against a suit contract, don't lead away from an ace or a king.

The rule of 11 is: A fourth best lead is subtracted from 11; the answer tells how many higher cards in that suit are held by the three players other than the leader.

Against a four heart contract, the spades in a deal are shown here:

NORTH
WEST ♠J 9 7 6 EAST ♠Q 5 4 2
SOUTH
♠K

Your partner in the west leads the six. You hold the east hand. What does that lead tell you?

Combine the lead rule with the rule of 11 and you will do a good job of card reading.

Having led a low card, partner has no top lead neither a short suit containing an ace nor any suit containing A K; nor any suit with a sequence headed by K Q, Q J, J 10, or 10 9.

Assuming his low card to be a fourth best, he has exactly three higher. So, he has a total of four spades; dummy shows up with four spades; you have four spades. South can have only one spade.

Subtract the led card (six) from 11. The answer is five; the number of spades higher than a six in north, east, south. Dummy has three of them. You have one. South must have one.

Thus you know the one spade held by south is higher than a six. Which is it? Partner would not have led away from a king or ace. You have the queen. South must have the king. It must be alone.

Partner's six is not a singleton. If it was, south would have had K J 9 7; a biddable suit that he would have bid.

No matter what dummy plays, what should you? The deuce, you say.

Hollywood, May 18 (AP) — France, which has given us Lafayette, Charles Boyer and Crepes Suzettes, now contributes Louis Jourdan.

Jourdan, who will probably star in "The Paradine Case," is a combination of Tyrone Power, Cary Grant and Cornel Wilde, if you can imagine that. He is six feet tall, slim and has a clean-cut, handsome profile. His most striking feature is his dark brown eyes, which are piercing and yet with a far-away look. Sorry, girls, he's married.

The actor started his movie career in Paris in 1939. He escaped to the Riviera when France fell to the Nazis, and joined the underground. He speaks English with a pleasant accent, under tutelage of his close friend, Jean Pierre Aumont.

Jourdan reported the French film industry is in poor shape. "Now we can make only 25 pictures a year instead of the usual 150," he said. "Most of our equipment has been stolen or destroyed. What we have is very old."

He couldn't report on how French film making compared to American, because he had never seen a movie set here. So we walked him to a sound stage and gave him his introduction to the Hollywood industry.

"It is exactly the same," he said. "Exactly."

What they're talking about in Hollywood's saloons and salons .. The way Humphrey Bogart has been turning down scripts. .. Clark Gable doing the same, not wishing another ill-fated "Adventure." .. Threatened head-loppings at two big studios because of recent "mistakes." .. The Bob Hope radio show, criticized on many sides but still leading the audience ratings. .. The way Howard Hughes has defied the industry in selling "The Outlaw". .. How Frank Sinatra has been playing theatre dates to pay his taxes. .. The headaches studios are having with stars' husbands who want to run their wives' careers.

AT THE McCARTHY — One of the amusing sequences in Columbia Pictures' "She Wouldn't Say Yes," currently playing at the McCarthy Theatre, occurs on a crowded train when Rosalind Russell and Lee Bowman, its stars, find that they have tickets for the same Pullman berth.

AT THE BELLE — Never did a romance flower under more terrifying circumstances than confront the lovers of Paramount's unusual drama, "The Lost Weekend," picturization of Charles Jackson's best-seller, and four Academy Award winner, arriving at the Belle Theatre today. Ray Milland and Jane Wyman, shown here, co-star in the film.

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, May 18 (CP) — Big news on Broadway continues to be visit of London's Old Vic repertory group which this week unveiled its production of Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya," to alternate with the Shakespearing "Henry IV" cycle.

After the red meat of Falstaff and Hotspur, Chekhov's maundering Russians have been likened by one hungry local critic to spinach—nutritious but not delicious. The naturalism of the 19th.-century Russian play—difficult to categorize as either comedy or tragedy—is anticlimactic after the robust theatricality of Shakespeare.

Chances for acting pyrotecnics are not offered principals Ralph Richardson and Laurence Olivier such as those on which they capitalized last week; and for the first night of "Uncle Vanya" Mr. Richardson's voice—strained by playing Falstaff nine times in six days in a theatre considerably larger than the Old Vic—was not at its best in the title role.

"Henry IV, Part II," coming on the heels of the more dramatic and swifter-paced "Part I", maintained vigor, tragi-comedy on a high level and accomplishment of brilliant team-play on the stage despite the episodic nature of the piece.

Mr. Richardson's Falstaff is as splendid as that in the first part of the cycle, revealing a nicety of feeling for the strangely childish and yet worldly-cynical character he is portraying, and bringing a wonderful study in dejection without defeat to the closing renunciation scene with Michael Warre in the role of Prince Hal.

Mr. Olivier, having met a gory death as Hotspur, pops up in the second part of the minor role of Justice Shallow and displays a droll comic talent to surprise those who recall only his work before Hollywood cameras. He and Miles Malleson as Justice Silence have several extremely amusing scenes in Shakespeare's notable stire of the Bucolic life.

WOODBINE PARK IN FINE SHAPE FOR THE OPENING

Overnight Rain Will Make Track a Little on the Slow Side

Toronto, May 18 — (CP) — Despite a light overnight rain Woodbine Park's track appeared good today for the opening of the Ontario racing season and the anticipation was a crowd of upwards of 30,000 and perhaps as many as 40,000 would see the King's Plate hopefuls out for a six-furlong gallop in their first three-year-old showing before the racing customers.

The three-year-old eligibles for the King's 50 guineas and $10,000 added in the big Plate race next Saturday make their bid today in two bunches of nine horses each in the King's Plate trial — more properly called trials today because so many horses were entered the race had to be run in two sections.

In the top bracket — race No. 4 on today's program at six furlongs for $2,500 added — is the Hatch stable's standout colt Palermo, brown son of Sweepster, while in the second half, race No. 5, Palermo's half brother, Blue Sweep will match strides with the Winterbook favorite, Kingarvie, owned by the Parkwood stables.

There is no reason to feel that today's winners of the trials will necessarily finish in the front spot one week away in the King's Plate, oldest, most famous, and most continuously-run race of all gallops for thoroughbreds in Canada. But today's six-furlong gallop at least will show the customers which horses have an early and fast foot, which are quick to get away from the gate.

Whether they can last well over the one mile on furlong King's Plate route is a decision for next Saturday.

Last year the Sheriff and Uttermost won the two trials events. Uttermost went on then to win the Plate for the late Harry C. Hatch but The Sheriff did not get into the Plate money.

Chapter 3

"Yes sir, glad to meet you, sir. I hope you and Mrs. Blake will be very happy." The stablehand touched a stubby forefinger to his checked cap. "Anything I can do for you, sir - just call me. As I was saying, ma'm. I'll chain Boris good. Maybe he needs a beating with the quirt." The hound cringed. "Like Mr. Morley used to give him. He must have liked it from the way he acts now."

"No, Mike, he's had too much of that."

"Yes, ma'm, you be right there. I always said he was beat too much. I don't believe in it. But if Mr. Morley wanted to deal a strong hand to him - why that was Mr. Morley's business. But it changed his disposition."

"I'm sorry about this, Gordon. Let's hope breakfast can be pleasanter."

It was - coffee steaming from floral china cups, sizzling tidbits from a chafing dish; Audrey smiling across the napery; Oliver unobtrusive.

Later, while changing his clothes, Gordon saw an odd collection of guests arriving. One in a splattered Mercedes, another on a horse, some in roadsters, and a town car. He looked at himself in the mirror and asked, "Why didn't you read that book about winning friends? This is where they inspect you."

Downstairs where he met them, they were motley; riding breeches and striped trousers, waist-coats and slacks. Gordon shook hands, passed cigarettes and glasses, laughed at dull jokes and prayed. Their reception wasn't chilling, curt perhaps. He tried liking it, thinking that they had been guests before - neighbors of Audrey.The room was talk - loud; chi-chi and chat chat, nonsensical flimsies, above the piano accompaniment of a long-haired composer plinking out what he hoped to be a surrealistic serenade.

The diaquiris nipped the taste and spurred flagging tongues to talk of the coming hunt, of the past regattas, of hard drinking, fancy riding, nervous people. He heard a dour man in leather trousers tell of Audrey's flying: "She found herself looking down on the clouds from a height of four miles, just touched the record for light planes. The motor stalled in a spin and she pulled it out of a stall. She always got 'mike' fright when she had to report to the ground. Remember how Cliff would be waiting there panicked in laughter?"

The man turned to Gordon. "O, I say, hope you don't mind - old friends, you know. Maybe we'll have the same fun with you."

Gordon turned to his left to hear, under duress, how Audrey and her partner had once raced their stock auxiliary thirty-eight--footer and a sporting centerboard sloop. Sports; southern beagle club, Pinehurst polo, Fort Myers regatta, spoon curling in Canada, the Sunbeam Dingky races from Miami...echoes from the past life of Audrey - and her former husband.

Non-plussed, Gordon edged into a corner to a bald eagle of a man thumbing a novel. "Fine book here," grunted the man. "It has moral fiber! People losing it these days." Gordon was grateful. Here was his kind of talk, but a hook-nosed female dragged away his new friend with, "Now, Dodie, don't you begin reading. So sorry, Mr. Blake, I really must have him. Or he'll begin the weirdest conversation with you

They were all pleasant while leaving, too - the bald eagle of a man even clapped Gordon's shoulder. "You come with Audrey sometime; have dinner at my place. I've always liked her but not him..." The man's wife urged him out the door.

Mrs. Morley's new husband bowed and smiled to the last guest, thanked God silently that they were all gone and that he had passed his first test. True, some had eyed him as though he were a new toy of hers. But best of all, they had liked him, and had said they hoped he would like them too.

He told her that at night in her bedroom. She still wore her evening dress after their dinner out; black silk marquisette with a short-sleeved jacket appliqued with lame flowers, striking contrast to the alcove of tufted silk, the frivolous little powder room, the gold dressing-table.

"I want to like them so very much. I'll bet they're fine people," he said, and looked for the answer in her eyes. He lifted her chin, kissed her. Her lips were cool.

It was midnight by the bedside clock when a terrific crash awoke him. He flicked on the light, wrapped his robe around him and rushed downstairs. It had sounded as though someone had stumbled against a table on which was some glass. The living-room was empty. He heard Audrey at the head of the stair, descending. Then he saw what had happened. The picture of Morley had fallen face down; there was a piece of glass vase sticking through the torn canvas.

Gordon was holding it in both hands, surveying the irreparable damages when she came to him and studied the shredded portrait angrily. "Double damn and damn. How could it have happened? The cord had ravelled. Why wasn't it seen and changed? Where's Oliver?" The butler was not there to answer. The house was silent. "It makes me so angry," she snapped, "Such a grand portrait of him. I liked it!"

When the sour-faced Oliver appeared, he looked at the damage gloomily and suggested that the kitchen cat might have nibbled on the cord. He propped the picture against the wall, fingering the torn canvas sadly. "An horrible shame, Madam, an horrible shame."

"Go back to sleep. Thank you for coming. Nothing can be done now. I'll try to have it fixed in the morning. Good night."

Gordon arose late to a grey day - feeling lonesome. When he descended for breakfast Oliver was there to greet him automatically with, "Good morning. Madam left with the picture. She's taken it to be repaired. Madam says she will return as soon as possible."

The toast was limp; the cream curdled in his coffee. "Up and out lad," he grumbled, "can't let it get you down. All unimportant, this stuff. Get in a good hike or ride. And write; she'll be back." And with that he set off past the gardens, past the sundial to the white washed stables - air pungent with hay - of biting with chlorate of lime. The wolf-hound, leashed to a wicket door, barked at him, went back to his dreaming. Mike sauntered out, curry-comb in his fist; doffed his hat. "Fine day comin' sir. Bit thick this morning."

"Be you takin' a look at the lassies now? I'd be takin' them out soon for a scrubbin' or a run."

"Thanks, Mike, I think I might like to ride," Gordon answered.

"Fine sir; right this way." He led Gordon into the long stable down an aisle faced on each side by stalls. Boots and saddles hung from the walls. Mike took down a crop put it into Gordon's hand. "You might want to carry that when you ride. Gives a horse direction sometimes. Now over here, Mr. Blake, is Romany Strain out of the Belair stud City Flyer. She is the fastest..." His voice went on hurriedly, indistinguishable amid the mellow neighs and snorts of champion fillies and mares.

"Wait, Mike. Who's this" Gordon asked, stopping at a stall. Mike turned. They both watched a chestnut gelding; motionless with a white spot of forehead, thin heavily veined nostrils.

"This looks more like what I want - a good quiet one. I'm not much of a horseman, Mike. I'll try him."

"Not this one sir. He's standing there quiet like he was a pan of milk and I know he's likely to bust loose like a mustang."

"Can't change my mind. Take him out and saddle him," Gordon ordered.

"I'd rather not, sir!"

"Come along, Mike. You've cautioned me. The rest is up to me. I'll take a chance." Gordon was flicking the crop near the gelding's nostrils. The nostrils stiffened, tensed; the ears came forward;the eyes narrowed. "O you do, my bucko, Well! We'll see," Gordon growled. "Lead him out, Mike."

Gordon waited outside, pleased that Mike had obeyed, pleased that he could give the orders, pleased that he was tackling a dangerous horse. That always would be the way - override all difficulties he met, ride them down, conquer them.

He took a firm grip on the bridle. The horse stood there, head bowed. Mike helped him up, and the horse went into action, spun left on its hind legs and dashed at the nearest fence. It flung its rump and Gordon's leg against the steel bars. Luckily Gordon's foot was held high. The gelding twisted, bucked and stopped short and Gordon went down in mud.

Up on his feet and at the horse's head. Bridle twisted angrily, a leg over the saddle, knees clenched. Gordon brought the head up. The horse sunfished on hind legs - pawing at the air, fighting for the bit. And they rode; gallops when Gordon wanted, and at a trot when he wanted that. It was an admiring Mike who waited for them, and said, "Mr. Blake, he knows his master. He's real bad. I never let strangers take him out. I guess he won't be so hard to handle any more. Ah - wouldn't Mr. Morley have been surprised to see you stay on him."

"Who?"

"Mr. Morley - that used to be his horse. He always said the horse would never let anyone else ride him."

That put a tang in the rest of the day for Gordon, and he tapped out 1,500 words on "Moral Fiber" in his study. He phoned Ed Boden, his agent. Boden said he liked the idea and wanted to see a draft of the article. "And don't vegetate in Long Island hothouses. Get down here. I got an idea for a bunch of sketches. pieces. Why not tomorrow?"

Gordon told Boden he was out of the "quickie stuff" and back in the writing groove, and he meant it. He read the first draft of "Moral Fiber" to Audrey. It was serious reading. He should have read her J.P. McEvoy or Frank Sullivan. She needed cheering that much. She had returned disconsolate after a hunt for repairs on the portrait. They were almost impossible to make. Where was the portrait? She had left it at a shop - but had not received a definite promise that they could repair it.

Gordon and Audrey were in the living-room near the fireplace; burning logs were sparkling against the dark background; Audrey was smoking. Gordon watched her slight nervousness. He had hoped for coffee and brandy, with both of them snuggled on the couch - hand in hand - close and understanding. But that wouldn't happen - he could see that. "I really ought to take a run into town tomorrow morning," he said, "Boden has a spot for some new work, and I might go around Fifty-seventh, Street for you. There should be some one there to patch up Morley's picture."

"Patch? But I don't want it patched! Have them drive you in. Call the chauffeur or tell Oliver what time you want him. About the picture, leave that to me. You'd better run along. You'll need sleep. Kiss me good-bye in the morning."

Her hand in his was cool and soft. He looked at her hard for a moment - but the room was shadowy. Maybe she couldn't see the hurt in his eyes. Perhaps she was upset. He swallowed his pride and went upstairs and read himself to sleep.

Fatigue is From the Nerves

Fight Chronic Fatigue By Building Up Nervous Energy

You work hard and are tired—that is one kind of fatigue which is soon relieved by rest.

But chronic fatigue—always tired—is an entirely different condition. It comes from exhaustion of the nerves. When you have chronic fatigue you sooner or later become restless, nervous and irritable and simply cannot rest or sleep well.

Chronic fatigue may come from overwork, either mental or physical, or from worry and anxieties which consume nervous energy at a tremendous rate.

The appetite fails, digestion is upset and you do not get sufficient nutrition to build up nervous energy.

The treatment recommended is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food because this medicine contains the food minerals required to help restore nervous energy and vitamin B1 which is so helpful to the nerves and helps to improve digestion.

That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has been helpful to many thousands of people during the nervous strain of recent years is best proven by the very marked increase in sales. Business executives and office staffs, factory superintendents and workers, housewives and school children—all classes, benefit by this dependable and time proven food treatment for exhausted nerves and chronic fatigue.

Why not take advantage of this medicine from which you may expect such benefits as so many others have obtained. Ask your druggist for the new economy size bottle of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 60 cents a box of 60 pills; economy size bottle 180 pills for $1.50.

DAVE CASTILLOUX WINS DECISION OVER GUS MELL

Defends Canadian Welterweight Title to Prove Experience Has Edge Over Youth

By PIERRE LE MOYNE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, May 18 —(CP)— Dave Castilloux wasn't ashamed of the bald spot on the top of his head today — not after the demonstration the old master gave last night when he took a 10-round decision from 20-year-old Gus (Pell) Mell to successfully defend his Canadian welterweight championship and prove that experience, at times, has the edge over youth.

The champion's critics pointed to that bald spot before the fight to explain that the 29-year-old Castilloux, a veteran of more than 12 years of professional boxing, could never stand up 10 rounds against the fast and upcoming Mell.

Castilloux, who also holds the Canadian lightweight title, tipped the scale at 134 1-2, his opponent at 138 1-4. Both fighters are from Montreal.

Capacity Crowd.

A capacity crowd of 10,000 fans applauded the unanimous verdict returned by the three judges who awarded six rounds to Castilloux and four to Mell in a fight that sparkled with action. The cagey Castilloux actually outpunched Mell in seven rounds but lost one with a low punch.

Castilloux, who usually relies on an elusive style of approach, switched to new tactics by opening up repeatedly. This proved costly in the first half of the match when the champ took much more punishment than he could hand out himself.

Mell dropped Castilloux for one second in the second round and exploded in the third to send the champ to the resin again — this time for the count of seven. Castilloux seemed headed for defeat via the K. O. route but a lightning left jab that kept parking on Mell's chin with uncanny accuracy saved Castilloux. His opponent could never follow up whenever he landed a hard blow.

From then on Castilloux showed plenty of footwork and just kept out of danger until the overconfident Mell dropped his guard in the fifth when the champ jolted him with a right swing to the jaw. After that the whole trend of the fight changed.

Two Consecutive No-Hit Games But Loses Both

(By The Canadian Press)

If there's any competition on for the title of the world's hard luck pitcher, Bill Ens of Osler, near Saskatoon, should win without any difficulty. All he's done is pitch two consecutive no-hit games in the senior Saskatoon fastball league and lost them both. Thursday night it was a seven-inning affair which went to his opponents 1-0. The run came as a result of a walk, a passed ball and a wild pitch. Five days earlier he went nine innings only giving a single hit but three consecutive wild pitches with a man on base proved his undoing.

With a one-under-par Sammy Snead assumed the lead with a 140 aggregate midway in the Colonial invitation golf tourney at Fort Worth, Tex., yesterday, to be one stroke better than Herman Keiser of Akron. Way back were Byron Nelson and Ben Hogan.

Winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, Assault is not numbered among the entries for today's 71st running of the Withers mile at Belmont Park and looked like a race between Rippey, Hampden and Lord Boswell.

Eddie Havens and Brown Prince were rated co-favorites for the $50,000 western grand pace which winds up the Grand Circuit meet at Santa Anita Park today. Blue Again from Windsor, Ont., was also given a chance.

Three former British Open champions, Tommy Armour, Gene Sarazen and Johnny Bulla, are expected to cross the Atlantic to compete in the 1946 golf tourney which starts July 1 at St. Andrews, Scotland.

The New York Appellate Court yesterday upheld the revocation of the trainer's licence of Tom Smith by the New York State racing Commission and the Jockey Club. Smith was suspended for one year for alleged doping of Magnetic Duel at Jamaica Nov. 1.

Washington Senators yesterday purchased infielder Billy Hitchcock from Detroit Tigers for an undisclosed sum.

The four-year-old Algiers from Illinois covered the mile yesterday in 2:03, a track trotting record, to win the feature Grand circuit event at Santa Anita Park. Fez Hanover, a $35.60 long shot, was second.

The captain of the English side for three test cricket matches against India this summer is Walter Hammond, it was announced yesterday at London. Following these contests in Britain, he is expected to head the Marylebone team in an Australian tour.

Juniors-Flashes To Clash In Exhibition Game

1946 softball will be unofficially opened here on Monday night when the Goodman Juniors take on Frank Sedore's Belleville Flashes in an exhibition tilt at the Fair Grounds, junior coach Vern Goyer announced today. He added that the practice scheduled for the junior mushballers tonight has been cancelled.

Goyer stated that his team has not been selected as yet and there are still openings for ambitious juniors.

The softball public is cordially invited to attend the pre-season tilt on Monday night. The teams will tee off at 6:30 p.m.

Secret Report of Mass Murder Outbreak Among Leopardmen Of Nigeria Being Sent to London

By RONALD BEDFORD

London, May 18 (Reuters) — Grisly details of more than 200 mutilated corpses, their jugular veins ripped open with leopard claws, form the basis of a secret report of Nigeria's secret societies being sent to London from Lagos, Nigeria, marked for the immediate attention of Colonial Secretary George Hall.

The report deals with the latest mass murder outbreak among the age-old Nigerian secret society of Leopardmen.

Little is known in London at the moment of the recent flare-up among the blood-sucking Leopardmen beyond the fact that more than 100 arrests have been made in connection with the murders. Twelve Leopardmen have been convicted of murder and another 38 are awaiting trial.

The secret society was suppressed prior to the First Great War, but the depletion of the administrative and police staffs in the province gave it an opportunity to start up again.

The initiation rites into the society consists of a blood bond between man and leopard and observers who have studied the cult report that when a man died the leopard to which he is bonded dies also. The reverse is the case if the leopard dies first. A Leopardman wears iron claws over his fingers.

After attacking his victim from behind, the Leopardman tears the jugular vein, rips the flesh — then drinks the blood and tears off and eats strips of flesh.

Meetings to Discuss Milk Subsidy Change

Toronto, May 18 (CP) — Two meetings are to be held by milk producers to discuss the change in milk subsidies announced on Thursday night, Harry Scott, of Norwich, Ont., president of the Ontario Concentrated Milk Producers Association, said Friday.

He had said earlier his association was "disappointed" with the change and his comment came as Mayor R. H. Saunders of Toronto, announced plans to protest against the milk price rise expected to follow the action.

Mr. Scott announced at Woodstock, that the meetings would be held, probably within a week, at London, Ont., and at Brockville. Originally it had been planned to hold a mass meeting of concentrated and whole milk producers and cheese producers May 23 in Toronto.

He said concentrated milk producers were interested in the possibility of upward revision of subsidies on milk used for cheese production and for processing.

Mayor Saunders said lifting of the two-cent-a-quart subsidy "will place a burden of $2,660,000 a year on Toronto taxpayers." He said he would call a meeting of the Board of Control to make a formal protest.

"It amounts to lifting the price ceiling on milk," he declared. "The government talks about holding the ceiling on prices to keep down the cost of living, yet increases the price of a vital commodity by 20 per cent with this move."

Mayor Saunders said the milk subsidy was "one of the greatest benefits of all" because it went directly into the home of the small wage-earner."

C. of C. Directors to Confer With Legion on Question Of Housing in the City

Directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce will confer with Charles D. Lundy, chairman, Rehabilitation Committee, Canadian Legion, Branch 99, on the question of housing possibilities in this city, at its weekly luncheon next Thursday.

Decision to hold the conference was arrived at after Chamber President Lorne McDougall read a communication from the Housing Enterprises of Canada, Ltd., to the directorate and guests at their meeting here on Thursday.

Considerable discussion resulted following the reading of various statements in the communication, and directors felt that a conference between Legion representatives of housing committees should assist in clearing the air.

Due to Influx

The communication stated in one place that "from our observations overcrowding in Belleville was due to a great extent to influx of air force personnel and dependents owing to the proximity of air stations at Trenton and Mountain View."

Discussing this point, directors felt that while some excess population arrived in the city due to this reason, there was no actual overcrowding due to service personnel. They agreed with the Housing Enterprises Ltd., statement that "approximately 500 new residences had been built here since 1939," but looked askance on the statement that "1,000 apartments had been made available by re-conversion."

"There have been quite a number of houses turned into apartments," remarked one director, "but I think the figure 1,000 is grossly exaggerated."

Not Satisfied

Present construction costs are such, the communication read, "that the rentals we have to charge range from $37 to $50 per month on the basis of 2, 3 or 4 bedrooms, and we were not satisfied in our own mind that Belleville could stand 50 rental houses at these rates."

The company stated, however, that if Belleville is satisfied that 50 units could be rented at the above rates, it would be glad to send a representative here to further study the situation.

Mayor Frank Follwell stated that he had been in conversation with the chairman of the Rehabilitation Committee of the Canadian Legion Branch here, which is studying the housing situation and gathering data as to prospective residents, and he had intimated that a number of the 60 or seventy applicants for houses here, would be able to pay such rentals as mentioned in the communication.

Housing Enterprises, the communication stated, construct, operate and maintain these rental projects for a period of fifty years, and where the municipalities co-operate with it in providing land, or services, an agreement is prepared which provides that at the end of the amortization period, land and buildings are turned back to the municipality for the sum of $1.00, subject only to any obligation for repayment to the Dominion Government for any advances which they might make under their 2½ per cent guarantee return to Enterprises, Ltd.

Will Call in F.B.I. In Airline Crash

Richmond, Va., May 18 (AP) — As authorities continued attempts to identify positively 18 or 27 passengers killed when a Viking airliner fell through murky weather to crash in swampy pineland here yesterday, H. G. Myers, Civil Aeronautics authority inspector, said the Federal Bureau of Investigation will be called in "because there are some things we can't account for."

He said two pistols, a part of another gun of some sort, two stilettos, a pair of handcuffs and a police whistle were discovered amid the twisted wreckage.

He said repeated explosions heard by at least one witness following the crash could have been bullets going off.

The identity of nine of the bodies burned beyond recognition when the DC-3, on a chartered run from Newark, N.J., to Atlanta, Ga., was forced down, was determined from cards, letters and other articles found in their clothing. No Canadians were abroad.

Effects of the woodworkers strike were spreading today, slowly as yet, but expected to gain momentum if the dispute continues.

The Dallas Morning News said last night in a front page statement that drastic cuts in advertising lineage, news content and circulation would result from the loggers strike.

Other newspapers in British Columbia and in the United States as far east as Oklahoma contemplated shortage of newsprint.

About 50 carpenters have been forced into idleness in Vancouver, Kootenay fruit farming representatives had appealed in efforts to obtain 500,000 boxes for a record fruit fruit crop, while a laundry in Nelson had installed oil-burning equipment to maintain heat.

Protests Follow Lifting of Federal Milk Subsidy

(By The Canadian Press)

Amidst a number of protests from civic bodies and women's organizations about the Federal government's removal of the two cents a quart subsidy on fluid milk C. M. Meek, chairman of the Ontario Milk Board, explained last night that milk tickets purchased at present rates will automatically drop two cents in value when the subsidy ceases June 1.

The Federal government announced Wednesday that the subsidy would cease as of June 1, and that the question would be placed back before provincial milk boards. Apparently no provincial board will undertake to continue the subsidy dropped by the Federal government.

Meek explained at Toronto that "the recent announcement means that distributors will revert on June 1 to the legal prices in the various markets in Ontario. Milk tickets purchased at the subsidized price and in the hands of consumers on June 1 will be worth two cents per quart less than the legal prices which will be in effect on June 1. Consumers using these subsidized tickets will have to pay the difference of two cents per quart."

Civic groups, consumer and producer associations protested the federal edict. Harry Scott of Woodstock, president of the Ontario Concentrated Milk Producers Association, announced mass meetings of milk producers at London and Brockville to discuss the change.

Saunders Protests Rise

Mayor Robert Saunders of Toronto estimated the two cent increase would cost Toronto milk consumers $2,661,000 a year and the Toronto Board of Control sent a telegram of protest to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, en route to London, England. Toronto Members of Parliament have been invited to attend a special meeting of the Board of Control today.

Ontario Agriculture Minister T. L. Kennedy said there was practically no chance of the Provincial government paying the subsidy. "We're not picking up that hot potato," was the way he put it.

At Victoria Premier John Hart said that the authority would not pass from the Federal to the provincial government until June 20, according to a message he had received from Ottawa.

Increase Had to Come

The chairman of the Alberta Milk Board, A. T. Neale, said at Edmonton that "this price increase had to come some time, sooner or later."

In Saskatchewan Alderman A. C. Ellison of Regina filed a resolution urging the Federal government to reconsider its decision. G. M. Smith, secretary of the Moose Jaw Milk Producers Association, said the same thing as other provincial authorities across the country — that the Federal decision means an automatic increase in price of two cents a quart.

In Manitoba the Provincial Labor-Progressive party called a public meeting for May 28 to protest against "numerous inflationary measures."

Coronary Artery Disease Found Among Young Men

Philadelphia, May 18 (AP) — United States army studies have upset previous concepts that one of the worst of all heart maladies —coronary artery disease — is rare among young men.

Dr. Wallace M. Yater, civilian consultant to the Army Institute of Pathology, and two army-doctor colleagues, reported today to the American College of Physicians that approximately 800 cases, 414 of them fatal, had been found in the American army among men between the ages of 20 and 39.

Marked by degenerative congestion of the arteries supplying blood to the pumping muscles of the heart, the disease is one of the commonest causes of death among persons over 40.

In 1943, it claimed 120,725 of 426,391 Americans killed by all forms of heart disease. It strikes men three times as frequently as women. Its specific cause is unknown, and there is no known cure for it. Treatment consists of use of certain drugs designed to dilate the congested vessels, and the avoidance of exertion.

"In all the world's medical literature," said Dr. Yater, "we have been able to find only 404 cases previously reported for the 20 to 39 year age-group, and yet we found 800 of them in the army in the course of the war. We can only conclude that young men have been afflicted with, and have died from, this disease all along —and that it has been unrecognized."

STILL WAVING

The Swiss flag is one of the oldest in Europe, and was used as early as 1339.

"I've cut my fuel bills -you can too with a FAIRBANKS-MORSE AUTOMATIC Coal Stoker"

"I've saved enough on my heating costs to pay for my Stoker. Not only does it burn cheaper grade coal, but the automatic controls feed the coal into the furnace as it is needed, getting every bit of heat from it. There's no waste. The house is more comfortable, too, even on the coldest mornings."

Now is the time to decide on a Fairbanks-Morse Stoker. Stoker coal is available.

IRANIANS ATTACK AZERBAIJAN PROVINCE REPORT

Negotiable Bonds Form Most of Loot From Minden Bank

Bank Robbers Toss Away $100,000 in Registered Bonds

Toronto, May 20 — (CP) — A gang of bank robbers who looted a Minden, Ont., bank of $100,000 in registered bonds which later were found beneath bushes in suburban Toronto, also made off with unregistered bonds totalling "many thousands of dollars" and several hundred dollars in cash, police said today.

Toronto and Provincial Police combed the city for traces of the robbers after John S. MacKenzie and his wife found the registered bonds and gave them to police. MacKenzie was driving along a road near Don Mills, north of here, when he halted to investigate pieces of paper drifting along beside the car. His discovery of the bonds, stolen from the Bank of Commerce branch at Minden, 60 miles north of Lindsay, was the first indication of the robbery.

Police believe the robbers drove to the lonely section of North York township with 30 safety deposit boxes taken from the bank and there separated the unregistered bonds and money from the registered bonds. They then piled the registered bonds in stacks under the bushes.

At North York police station where MacKenzie took the bonds, police discovered a receipt from the Minden bank among them. Investigation at the bank revealed robbers had broken a window, chopped a hole in the vault wall and made off with the safety deposit boxes and the silver.

"I was driving along the road slowly when I saw these pieces of paper blowing around and stopped to see what they were," said Mr. MacKenzie. "I noticed they were bonds and I started a search of the area and found the rest of them in some bushes."

MacKenzie said the securities were in a loose pile under some bushes and some had blown onto the roadside. There were bonds ranging in value from $50 to $1,000, railroad bonds, mining issues, school debentures, and War Savings certificates.

Bank manager Thomas Brignall said the recovered securities comprised most of the loot, but that a small box of silver was also taken.

Provincial Police, under Inspector W. Franks of the Criminal Investigation Department, had little information to work on. It was reported that two strange men were seen loitering near the bank early Sunday. They were said to have been in a car but descriptions were incomplete.

It was believed the number of deposit boxes taken might have been greater than 30, and that a large number of unregistered bonds had been stolen in addition to those found near today.

After forcing their way thru a side window, the robbers moved cabinets and cupboards away from the vault wall and chopped a hole with crowbars, large enough for a man to pass through, in the vault wall. Once inside they removed the plate from the inner side of the vault door.

SEARCH FOR SECOND VICTIM

Blind River, Ont., May 20 (CP) —Dragging operations continued today on White Lake, 90 miles north of here, for the second victim of Saturday's double drowning which took the lives of two brothers from Detroit, Norman and Charles G. Hawkins.

On overturned canoe was found last night. Details of the accident were not known.

The body of Norman Hawkins was recovered late Saturday afternoon by Monroe Wents, of Chicago, about five miles south of his White Lake farm.

Weather Forecast

Toronto, May 20 (CP) —Synopsis at 7.30 a.m.: In the areas east of the Mississippi and north to Lake Erie there is a northward movement of warm air. The remainder of the continent east of the Rockies is covered by relatively cooler air. Interaction between these two air masses has developed a centre of low pressure presently centred over central Michigan which is expected to move northeastward. After the passage of the low eastward rain will cease, to be followed by clearing conditions. Weather in the Prairie Provinces is clear.

Fred Rose Trial Is Adjourned Until Wednesday

Montreal, May 20 —(CP)— Trial of Fred Rose, charged with conspiring to communicate information to the Soviet Union, was adjourned today until Wednesday at the request of Crown Prosecutor F. Philippe Brais.

Mr. Brais asked for the adjournment, explaining that in view of the continuation in Ottawa of the trial of Edward Mazerall on espionage charges documents necessary for the trial here of the Montreal-Cartier Labor-Progressive member of parliament were not available.

Some 60 prospective jurors filled the court to the exclusion of the general public for the opening of the trial of the 38-year-old Montreal member who has been free on $25,000.

Police officers at the door of the courtroom examined credentials of all persons who wanted entry. Only the press and prospective jurors were allowed into the oak panelled, high-windowed courtroom.

At conclusion of the trial starting today, Rose will undergo separate trial on four charges under the Official Secrets Act of unlawfully communicating information to Russia.

London's New Airport Will Cut Travel Time

By RONALD BEDFORD

London, May 20 — (Reuters) — Within the next few weeks passengers from Canada and the United States will arrive in London by air at Heath Row, Britain's mammoth new trans-Atlantic airport, to watch the forthcoming victory celebrations. Their first impression will be a sorry one.

If it is raining they will have to negotiate a morass of mud when they cross from the concrete runway to the tents of dilapidated former R. A. F. huts which will serve as customs' houses, wash-rooms and refreshment rooms. All around them they will see piles of upturned earth, trucks trundling back and forth and an army of workmen engaged on construction jobs.

One redeeming feature may gladden their depression — the airport is only 14 miles from London, compared with 118 miles for the present airport at Hurn, near Bournemouth, which serves the capital. A passenger coach service will whisk them speedily to the metropolis in place of the 2½-hour journey by rail from Hurn.

Two principal American airline companies who will be using the new airport — Pan - American Airways and American Overseas Airlines. A Pan-American official said: "There is no time to do very much for the comfort of passengers when they land, so we plan for the time being to give them the bare necessities of a refresher. There will be facilities for a wash and a cup of tea."

EXPIRING TRUCES ENGAGE PRESIDENT IN BUSIEST WEEK

Principals in Coal Strike Say Privately They Expect Mines Seizure By Mid-Week

Washington, May 20 (AP) — Fast-expiring truces in United States railroad and coal strikes today plunged President Truman into one of the most demanding weeks of his administration.

The railroad truce—arranged only minutes before Saturday's scheduled walkout of 250,000 engineers and trainmen— ends 4 p.m. Thursday.

Bituminous miners are due to leave their jobs two days later under terms of the two-week strike interruption ordered by John L. Lewis after the pits had been shut down 42 days.

With the railroads already taken over in a futile attempt to lift the threat of a country-wide transportation tieup whose effects would have been felt in Canada, principals on both sides of the coal controversy acknowledged privately that they look for seizure of the mines by mid-week.

Mr. Truman, who first cancelled but then reinstated his weekend flight to Missouri, planned to hurry back to Washington today after receiving an honorary degree from William Jewell College.

But there was no immediate resumption directly of negotiations of wage and working rule demands which Mr. Truman said he was confident would result in "further progress" toward a settlement.

"Right now we are talking to each side independently, canvassing the entire situation," said presidential assistant John Steelman. "The conversations are almost on an hour-to-hour basis. The two sides will be brought together at the most advantageous time."

Both brotherhood and management spokesmen said they expected that to be "sometime" today.

Man's Body Found Floating in Creek

Sudbury, May 20 —(CP)— Up to noon today no one had come forward to identify the body of a man, apparently between 55 and 60, which was found floating against the bank of a lonely spot in Junction Creek Saturday. Police have said the body must have been in the water some eight months.

A police squad had been at the cemetery all morning examining the body, which apparently bears no identifying marks.

Found by 14-year-old Jack Barbro, the body was floating face down in the water about 150 yards east of the wooden foot bridge on Douglas St. It was clad in a shirt and overalls, and one report said had army boots on.

Police said the corpse may have floated down from some point up the river during the spring floods and became stuck in the weeds which grow thickly in the water at the place where it was found.

Police Chief Fred Jarvis said he has several leads, and identification may be possible tonight.

World May Fall Short One-Third Of Food Again in 1947 Say Experts

Washington, May 20 (AP)—An estimate that the world may fall a third short of food again next year challenged experts of 18 countries and five international organizations as they met today to combat famine.

The estimate came from the United Nations Food and Agriculture organization—30,500,000 metric tons of wheat needed in shortage areas, 18,000,000 to 20,000,000 tons available from surplus countries.

And from the Director General of F.A.O., Sir John Orr, the delegates heard a warning that:

"The position seems to be that following the 1946 harvest the world will be as badly off for food as it was at the time of the 1945 harvest because this time we will have no great reserves of food carried over from the previous year to fall back on."

A message from President Truman and an address by former President Herbert Hoover, just returned from a world survey of famine conditions, were the first items on the conference program.

Sir John said in a statement prepared for the delegates that there must be decisions without delay on:

1. How the 1946 harvest can be husbanded to cover the period until the next harvest.
2. How to get maximum production in the 1947 harvest.
3. Arrangements to keep the whole problem under continuous review so that any adverse development can be met immediately.

WILL GO TO CAMP WITH LEPER WIFE

Gen. Douglas MacArthur heartily endorsed the plea by Maj. Hans Hornbostel, 65, once one of his subordinates, for permission to live in a leper camp with his afflicted wife. Hornbostel cabled MacArthur, asking the Supreme Commander for such help as he could give to gain admittance for the Major into the federal leprosarium at Carville, La. His 53-year-old wife, Gertrude, contracted leprosy in a Japanese internment camp. Major Hornbostel, who is not afflicted with leprosy, is shown with his wife as they talk with Dr. J. C. 'Disorderly Minorities' In Japan Must Cease Mass Violence—MacArthur

Tokyo, May 20 (AP)—Gen. MacArthur demanded today that "disorderly minorities" in Japan cease "mass violence and the physical process of intimidation" or he would see that they did.

The statement, apparently aimed at strong Leftist pressure which threatened Shigeru Yoshida's efforts to form a Conservative cabinet, gave the premier-designate respite to complete his task.

Yoshida's headquarters reported that final announcement of a heavily-Conservative cabinet was held up only by clarification of the eligibility of Dr. Shigeru Nasu for agriculture minister.

Yoshida was reported awaiting a decision from supreme headquarters on Nasu's acceptability.

The supreme commander's statement mentioned no specific instances of violence and did not identify the "minor elements," but Brig.-Gen. Frayne Baker, supreme headquarters public relations officer, said Gen. MacArthur had in mind a demonstration staged Sunday by Left-wing groups which oppose Yoshida and

DRASTIC HOUSING SITUATION SAYS LEGION PRESIDENT

Alex Walker Calls for "Near Miracles" of War at Opening Meeting of Canadian Legion

By DOUG HOW

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, May 20—(CP)—Sounding the opening note on one of its major issues, President Alex Walker, C.B.E., of Calgary, told the 11th Biennial Convention of the Canadian Legion today he was "not satisfied that everything possible is being done to remedy the drastic housing situation."

In a presidential address prepared for delivery at the opening business session of the first post-war convention, he called for a repetition of the "near miracles" of the war because, "we intend to see" that a solution is found.

To optimistic employment predictions by Reconstruction Minister Howe, Mr. Walker retorted:—

"This year has nearly half elapsed and the situation still is none too bright. Promises are encouraging but the payoff is when you sign your name on the pay roll."

The Legion's wartime president aimed his words at a record four-day convention of roughly 1,200 delegates, men and women, from Canada and the United States.

These are the keynotes of the Legion's problems as Alex Walker saw them.

Parliament—There are a number of Legion proposals not accepted by the government. When they are, "we will have completed the first phase of our rehabilitation work." The second will be "to resume our traditional course of watchdog of veterans' interests."

DECLARES HITLER IS BECOMING GERMAN LEGEND

AP Writer Sees, However, No Widespread Desire to Have Him Back

By HAL BOYLE

Berlin, May 20 (ARP)—Adolph Hitler, alive or dead, is becoming a German legend—comparable to Siegfried or Friedrich Barbarossa.

One year after his cloudy downfall, the little man with the mustache still has a strange hold upon the affections of his defeated people.

They don't curse him as the Italians curse Mussolini. Hitler has a secure place in their minds and memories because the Teuton clings to his leader longer than other folk.

Germans Have Hero Concept

He is born to the hero-concept.

Many Germans who disliked Nazi extremes and now foresee decades of humiliation and economic slavery for their nation still look back forgivingly on the man who brought them to this sorry dilemma. They find excuses for the inhuman excesses practised in his name. They want to keep him in their hearts without stain out of old loyalty, as a fond son would overlook the sins of a senile father.

"Hitler was a sincere idealist who tried to do the best he could for his country," one well-educated girl told me. "He was German through and through. He was betrayed by men around him who withheld information from him.

"In the last months of the war he broke down under the strain and did things he normally wouldn't have done. He wasn't crazy, but sometimes he didn't know quite what he was doing."

There is no widespread wish to have Hitler back, but even those who opposed him are glad he isn't being tried as a war criminal.

2 REPORTS GIVEN LUNAN, MAZERALL TOLD COMMISSION

Some Evidence As Taken by Commission Read at Mazerall Trial At Ottawa

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—Edward Mazerall, 30, National Research Council engineer, testified to the Royal Commission on Espionage that Gordon Lunan, Canadian information service official, had asked him to obtain information "for the Soviet Union" it was disclosed today at Mazerall's trial on a conspiracy charge.

Lunan also faces espionage charges.

This morning's hearing was devoted to reading of parts of the evidence Mazerall had given before the Royal Commission. In the evidence he said that two reports which he had given Lunan were "innocuous." While they were marked "confidential" he did not consider the information they contained to be highly secret or of great importance.

J. R. Cartwright, special crown counsel resumed reading the commission evidence after Chief Justice J. C McRuer had ruled, with the jury excluded, on sections of the evidence which Mr. Cartwright had said he proposed reading and to which R. A. Hughes, counsel had objected.

At a later stage of the commission evidence Mazerall said he had provided Lunan with two reports.

Says He Met Lunan Three Times

He had met Lunan three times at "meetings" at other peoples' homes and had later had lunch with him at a hotel and had turned over two reports. One was a "long term proposal" by Dr. W. R. McKinley head of the R.C.A.F. section of the National Research Council on "future aids to air navigation." The other was a report Mazerall had prepared on a distance indicator for civil aids to navigation.

Both reports had been prepared for presentation to the Commonwealth Radio and Civil Aviation Conference in London.

Reports on an airborne distance indicator concerned the use of radar principles but differed from conventional radar and was greatly simplified and contained new principles.

The Americans were working on the same idea and there was a race which the Canadian scientists won. Existence of the new equipment was known to a number of people and had been demonstrated at Indianapolis.

Mazerall said that while the Research Council report was marked "confidential," "it did not mean an awful lot," Designation of reports as confidential was "a matter of form."

Mazerall had been asked by Mr. Justice Taschereau, member of the commission: "You knew perfectly well that you should not give that to Lunan?"

Mazerall's Reply

"Yes I did and as I say I could have given him more important reports which would have been

Italy's 'Black Market' So Open Above Board it is Almost 'White'

By WILLIAM BOSS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Rome, May 20 (CP)—(By Airmail)—Italy's tremendous "black market" is so open and above board that it is almost "white."

You go out into the market-place and buy, as you would anywhere else; or you go into a restaurant to eat and drink anything you please—as long as you have enough money.

One-third of the national income last year—no less than 500,000,000 lire ($2,500,000,000)—resulted from unregulated trading and retrading in both rationed and unrationed goods in short supply.

In post-war Italy, without price control, fleecing the buying public is not a crime. But what goes on in Italy in the open would be black-market trading anywhere else in present-day Europe.

Lack of transport means wide discrepancies in price between localities. Local surpluses tend to remain right where they are. The Sicilian orange is an example.

In Sicily one is almost paid to cart oranges from the groves. Oranges cost seven cents a pound in Calabira, across the Messina Straits. They cost twice as much in Rome, half as much again in Milan.

At San Remo, gambling resort on the Italian Riviera, they reach 21 cents a pound while at Ventimiglia, on the Italo-French border just 14 miles further on, they are 30 cents.

Tobacco is rationed in Italy. The official price for cigarets is insignificant, but any Italian can buy the same brands on the streets from regular little stalls at three cents apiece. British cigarets fetch five cents in the same market and the more popular American brands sell at nine cents.

Leaving a Canadian cigaret on the table after a meal in place of a tip ensures the most extravagant service for regular customers.

Virtually everyone in Italy supplements his income by trading "on the side" in something. Clerks, porters and shop clerks all have sidelines. Italians live in whole or in part by "black market" deals.

Early in the war rentals were pegged but only for as long as present tenants remained in occupancy. Two of my friends work in the same office. One now pays 30 cents a week for rent; the other pays $32.50 for almost identical accommodation.

Proclaim Martial Law in Tabriz, Appoint Governor

Azerbaijan Nationals Given Orders to Defend Selves

London, May 20 (AP)— Radio reports from Tabriz, capital of Azerbaijan Province, indicated today that civil strife—"fratricide and bloody battle"—had broken out in Iran between troops of the province and the Iranian central government.

The Tabriz radio, as quoted by BBC and Reuters, said that Iranian central government troops had attacked Azerbaijan. Reuters quoted the broadcast as saying the attack came from Kurdistan.

Martial law was proclaimed in Tabriz, BBC quoted the broadcast as saying, and a "Mr. Padvam" was appointed military governor of the city.

Reuters said the broadcast announced an 11 p.m. curfew and proclaimed the death penalty for violators.

BBC said the Tabriz station interrupted a transmission of recorded music yesterday to announce the alleged attack.

Then, according to BBC, the Tabriz announcer added:

To Defend Democracy

"Azerbaijan supporters have received orders to defend themselves. We shall defend freedom and democracy.

"Shame to the treacherous hands which are dragging us into fratricide and bloody battle!

"Each supporter must put up a stiff resistance. Everyone must make sacrifices. Let the world know in whose hands the destiny of suffering of the Iranian nation lies.

"We shall defend freedom to the last breath and the last Azerbaijani.

"It is not known on whose order the Tehran forces have launched their attack.

"Assault and savagery have begun."

On Eve of Deadline

The reported outbreaks came on the eve of the deadline fixed by the United Nations Security Council for a report by the Iranian central government on whether Russian troops had been evacuated from Iran. Premier Ahmed Qavam of Iran informed the council Saturday night that he was still unable to ascertain whether the Russians had withdrawn.

Negotiations between officials of the self-styled Azerbaijan democratic government and the Iranian central government on the possible return of Azerbaijan to the jurisdiction of Tehran broke down last week.

Desire Peaceful Settlement

Tehran, May 20. (AP)—The Tabriz radio announced Sunday night that Iranian Central Government forces had attacked the "democratic garrison" at the Azerbaijan town of Sainkaleh (Shahindaj) with mortar at 5 p.m., Sunday.

Sainkaleh is about 100 miles south of Tabriz, capital of the self-proclaimed autonomous government of Azerbajan province and only a short distance inside the Azerbaijan frontier.

"This is how Qavam (Iranian Premier Ahmed Qavam) desires a peaceful settlement of the Azerbaijan differences, but we are ready," declared the broadcast announcing the attack.

"There may be death, but no retreat."

The broadcast added that a 9 p.m., curfew had been proclaimed in all Azerbaijan cities and said that Sadi Apedegan, secretary of the Azerbaijan democratic party's central committee, had been named military governor of Tabriz.

The same broadcast reported that Iranian government troops had launched an attack three days ago against Kurdish forces at Saqiz, on the Azerbaijan-Kurdistan border 64 miles south of Lake Urmia. The Kurds were reported to have taken 37 prisoners in the fighting.

DR. GEORGE F. LAUGHLIN
(Toronto—Belleville)
(Contributed)

Prominent as a pathologist, Dr. George F. Laughlin, died May 12th at his home, 495 Broadview Ave., Toronto, after a week's illness. He had been pathologist at the Toronto East General Hospital since its opening in 1930 and for the last 20 years had held a similar position at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Dr. Laughlin was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Laughlin, Belleville, and attended Albert College. He interrupted his university course to enlist for service in Egypt in the First Great War. Returning to Canada, he completed his medical studies and took post-graduate work under Prof. J. J. MacKenzie. Before joining the staff of the Toronto East General Hospital he was a member of the teaching staff of the University of Toronto.

Dr. Laughlin was known for the rapid test for syphilis which bears his name. While with the department of pathology of the Hospital for Sick Children in 1925 he published an article dealing with his work on oil pneumonia which is frequently quoted by medical writers.

Chairman of the section of pathology of the Academy of Medicine, he served for some years on the council. He was a past president and active member of the Toronto East Medical Association. A keen sportsman, he was active in golf, lawn bowling and tennis and was a member of the Rosedale Golf Club. He was a member of the United Church.

Duke of Wellington Coin Found On Hitchings' Farm

A link with the historical past when United Empire Loyalists and other sturdy British stock settled in this district came to light the other day on the farm of James Hitchings, Front Road of Ameliasburg township, Prince Edward County with the discovery of a coin dated 1816.

Mr. Hitchings found the coin while readying ground for potatoes. It is in a good state of preservation and bears on one side a relief picture of the Duke of Wellington surrounded by the inscription "The Illustrious Wellington."

On the reverse side is pictured a harp surmounted by a crown, and the inscription "Waterloo."

The coin is believed to have been struck in commemoration of Wellington's victory at the Battle of Waterloo, and is said by experts to be of Irish origin.

Mr. Hitchings' farm is the former Martin Rush homestead, a crown property which was deeded to the Rush forebears in the days of the U.E.L.

Stones of the old basement of the former log cabin that was the first home of these sturdy pioneers of the district are still apparent. The coin was found near where the basement is situated and it is presumed it was one of those brought here from the old country by members of the Rush family.

100 Tulip Blooms Stolen From Cedar Street Garden

Each Spring without fail brings several complaints from local horticulturists of flower beds being damaged by unprincipled parties, but an occurrence on Cedar Street over the weekend possibly represented an even greater reason for complaint.

One year ago Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Adams, 67 Cedar Street, received from their son Albert, then serving in Holland a package of 200 tulip bulbs which were duly planted in the Adams' garden. The tulips showed splendid promise this Spring and the past few days saw the bulbs break into full bloom. At least that was the picture on Saturday. Sunday morning the tulips were gone—picked during the night by some unknown persons.

Reporting the incident Mrs. Adams stated approximately 100 blooms, including 15 different varieties, had been picked. Only a species of rare black bulbs had not been picked.

POLICE BLOTTER

84 Panes of Glass Broken in Machine Shop

To discover exactly 84 panes of glass broken in one wall of his Fruit Machinery Co., machine shop premises on Front Street, was the rather unpleasant discovery made over the weekend by Mr. F. B. Foley, plant manager.

Every pane in the one wall of the building, together with many of the sashes, had been broken, apparently by juveniles throwing stones, it was reported by Mr. Foley to the local police.

Loses Purse, Money

It was a rather unprofitable market day on Saturday for Miss Helen Milligan, R.R. 6, Belleville, who reported to police that after disposing of farm produce on the local market she had lost her purse containing some $60 in cash. Miss Milligan told police she thought she had dropped the purse in a local grocery store.

Complaints of panhandlers plying their trade on Front St., were received by police who ordered the offending parties to "move on", while Bancroft police reported a black Plymouth sedan stolen from that village, Saturday evening.

Rats or Weasels Destroy 160 Chicks

One hundred and sixty week-old chicks cannot of their own accord just disappear from their brooder house without leaving a trace and when this occurs it is but a natural presumption that the young chicks have been stolen.

And that is exactly the thought which entered the mind of Mrs. Oscar Stapley, "Stoney Lonesome", when Friday and Saturday nights the above number of chicks disappeared leaving only 40 of the original 200. And Mrs. Stapley was correct. The chicks had been stolen by a thief in the night, but the thief was not human.

Mrs. Stapley notified provincial police of her loss and a thorough search of the chicken house Monday morning brought the chicks to light, piled in two neat piles on the chicken house rafters. The chicks had been killed either by weasels or rats in a two-night raid on the chicken colony.

The council approved three new rules for admission of new members of the United Nations only after previous investigation of the council.

PRIME MINISTER KING REACHES U.K. FOR CONFERENCE

Foreign Secretary Bevin is Expected to Give Views on Paris Meeting

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 20 —(CP Cable) —The Commonwealth discussions, with Canada represented for the first time, resumed this afternoon at 10 Downing Street, it was learned officially.

Earlier it was expected that the informal talks between representatives of Britain and the Dominions would not continue until tomorrow. But the change was made suddenly when Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who arrived yesterday, said he was ready to begin consultations. British officials had expected he would want a day in which to prepare for the discussions.

Before the talks got under way again, a spokesman at 10 Downing Street, residence of Prime Minister Attlee, said Foreign Secretary Bevin probably would address the gathering but that this was not decided definitely.

Mr. Bevin is expected to give his views on the abortive Big Four foreign ministers conference in Paris.

Mr. King's first top-level appointment this morning was with Prime Minister Smuts of South Africa who called on the Canadian Prime Minister at the latter's hotel. It is believed possible that Field Marshal Smuts described conditions in Germany on the basis of his visit there recently.

Later Viscount Addison, Dominions Secretary, lunched with Mr. King at his hotel.

Mr. King arrived Sunday and will join in the discussions started several weeks ago by the Dominions leaders under the chairmanship of Prime Minister Attlee. Prime Minister Chifley of Australia has returned to Canberra after taking part in the early discussions but the Pacific Commonwealth is represented by Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, minister for external affairs.

New Zealand is represented by Walter Nash, deputy prime minister, in the absence of his chief, Peter Fraser, and Prime Minister Smuts represents South Africa.

Current Trends to be Indicated.

Mr. Bevin will give the Dominions' leaders details of current trends of British foreign policy as well as his opinions on the stonewall difficulties which blocked progress in Paris and led to adjournment until June 15. Mr. Bevin probably will go into details in interpreting for the Dominions the attitude Russia took on specific issues and will make an effort to answer persistent questions of what the Soviet Union "is getting at."

All meetings will be private and although 10 Downing Street plans to hold press conferences nightly there is little likelihood that, there will be any great amount of official information given out.

No one here anticipates that far-reaching decisions will be taken. It is emphasized in the Dominion and Foreign Offices that this is "a family talk."

But it certain that the Dominion leaders will be filled in personally on every vital question of British policy whether it directly concerns the Commonwealth or not.

They will have the opportunity to freely express their own views and these consultations — now that all four Dominions are represented — should go a long way in strengthening Mr. Bevin's hand in further Paris negotiations.

GREASE CAUSES BLAZE

Trained Nurses Badly Needed By Ont. Hospitals

(By The Canadian Press)

Shortage of trained nurses at one Ontario institution — the Queen Alexandra sanatorium at London—has reached such a critical stage that surgical operations may come to a standstill and if a remedy isn't found many of the waiting surgical cases "will be beyond medical help."

That was the declaration of Dr. D. W. Crombie, superintendent of the sanatorium, who explained "we will do everything possible to catch up on our backlog of operational patients—because if something is not done soon many of these will be beyond medical help."

The shortage of trained nurses, apparent for some time, became critical almost overnight, a Canadian Press survey showed today. The Weston and Muskoka sanatoriums also reported a critical shortage and the shortage was acute at Chatham. In Hamilton hospitals now are crowded to capacity with a total of 821 patients in the Hamilton General and Mount Hamilton hospitals.

Miss Priscilla Campbell Reg. N., administrator of, the Chatham Public General Hospital said a nine-month training course for nursing assistants would be instituted shortly by hospitals throughout Ontario whose facilities are being taxed to capacity.

Decision to take such a step was made at a recent Toronto meeting of the Registered Nurses Association and the Ontario Hospital Association, she said.

In the proposed course the educational requirements for enrolment as a nursing assistant will be lower than those for trained nurses and the age limit will be higher.

Kinsmen Club Receives $570 In Cancer Drive

Although the local Kinsmen Club failed to reach the objective of $750 for which it has pledged itself as contribution to the Cancer Research Fund, a total of $570 was raised during their special tag day on Saturday, it was announced today by President Newton Wilbur.

"With the rainy weather taken into consideration I think the tag day results were very encouraging," stated Mr. Wilbur, "and I would like to extend a special thanks to the general public for their very generous contributions, and also to the many taggers who worked in inclement weather."

Because of the rain which commenced in earnest during the afternoon, most of the taggers desisted in their efforts at around four o'clock.

Kinsmen Clubs across Canada have pledged themselves to the extent of $50,000 for the Cancer Research Fund campaign which is now underway. In Belleville the campaign is being sponsored by the Belleville Y's Men's Club.

Several Frauleins Fraternizing With U.S. Negro Troops

Nuernberg, May 20 — (AP) — Several frauleins, known to have been fraternizing with Negro soldiers, are being held for questioning by United States Army authorities investigating the fatal shooting of Sgts. William R. Timmons of West Haven, Conn., and Paul R. Skelton, of McKinney, Tex.

The army's criminal investigation division would not explain why the girls were being questioned, but declared that on the night of the shooting one was known to have been with Pte. James Devone, 22-year-old Negro from Sampson, N.C., who investigators said has admitted firing the shot in the dark which killed the two sergeants.

The army's original announcement at Frankfurt quoted Devone as saying he was firing at a German civilian and accidentally hit the Americans when they drove their jeep into his line of fire.

Investigators said they were satisfied Devone was not aiming at the soldiers. One described the shooting as an accident "that would not happen again in a thousand years."

DECLARES HITLER

"It is well that he died on the battlefield," said one German. "It would have been a national shame to have had our Fuehrer sit before a foreign court to be condemned to death. We wouldn't like that. No true German would, however he felt about Hitler."

Most Believe Hitler Dead

Most Germans believe Hitler is dead. Among the lower classes, however, here are thousands who think him still alive and perhaps still even in this country. Some fanatical followers have elevated him to the rank of demi-god and believe he will return at some future hour to restore his battered fatherland.

This puts him in the same class as that great medieval warrior Friedrich Barbarossa who died while swimming a river in 1190 after his legions had been defeated during a crusade. Mystic-minded Germans claim he dwells in a cave in an enchanted hill in the Hartz mountains.

Rome, May 20 —(AP)— Enrico Cardinal Gasparri of Italy, 74, Prefect of the Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signatura, died today.

His death reduced the membership in the Sacred College of Cardinals to 66, four below the maximum of 70.

Three other cardinals have died this year. They were Pietre Cardinal Boette, Archbishop of Genoa; John Cardinal Glennon, Archbishop of St. Louis; and Clemens Cardinal Von Galen, Bishop of Munster (Germany.)

Cardinal Gasparri, sub-dean of the Sacred College, was a veteran of the Vatican's diplomatic service and spent many years in Latin America on diplomatic assignments.

He was made a Cardinal by Pope Pius XI in 1925.

Born in Ussita, Italy, he was a nephew of Pietre Cardinal Gasparri, who served as Vatican Secretary of State under Pope Benedict XV and in the first years of the pontificate of Pope Pius XI.

As a young priest, he went to South America and became secretary to his uncle, then apostolic delegate to Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador. Later he was auditor of the nunciature in Brazil and then successively apostolic delegate and nuncio to Colombia.

On returning to Europe, he was nuncio at Lisbon, Brussels and Madrid, in that order.

Orthodox Cars Enter Speedway

Indianapolis, May 20 (CP) — If any of the 200,000 guests the Indianapolis motor speedway is expecting at its May 30 resumption of the famous 500-mile auto race are planning the trip for a look at jet-propelled race cars, it's definite now that they'll need another reason.

There won't be any jet cars in the race for a number of reasons, and the best of these is that the applications for entrance are in the mails without any arrangements in the rules for those "three or four" jet entries predicted by Eddie Rickenbacker. Rickenbacker made the prediction on several occasions before relinquishing his position as president of the speedway corporation.

But a more permanent reason is cited by Cotton Henning, the master mechanic of the Mike Boyle racing team, who points out that better throttling arrangements would have to be worked out before a jet-propelled car could negotiate the turns at the speedway.

"The jets may have good pick-up for the straightaways," says Henning, "but a driver would more than likely be over the wall on a turn before he could throttle down to a safe speed.

"Jet cars won't work on the speedways for some time—maybe never. It would be like running a jackass in the Kentucky Derby."

Atomic Research Pays Off

(Cleveland Plaindealer)

Speculation as to what the public reaction would have been had the atomic bomb research failed to achieve its goal is academic, but it is interesting nevertheless to discover that the research would have been worth the cost regardless of the success or failure of the bomb itself.

Even if the atom had refused to be exploded, it is now revealed, the American people in a few years would have got back their $2,000,000,000; for the fact is that the scientific and industrial discoveries made in the process of splitting the atom will in the years ahead save the American people billions of dollars in the form of new products.

A survey made by the M. W. Kellogg Co., which supervised the construction of the Oak Ridge portion of the project, discloses that atomic research has given American industry 5,000 new products and techniques, a large portion of which can be utilized immediately.

The study shows that the accrued benefits to industry in 20 years from the single effort in pump research alone should more than equal the nation's total investment in the atomic project. The utilization of the thousands of other discoveries, will, of course, mean the return of that investment in a much shorter time.

One of the most significant by-products of the atomic research, of course, is the development of cheap substitutes for radium. The Sun Oil Co. already has announced that it will produce radio-active carbon; already dubbed the "poor man's radium," which will be of immense value to humanity thru' its use by medical science.

The peaceful use of atomic power itself now appears to be nearer than we had at first expected. Dr. Vannevar Bush, who headed Office of Scientific Research and Development, asserts, for instance, that he could let a contract today to convert Washington's heating system for government buildings to the use of atomic energy. He insists it would be simple and that in three or four years it will be economically feasible.

LIGHTER REALLY WORKS

Atchison, Kas., May 18 —(AP) —No one can accuse A. F. Matthias of owning a tempermental cigaret lighter. His really works. Matthias left the lighter on the lower sash of a window. When somebody raised the window the lighter flipped open and set the house on fire.

Aussies Boast Good Fighters

Sydney, Australia, May 20 — (CP) — Boxing is booming in Australia with record crowds attending big fights in the capital cities, and newspapers daily devoting columns to the activities of leading boxers.

The boom is both the result of the free-spending post-war urge and of a crop of Australian fighters who are rated among the world's best.

Ring Magazine, recognized as the boxer's bible, gives leading places to three Australians in its latest list of world ratings.

It rates the Australian welterweight and lightweight champion, Vic Patrick, fifth in the lightweight division, light-heavyweight and heavyweight champion, Jack Johnson, fifth in the light-heavies, and featherweight champion, Eddie Miller, fourth among featherweights.

Patrick, 25, has fought 45 contests since he started boxing in 1939 and has had only two losses. One was on a technical knockout, when he had an injured arm, and other was on a foul.

Johnson, the heavy and light-heavy champion, is after a bout for the world's light-heavyweight title. He has issued a challenge to the winner of the fight in London between world champion Gus Lesnevich and Freddie Mills, the British champion.

Tall and pale, Johnson has had 90 fights in Australia and lost two to men he subsequently knocked out.

Miller is rated by the critics as the best featherweight ever to fight in Australia.

Household Showers For British Brides

Merritton, Ont., May 20 (CP) —Something more tangible than a "hello" and a handshake is Merritton's method of welcoming war brides who have come from overseas to make their homes here. Instead the Ladies' Auxiliary, Canadian Legion, greets each new arrival with a shower of household articles.

"We gave our first shower last August," said Mrs. C. McGill, secretary of the organization. "It was just an idea and we hoped other groups might follow our example .. we thought it was one way of repaying the people overseas for their kindness to our servicemen while they were stationed there."

So far the organization has held six showers for six brides, and there are twelve more in the offing for those yet to come from overseas. Every bride receives $50 worth of household merchandise. The bill is footed by the 80 or so members of the Auxiliary, each of whom contributes 25 cents a week toward the gifts.

The lucky newcomer receives everything from a 32-piece set of dishes, flat silverware, bread-box, to a kettle and a frying-pan. In addition she is presented with a pair of woollen blankets, cotton sheets, pillow cases, bath towels and a table-cloth.

Said Mrs. McGill: "We gave approximately $250 a year to war charities during the war as well as the cigarettes we sent to the boys overseas .. when VJ-Day came along we decided to continue our war work with this new project."

Links Across the Seas

How the ties of kinship of the peoples of the Empire bind one another together was never more clearly shown than in some remarks made the other day by His Excellency the Governor General, Viscount Alexander, whose family has had extensive associations with this country. In happy mood he pictured how so many Irishmen had looked west and had contacts with Canada "and it is because I am an Irishman that I have links with this great country." He told his audience that "ancestors of mine owned considerable land in Nova Scotia in distant days. After that my grandfather was stationed here with his regiment, the Coldstream Guards, for a number of years and my father and his brothers were here, too, as visitors to your shores as I well know from the many hunting trophies, relics, books, pictures and so on of their travels in this country. Those things are very highly treasured by my family.

"When I was a small boy I remember very well three black bear cubs which my father brought back from Canada. A special cage was made for them, but evidently not sufficiently strong, because they managed to make their way out and one morning were discovered in the dairy amongst the remains of the cream and butter. Of course, all the right things happened after that. My father was delighted, my mother was furious and the dairymaid fainted. We children were frightfully intrigued but sad when the bears were sent to the Dublin Zoo. . . . I mention these things because I want you to know that if I am a stranger to your country, Canada is no stranger to me."

Canada owes much to the various elements which make up her population. Among them have been many from Ireland and today no small part of the population can trace descent back to that country by birth or by descent. They have done their full share in the development of the Dominion. It is interesting to know the family ties which associate Viscount Alexander, the new Governor-General, with the Dominion. Already he is no stranger to Canadian people who in every part are proud to have as His Majesty's representative so prominent a figure in the life of the Empire and Commonwealth.

These ties are representative of the bonds which bind the Nations of the Commonwealth together. The sense of kinship is felt in all parts of Britain and the Empire.

Will Mark Empire Day

On Thursday, May 23rd., Empire Day will be celebrated in the schools of Ontario and the Department of Education through the Minister, Premier George A. Drew, has sent out a program of suggestions for the observance of that anniversary. The Minister points out in a message to the schools that "the celebration of Empire Day has more significance for all of us this year than at any time in the past. With this first year of peace we have reason to remember with gratitude and with hope all that the British Empire stands for in the world today." Again he says "For one dreadful year from June 1940 until June 1941, the British Empire stood alone against the combined military forces of the Axis powers. Had we succumbed, or had we been forced by the pressure of events to make peace, Europe and great parts of Africa and Asia would today be firmly under the yoke of Germany and her satellites. If the British Empire had not stood firm and united in that most critical year in the history of free men, victory over the evil power of Germany and her partners would still be in the far distant future."

The stoutness of Britain and the Empire Nations in that year 1940 will never be forgotten by Britons and by the peoples of many races on the surface of the globe. Fir it is to that period that they can look as the time when Britain fought so well and rallied to the cause of democracy the free world. This fact is well impressed in the program. As a foreword to the program is a patriotic poem written by Sir Thomas White, "The British Empire."

There are scenes in which pupils will take part, dramatizing events in the war such as the day when war broke out with the German invasion of Poland by the Germans. These scenes can be made very appealing to the boys and girls by those who will be reciting the lines. The second scene is on the beaches of Dunkerque. In this the voice of Winston Churchill is heard (taken by a pupil off stage) repeating the immortal lines, "We shall not flag or fail. We shall go on to the end," and ending with the words, "this was their finest hour." Another scene is an air raid shelter in England in December 1941. The fourth scene is a group of soldiers talking in an outpost in the North African desert in November 1942. The narrator tells briefly of the beginning of the great Allied victory which began with the landing in North Africa. Other scenes are a group of sailors in a cramped mess deck at sea in 1943, a group of people before a newspaper board in 1944 noting the Normandy invasion and a group outside a newspaper office May 1st., 1945, with the paramount feeling that the end of the war in Europe was at hand and suggesting the early collapse of Japan.

In brief form the pupils will gain a good knowledge of the course of the war, the part played by the Empire and the other Allies, the narrator filling in with brief narratives of the events occurring between the scenes.

The pupils will be impressed with the part Canada played and with the service her men and women rendered in many parts of the world and there is a tribute to those who made the supreme sacrifice.

Up to Expectations

As opposition leader at home and distinguished guest abroad, Winston Churchill is living up to fondest expectations of his admirers," say Montreal Herald.

"In parliament no weight of numbers daunts him as he shifts his assaults from the domestic field to external affairs. The government's Egyptian decision provides an issue highly provocative to the Churchillian spirit and we expect to see his talents displayed at their best when he resumes his attack.

"Meanwhile, abroad, he faces the remaking of the world unflinchingly, inviting brickbats as well as bouquets by espousal of such projects as the 'United States of Europe'."

Good Manager

From Philadelphia comes a report of how Charles Cooey a laundry driver whose pay never exceeded $25 a week, discovered after the death of his wife, Sara, that in the thirty-seven years of their married life she had managed to save $25,547.33. When they were married in 1907 they agreed that she should handle the money. He did his part by simply turning over the pay envelope each week. There was nothing niggardly about their scale of living. They bought and freed from debt a neat little home. If they did not have a new automobile every few years. they did acquire a Model T which still is in good working order. Twice they visited their native Ireland. Mrs. Cooey, as her husband proudly testifies, was "a good manager." She looked to no outside agency, no benevolent government, to protect her and her Charlie from want. Through good times and bad, in spells of inflation and deflation, she made the family budget balance, always with the item of savings included. Philadelphia, which has done much to glorify that great exponent of thrift, Benjamin Franklin, could do worse than erect a monument to Sara Cooey.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, May 20 — (CP)—Almost ever since Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced about a year ago that he would not contest another general federal election there has been corridor gossip in parliamentary circles on just when he will step out of the political picture.

The latest such gossip among back-bench Liberals is that Mr. King will resign as Prime Minister within a year, appoint Justice Minister St. Laurent to succeed him in the post, and continue to sit as Liberal member for the Ontario riding of Glengarry.

Those Liberals claim that a date for a National Liberal convention likely will be announced simultaneously with Mr. King's resignation. The party leader chosen by such a convention, if a member of the Commons now, could sit alongside Mr. King and Mr. St. Laurent and grasp the gist of party leadership before the next general election.

Mr. St. Laurent, who accepted the Justic Department post in 1941 on the condition that he would have to serve for the war years only, would not contest the next election, but with Mr. King would stump for the new party leader.

Apparently only time will tell how accurate is the speculation of these Liberals. As far as is known Mr. King has not told the cabinet about his future plans. If he has the secret has been guarded well.

Senate Business: Four committees of the Senate are inviting representative citizens to appear before them to express their views on problems before the nation and desirable legislation to cope with them.

The committee on national resources will continue its study of the mining problems following an extensive brief read to it last week by the Ontario Mining Association.

The committee on labor and immigration will hear A. L. Jolliffe, director of immigration, explain the policy and administration of his branch and after that invite public bodies to express their views.

The tourist committee studying methods of increasing tourist business heard Leo Dolan, head of the Canadian Travel Bureau, and this week will get information from government officials dealing with national parks. After that the committee will get the views of representatives of various tourist organizations.

A sub-committee of the banking committee will plunge into the formidable task of studying the new bill on bankruptcy which has 212 clauses spread over 127 printed pages. It is the first revision of the Bankruptcy Act since 1932 when the law was changed to provide for the appointment of a superintendent of bankruptcy and the licensing of trustees to administer insolvent estates.

Senator J. E. de B. Farris (L—British Columbia) outlined the changes proposed in the voluminous bill when it was read a first time in the Senate last week.

The bill provides that a petition for bankruptcy may be filed with the Registrar for the Supreme or Superior Court in any part of a province instead of in one provincial centre and the petition will then be dealt with like any other civil case by the judge of the Supreme or Superior Court who happens to be hearing cases in that part of the province. At present bankruptcy petitions are heard by a specially-assigned judge in bankruptcy.

The bill makes clear that the estate of a deceased person may be put into bankruptcy and also that similar proceedings may be taken against a married woman.

Senator Farris said the changes were so far-reaching that the sub-committee of the banking committee should give an opportunity for representatives of credit associations, Chambers of Commerce, Bankers' and Bar Associations to appear before it and express their views on the changes.

EXPIRING TRUCES

Plans For Emergency

However, lest these talks follow last week's pattern and wind-up in a new stalemate, the government pressed its efforts to soften the blow on the strike if it does come off.

Under consideration are plans for the army and navy to fly first-class mail and for the diversion of vital foods and other critical freight to air, water and highway transportation.

One of the first actions of federal manager Charles H. Buford after taking over the 337 seized lines was to direct the railroads to hire new men to replace strikers wherever possible and to call upon the army for protective troops if necessary.

The brotherhood had scaled down their wage demands from an original 25-per-cent or $2.50-a-day minimum increase to 18 per cent of $1.44 a day. But the carriers held firm to the 18 cents-an-hour-$1.28-a-day boost recommended by the President's emergency board.

While the railroad dispute temporarily overshadowed the coal situation, there was no lessening of official concern in that quarter.

Presumably the next step will be a presidential effort to arrange a new meeting with Mr. Lewis, chief of the United Mine Workers (A.F.L.) and Charles O'Neill, operator spokesman.

On their last visit to the White House last Friday they turned down Mr. Truman's plan for arbitration of their contract deadlock, but Mr. Truman asked them to stand by for a return call.

WORLD MAY

4. Creation of an international organization to deal with the "whole anticipated period of the food shortage."

With that agenda before it, the conference will be asked to look into the possibility also of extending the life of U.N.R.R.A. beyond 1946 to help famine areas until they get back on their feet. U.N.R.R.A. now supplies food to some of the war-devastated lands, but is scheduled to go out of business Dec. 31, except for relief to China.

The conference also will consider whether a broadened international agency is needed to supervise allocation of surplus foods among shortage areas. A British-Canadian-American combined food board makes allocations now. Some American authorities favor adding Argentina, Australia and France, and perhaps other countries.

The food board also is marked for expiration Dec. 31.

Employment—"We want full employment." If private enterprise can't provide it," then the government must."

Unions—Veterans and organized labor have much in common . . . whatever differences may exist should be settled by negotiation and mutual agreement." Crux: Union seniority built up by war workers. Aim: A policy that would put young veterans on at least an equal footing for any employment available.

Dependents—Greater compensation for widows and children of the dead is "one issue on which we cannot accept that "no money" plea from the government.

New Veterans—"It is a gratifying experience to watch the rejuvenation of the Legion."

Legion Growing

Growth—Since the Vancouver convention of 1944, 355 new branches and 132 ladies auxiliaries have been chartered. Total now: 1,507 branches, 658 ladies auxiliaries and 16 union auxiliaries.

President—"I must say the work has reached the proportions of a full-time job." He is expected to retire at the convention.

Trade Standards—"No attempt has been made to establish a national policy of uniformity in trade standards."

Result—Veterans with only services' trade training have different standards applied to them across the country, "to their disadvantage."

Preference—Employers are being urged to give preference to veterans but "it is too early" to see the effect on long-term rehabilitation.

WHY DO DRINKERS DRINK?

A periodic drinker explained his indulgence thus:

"At times I drank to excess because I felt the need of a stimulant or rather I just wanted to feel better."

That, I think, is at least an honest attempt to answer the question.

A good many drinkers parry the question by asking why they shouldn't drink, and then making the familiar boast of their ability to take it or leave it alone. They persist in that illusion even though their friends and relatives know it is not so.

On the other hand probably the great majority of people who drink can and do take it or leave it alone. If there were not so many who obstinately believe they can take it or leave it alone but tragically fail to live up to the boast, there would be no liquor problem.

I have asked many drinkers who I know have drunk to excess why they drink at all, and the answer I quote above is the most revealing I have obtained.

Without going into the scientific study of the action or effects of alcohol, suffice to say that it is not a stimulant, but a narcotic and a depressant, from first to last, in any quantity of concentration that produces any evident or measurable effect.

An individual who feels the need of a stimulant has an inferiority feeling, of course. How else explain it?

One who wants to feel better must be aware of his or her inferiority. Why else would he or she want to feel better?

When you are feeling fine and fit you don't want a stimulant. You're conscious of a sense of well-being and you get satisfaction and contentment from your work or play, you enjoy being alive. You can see no point in resorting to alcohol or any other narcotic.

I hope this is not "psychology", but just plain sense.

It is my conviction, reached from long study of the alcohol question, that better health education and better physical education would give TEMPERANCE a tremendous boost in popularity. In our school system many educators talk a fine game but few play the game.

Some drinkers, I suppose we may call them moderate drinkers, who never get downright drunk, maintain that it takes, say, three or four drinks to get everybody in the party into a sociable state, at ease and affable, all on the same level, free from self-consciousness — and I must admit they are right about one thing—everybody gets on the same level, and a low level it is, if you remain sober to watch it.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Migraine from Allergy

For thirty-five years I have suffered with what the doctors call migraine and never found much relief—until I read your headache pamphlet and followed the suggestion of increasing my calcium intake and correcting the allergy. This has brought unbelievable relief. (B. C.)

Answer—On written request, if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope, I'll send the pamphlet "Why Have Headache?" Migraine is probably allergic in nature.

Dangerous Medicine

Four years ago a physician prescribed thyroid tablets for my daughter. Recently she resumed taking them without medical advice. Is this dangerous for her? (R. W.)

Answer—Yes.

Gray Young

Can anything be done to stop the graying of the hair? I am 20 and getting quite gray. Does iodine help? (Miss C. A. R.)

Answer. Yes. Send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope. Ask in writing for booklet "The Hair and Scalp."

Horsetail

Botanical magazine refers to a plant called Equisetum as being used in the treatment of diabetes. Can you inform me how to use it and where it can be obtained? (R. R.)

Answer—It is the common weed called horsetail. Some old timer may have used it for dropsy, diabetes, etc., but there is no ground for the notion that it has any effect on diabetes.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How much did it cost to discover America?

It is hard to translate the cost of the first Columbus expedition into terms of modern money.

The most recent estimate is that the complete cost of the expedition was equivalent to about $76,000. Earlier estimates were much lower.

Part of the cost was borne by the government of Castile and Leon and part of it by the three Pinzon brothers, wealthy merchants and seamen of Palos.

The three small ships had a total tonnage of only 190. Columbus's flagship was the Santa Maria, a fully decked ship of 100 tons and manned by a crew of 52. The two caravels, partly decked barks, were the Pinta, 50 tons, manned by a crew of 18 and commanded by Martin Alonzo Pinzon, and the Nina, 40 tons, manned by a crew of 18 and commanded by Vincente Yanez Pinzon. Francisco Martia Pinzon, a brother of the two captains, was pilot of the Nina. In addition to the 88 regular crew members, there were 32 other men on board, making a total of 120.

Columbus himself was allowed the equivalent of $230 a month and his two captains $150. Members of the crew were paid at the rate of about $15 a month. The expedition required about eight months. Many of the members of the crew were convicts who had been released from prison and promised their freedom if the expedition was successful. Other members had been induced to enlist for the voyage by indemnities offered by the Pinzon brothers.

The Santa Maria was wrecked off the coast of Hispaniola and had to be abandoned, although no lives were lost. A supposed replica of Columbus's flagship was presented by the Spanish government to the Chicago Columbian Expedition in 1893 and later placed in the Jackson Park yacht harbor in Chicago.

It is often said that Queen Isabella disposed of her personal jewels to pay the expenses of the expedition. That is not so. The Queen announced to her court that she would assume the undertaking for her own government of Castile and Leon and that she was ready to pawn her jewels to finance the expedition if treasury funds were inadequate. This was merely her way of emphasizing her personal faith in the expedition and asking her finance minister to find the funds. There is no evidence that she had to dispose of her personal jewels to raise the money. It is estimated that the total government contribution to the enterprise was only about $16,500.

GLASS FROM RUINS OF CHURCHES USED FOR NEW WINDOWS

Seven Stained Glass Windows in Ontario Church Composed Entirely of British Fragments

Meaford, Ont., May 20 (CP) — The bits of colored glass that Rev. Harold F. Appleyard used to carry around in his pockets while he served overseas as a padre with the Royal Regiment of Canada have been restored to their former dignity and beauty in stained glass windows here.

Major Appleyard, recently returned to his peacetime post as rector of Christ Church here, has had seven windows made for the church, composed of pieces from more than 125 bombed British churches.

"These are symbolic of the struggle of Christianity against the Nazi way of life followed by the gathering of democracy's strength to carry on after victory," said Major Appleyard. Seldom in his service throughout England, Wales, France, Belgium and Holland was he without glass in his pockets.

Gathering the glass was not as simple as it sounds. At Canterbury, although the cathedral windows were blown out four times, the glass he gathered was voted to him by the chapter of the cathedral. Chichester cathedral had never been bombed — until Padre Appleyard arrived in England in 1943. Promptly the Germans staged their lone air raid of the war on the area dropping two bombs, one landed 100 yards from the church and broke all the windows.

"Some said the raid had been staged just for me, and, of course I picked up some of the broken glass," the padre related. He cleared his conscience "for being in cahoots with the enemy," by giving the first donation to the window restoration fund.

"While in England it occurred to me that a memorial window from bombed British churches would be appropriate because quite a number in my parish are of English descent," the padre said.

Four of the windows with the finest designs will be dedicated as war memorials. Between them will be a plaque made from oak timber salvaged from the ruins of a burned overseas church.

Besides two memorial windows of two sections in the main body of the church, the collection made three windows for the church cloister. One of these windows is made entirely of glass from Sir Christopher Wren churches. The windows will be installed and dedicated August 11, the Sunday nearest V-J Day.

Fly Jeopardized Fourteenth Army

New Delhi, May 20 (CP) — It has now been revealed that a disease known as "Surra" sweeping remorselessly and lethally as plague, nearly immobilized the 14th. Army in 1944. Surra is transmitted by flies and produces rapid anaemia and debility in many breeds of animals.

The situation was saved by the Indian Army Veterinary Corps, one of the youngest and smallest corps in the Indian army, who effectively brought the epidemic under control.

Reporter Strikes Murray Tobias In a Scuffle

Toronto, May 18 (CP)—A free-for-all fight came yesterday in a corridor outside an Assize Court room when a newspaper photographer attempted to take pictures of the family of Meyer Tobias, slain last Dec. 26 when four youths attempted a holdup in his dress shop.

The wild scenes, which began just before court opened and before the youths had been sentenced on manslaughter charges, began when a camera bulb flashed and Murray Tobias, husky son of the slain shopkeeper, rushed forward and swung at the photographer. The blow struck the camera.

There were screams from women as spectators and newspapermen rushed into the affray. A reporter struck Tobias, claimed he did it to protect the cameraman. Mrs. Tobias, the widow, screamed, and police intervened to break up the disturbances.

The night of the slaying, Tobias was also said to have punched at a photographer on the scene, and to have damaged a camera.

Historians Honor Scott Character

Castle Douglas, Scotland, May 20 (CP) — Historians gathered at a ceremony in the churchyard at Twynholm in Kirchudbrightshire honored the memory of "Wandering Willie," who was immortalized in Sir Walter Scott's book "Redgauntlet."

Researches had shown that 136 years ago a Welsh soldier, his wife and five children, while on a journey from Ireland, took shelter in a gravel pit near Castle Douglas. During the night the pit bank collapsed and the entire family was buried alive.

The churchyard stone described the father as a minstrel. Glasgow Galloway Association studies have shown that the shelter was the prototype of Scott's character. A tablet recording the facts has been placed at the grave.

EXPENDITURES DROP

Canberra, Australia (CP) — Australian war expenditure for nine months of the current fiscal year ending June 30 was $136,800,000 less than during the corresponding period in the 1944-45 year ended last June. The total of war spending during the past nine months was approximately $1,112,400,000.

Ottawa to Grab CFRB Wavelength Says Globe & Mail

Toronto, May 18 (CP) — The Globe and Mail said today in a dispatch from Ottawa that three 50-kilowatt transmitters have been ordered by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to be used on frequency length in Toronto, Calgary and Winnipeg.

The story said the transmitter in Toronto will be installed on the frequency used by Station CFRB, the one in Calgary will utilize the wave length now used by CFCN and the Winnipeg outlet will use the CKY wavelength.

"The last station named, it is understood, is to be taken over by the CBC," the dispatch added.

New London Styles Same Old Haircuts

Cardiff, Wales, May 20 (CP) — Barbers on a busman's holiday have been taking instruction in the newest hair styles as demonstrated by Paul Glausz, of London:

Manchester Cut — Clean over the ears and neck, tapering away to fullness.

Major Cut — High side parting going below the crown; hair brushed back and swirled in a taper.

Argent Cut—a flat top with sides carried back and just resting on ears.

Coif Cut—Well tapered back and sides with a coif on the parting side.

One who attended said there seemed nothing new but the names—and no style for men growing thin on top.

Mexico City, May 20 (AP) — Babe Ruth, the former Sultan of Swat, got a bigger kick out of a bull fight than from a baseball game yesterday.

He saw both as guest of Jorge Pasquel, Mexican League Baseball President.

The bull fight "was a great thrill" Ruth commented, but the Vera Cruz-Tampico game earlier "was too one-sided . . . 7-0 for Vera Cruz when I got there in the second inning."

Don't Look Down Your Nose At the Feet That Hold You Up!

Massage your feet with a soothing cream.

By HELEN FOLLETT

OF THEIR foot troubles, women seldom peep a word. It is disgraceful to confess that one has corns and twinging toes. Better to have others fancy that the feminine foot undressed looks as pretty as when it is shod. It doesn't.

Few women have really beautiful feet, few are free of the ills that beset the human trotters.

They get no special care. They are put into leather cases that do not supply standing room. Toes are compressed, bones and tendons under strain.

Other Griefs.

Such a condition brings along a trail of other griefs, a body that is not balanced, a nervous system that is unsteady, a disposition that may get curdled. Hurty feet make one hurt all over, physically, spiritually, mentally.

Feet are getting bigger and better. We've done a good deal of standing and walking these war years. Many women have been compelled to put on shoes that are easier on the little footies. The average size now for the twenty year old is 6B. Twenty years ago it was 5A.

School Girls.

I won't tell you what some of our high school girls are wearing; you'd never believe it unless you have one of these lassies in your home. No cramped toes for them. Shoe clerks declare that the only buyers of small sizes are the old girls whose feet were pinched and compressed in their young days.

We're marching; marching more comfortably. If your feet hurt, as feet do in early spring, bathe them with cold water, dry and massage with mineral oil. Then give them rest.

When real disorder of the feet is suspected, when there is pain in one special locality, don't bear with it. Seek the doctor's help. If you don't do that, your trouble may become chronic, be slow in responding to treatment.

Considering that your trotters lug you around, miles and miles, each day, it is only fair to give them good care.

Eastern Star Chapters Attend Divine Service

The Order of the Eastern Star, Minerva Chapter No. 138, and Belleville Chapter No. 55, attended divine worship at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Sunday morning where they heard an inspiring address given by the pastor, the Rev. H. O. Eastman, on the subject "Undergirdings of Character."

"The badge of your order is a beautiful five-pointed star," said the preacher, "and I have discovered that each of these points is represented by a Bible woman. There is a symbol in each point of your star, the meaning of which I can only guess because you keep your secrets so well, but in the centre is an altar upon which is laid an open book, which I presume to be the Bible.

"I might guess that each of those five points represents some quality of character which is exemplified by the symbol you have placed there and the woman upon whom your point is based, all emanating from the Book,

Has Stood Test of Time

"You have put the undergirding thing in the Eastern Star in the centre. It must be rooted and grounded in the Word of God and worship of God. It matters not what you or I think of the Bible. There it is. It has stood the test of time and has proven itself. The truth of it is unquestioned in reality. The altar is the place where you meet God. You may have a hundred Bibles in your home but that does not make an altar, unless you meet God in the pages of the Book and in prayer fellowship.

"It was suggested by someone that a well-loved name represented in your star is that of Martha, so I should like to speak about her. You cannot understand Martha apart from serving. She was cumbered with much serving. The common weakness of those who are burdened with serving is that they must have everything perfect, they worry about details and fear that something will go wrong. As a consequence they are impatient with folk who are not quite as efficient as they."

Refers to Story

Mr. Eastman referred to the story as recorded in Luke 10:40 where Martha was a bit angry with her sister Mary, who was sitting at Jesus' feet. She wanted Mary to help her and would let Jesus sit alone in the parlor while she worried about supper. "Sometimes we try to find a way to excuse both Martha and Mary without censure for Jesus," said the pastor, "but I think it best to accept the story at its face value.

"Unfortunately the Mary type of communion has largely dropped out of our lives. We do not make time to fellowship with Him. Our lives have become burdened with much serving. We have allowed ourselves to become flustered about many things.

"But we find that the troubled Martha changed to trustful and peaceful Martha. It is recounted in the 11th chapter of St. John that Lazarus, her brother, becomes sick. Jesus is sent for but by the time He arrives Lazarus is dead and buried several days. Here the character of Martha shows up at its best. She comes out to meet Jesus, not at the door, but outside of the town of Bethany. They talked, and here Martha reveals the secret of her calm trust. She believes that she will see her brother again at the resurrection; that even now, whatsoever Jesus will ask of God, the Father will give it. It is her belief that He is the Christ, the Son of God. In that trustful repose she moved about, meeting the needs of the hour, thinking of the needs of everybody but herself.

Martha Served

"There is one other event mentioned about Martha, in the 12th chapter of St. John. The reference is simple but eloquent, "Martha served." Mary stole the show; she anointed Jesus' feet with the costly ointment, and there is not one word of remonstrance from Martha. It is her joy now to serve. She had learned Jesus' secret "If any would be chief among you, let him be your servant." To be a servant is to be at life's pinnacle. Martha seems to have learned the lesson well.

"What had worked the change? Is it too much to say that between the hour when she was cumbered and the hour when she served, she had met Jesus, had loved and learned of Him?

"If you or I would cultivate characters that are sweet, loving, trustful, patient, we must have Jesus in the centre of our lives. Then, like Martha, we will live life at a higher level, untouched by the passing storms. All things are transmuted through the alchemy of God's love."

Musical Program

The choir, under the direction of Mr. Fred Jobson, sang as the anthem "The Voice of One Crying in the Wilderness," Miss Phyllis May being heard in the solo parts. Following the offertory a trio was heard, comprising Mrs. M. Marshall, Miss Phyllis May and Miss Muriel Jobson. Mr. Dorland Houston, who presided at the organ console, played as the prelude "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn and during the offertory, "Evening Star" from Tannhauser by Wagner. The pulpit was decorated with a profusion of beautiful spring flowers.

Black, presided and thanked the executive and members for electing her as president at the last meeting and asked the members for a renewal of the League promises. Mrs. W. A. Shannon then gave a reading entitled "Mother".

A few games were played and refreshments were served by the committee in charge before the meeting adjourned.

Questions and Answers

Readers may direct their questions giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper to information Branch, WPTB, 490, Sussex Street, Ottawa.

Q. A short while ago I read in the paper that so many tons of sugar were lying idle on the docks of Jamaica. Why is it that with Canada having a very limited supply of sugar that some of this sugar cannot be shipped here instead of going to waste?

A. Apparently you misinterpreted what you read. There is no doubt that the sugar that was stored on the docks was awaiting shipment to some needy country. There are many idle rumors circulating these days and are not to be taken too seriously. All the world exports of sugar are controlled under a Combined Food Board, whose work is to see that every country has its fair share.

Q. My brother was boarding in another town from April 6 to May 4 and then he came to live with me. When I looked at his ration book I found that his landlady had taken the five extra sugar coupons from his book which came due May 2. Was she entitled to do this?

A. No definitely not. Unless your brother gave written permission to the landlady for the use of his canning sugar coupons she was wrong in taking them out of the book.

Q. Why do customers have to give up five tokens for tins of ox tongue now on the market when pickled and boiled tongue may be purchased without coupons?

A. Your butcher was quite right when he took five tokens . . . I presume you purchased a 32-ounce tin. If this canned tongue was not rationed some people would buy a large number of tins and others would not be able to get any. Canned ox tongue remains on the list of rationed meats in order that everyone may have a fair share. Pickled or boiled tongue are perishable items and cannot be stored for any length of time so it would be impossible for anyone to buy large quantities.

Q. I recently bought a 1941 Buick and am still not sure whether I paid in excess of the ceiling price although the dealer said the price was correct. Could you tell me whether I was overcharged?

A. The price mentioned in your letter certainly seems to be higher than the actual ceiling price for that model. We suggest you contact the nearest office of the Board who will give you the full particulars as to the ceiling price, on this car. If it is found you paid over the ceiling price our enforcement division will check on this dealer immediately.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

This Wife Has an "Aunt-in-Law" Problem

During the war, of course, it was inevitable that families had to double up. Daughters took their children and went home to live with mothers and fathers while husbands were overseas. Lack of housing facilities in cities near defense plants, camps and embarkation ports made it necessary for relatives, friends and even strangers, sometimes, to join forces in living arrangements.

And with building materials, labor and everything else that goes into the making of new homes still short, it looks as though doubling up would have to be the order of the day for awhile yet. And I don't know which it's harder on—the wife who's had her own home for years and now has to adapt herself to living with others, or the young bride who's never had a chance to find out what having a home of her very own is like.

Here's a girl who has been married for over a year, but has had her serviceman husband with her only for the past few months, during which time they have lived with his aunt, who apparently brought hom up. She writes:

"My husband's aunt doesn't seem to want me around. I have begged my husband several times to take me away some place where we could be happy, as I am not at all happy here. I love my husband too much to go away and leave him, but sometimes I feel like doing so.

"What can I do to make my aunt-in-law feel as if she wants me around, or what can I tell my husband about us going some place so we can be away from his people? We can't even go out any place without coming home to her fussing. I have made lot of friends, but am afraid to ask them to come to see me lest she hurt their feelings.

"Mrs. M. K."

You do not say, Mrs. M. K. whether you and your husband are living with this aunt because the housing shortage makes it impossible for you to find a home of your own, or because he does not want to leave the women who has been like a mother to him. And these are two quite different problems.

If it is the housing shortage that is responsible for the situation, about all you can do is to try, and get along with as little friction as possible until you can find a place of your own. Try to be always cheerful and good-natured, and make yourself as useful as you can around the house, so that the aunt will come to enjoy having you there. Of course, if she objects to your friends coming to visit you, and to you and your husband going out for good times, it is very difficult. But if you know it is only temporary, and that you will eventually have your own home, you can undoubtedly manage to stick it out until then without things coming to a crisis.

If, however, your husband is reluctant to leave the house that has been his home, that is something else again, and an even more difficult problem to handle.

In such a case, you will just have to try to make him understand that every married couple should be in their own home, completely independent of either one's family. Tell him that all the people who know most about that makes a marriage succeed or fall agree on the importance of this, and feel that when a husband and wife live with in-laws, it almost always results in trouble and unhappiness. Tell him that it is a husband's job to provide a home, and the wife's to make it a happy place in which to live; that you're anxious to begin on your job, but first he must do his. Make him feel that you're proud of him and that you know he can do it without having to depend on an aunt or any one else.

Your Facial Expression Tells What Kind of Person You Are

Ann Richards, screen actress, always looks cheerful and gay

By HELEN FOLLETT

EXCEPT for the contour of the human countenance, the shape of the nose, the color of the eyes and bony formation, the map that we present to the world is pretty much what we make it. Expression is the big factor.

Most of us start off with round cherubic faces. What we have at thirty, forty, fifty is the result of facial habits, character, what goes on inside our hearts and our heads.

If a woman looks like a lemon you can be pretty sure that she is one. We reveal our secret selves in the portraits we carry around.

Long Face Injustice

Pulling a long face is doing one-self an injustice. Muscles are like elastic fibres. After so much tension, they lose elasticity, won't snap back. The tissues along the jaw line go flabby. Lip ends take on a permanent droop. No good expecting help from the make-up box. The only remedy is found in courage, laughter, cheerfulness.

Most of the large muscles of the body take their hold on other muscles, tendons or bones. Facial muscles start at the bones, but are inserted directly under the skin. They are a network of fine fibres, intricately woven and adjusted.

Doleful Expressions

Grimaces and doleful expressions use up muscle energy. They are destructive forces. All mean emotions are depleting, not only to appearance, but to the nervous system and the health generally.

Don't be a frowner! Don't be an eyebrow lifter! You can give expression to your words by the proper use of your voice, look in your eyes. When frowns once get a toehold, they stick like all get out. By lifting the eyebrows, there will appear little gullies running across the forehead.

Goodness knows that Time does enough to human faces. One should not aid and abet this old meanie's ravages by making faces.

If your phiz is showing signs of emotional wear and tear, use cream lavishly with light tapping movements. And mend your ways. Be tranquil!

BEAUTY

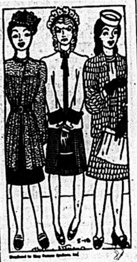
ANKLES, TRIM AND SLENDER



Weak ankles are a common trouble.

It is generally admitted by instructors of physical education that feminine ankles are becoming larger. It seems that slender ankles were common in the good old days. The explanation: when Grannie was a girl she wore high shoes that prevented the ankle from expanding. Low shoes give more action and freedom to the large tendon at the back of the ankle and the muscles that extend upward into the calf of the leg. Being stronger, they develop. Sounds likely. Yet many a pretty one of this particular day has ankles that are slender and pretty, like those of a deer. Are they proud? You know the answer.

Weak ankles are a common trouble, and girls and women who have clattered around on spiked heels for years are the ones who suffer most from this complaint. To correct this condition, one should, first of all, get shoes that provide ease and a steady hold on the ground. Then one should walk tippy-toe, do high-kicking exercises, lift up and down on the toes for ten minutes each day.

Correct posture and grace of body depend to a large extent on the ankle and instep. Ankle joints are much smaller and more delicate than are those of the knee and the hip, yet they bear practically the full body weight. So keep in mind the beauty slogan "Chest out, tummy in." Do that, and the rest of the body will fall in line.

If one has time and patience for home treatment, bulky ankles can be reduced by massage. Manipulations must be continued daily for a number of months to break down adipose padding.

Anoint the hands with cocabutter. Begin at the instep, grasping the flesh in both hands. Forcibly turn and twist it upon the underlying bones. Encircle the ankle so that the thumbs meet in front, then send the thumbs up and down, pressing deeply into the tissues. Movie stars, whose legs needed remodeling, were made to wear rubber anklets. Profuse perspiration broke down the fat cells.

The foregoing massage treatment is also effective in strengthening weak ankles; while the movements knock the fat cells galley-west, they also stir up circulation so that the muscles become firmer.

For reducing the calves, there is nothing better than tap dancing. This form of dancing will do much toward slenderizing the portion of the feminine anatomy that is south of the waistline. It will, of course, have no effect upon the torso. Instructors of dancing tell your good looks reporter that many plumpies join up for the express purpose of putting legs in form.

For slimming down the thighs there is an old-fashioned exercise that works like a charm. Stand tall, lift the chest, pull in tummy, keep the legs rigid, touch the floor with the fingertips.

Curves are fashionable, but an over-supply is still a beauty liability.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

About Banquets and Dance "Bids"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—I am going to attend a banquet shortly, and since I have never attended such an occasion, I would appreciate your giving me some idea of what to expect. For example, what menu would likely be served? What beverage will probably be served, and when? At such a large banquet, will the dishes be removed after each course? If a salad is served, is it correct to use a knife as well as a fork to eat it?

2. When a man purchases a "bid" to a dance, does he give it to the girl whom he is inviting to the dance, and when the girl purchases it, does she keep it? Who fills out the "bid" at the dance?

J. R. H.

1. The first course of the banquet-menu may be either fruit cup of some kind, or soup, or there may be both courses, the fruit first; accessories in dishes on the table may be hearts of celery, green and/or ripe olives, salted nuts; then the main course; possibly a salad course (though this is not usual at a large banquet); the dessert course, customarily ice cream with petits fours, or sweet cookies; and after-dinner coffee. A glass of water at your place, and coffee after dinner are usually the only "beverages" included in the menu itself; but usually there is an opportunity for guests to order wine or other beverage, and for this the waiter presents a separate check. Yes, after each course, the dishes of that course are removed, the groups of waiters, at the signal from the head-waiter, begin to clear the tables for the next course. If a salad is served, it will probably be such a simple one that no knife will be supplied with it; but if one is supplied, it is correct to use it if you wish to.

2. If the man buys the tickets to the dance, he keeps them and presents them on the evening of the dance; if a girl buys the tickets for a dance given, for example, by an organization of which she is a member, she usually gives them to her escort before they leave for the dance, and he presents them at the door. If the "bid" is in the form of, or is accompanied by, a program (generally a "bid" means the invitation or the ticket of admission), it may be filled in before the dance by the one, girl or man, who is doing the inviting. Or the couple may decide to have the program filled in only partially before the dance, and at the dance exchange dances with other couples.

Man Guest and Usher at Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a man guest, arriving alone at a church wedding, to be ushered down the aisle?

G. B.

Yes. The usher walks down the aisle beside the man guest.

Say "Cream Pitcher," Not "Creamer"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To settle an argument will you please tell me if it is correct to use the word "creamer" to mean "cream pitcher"? My married sister, the other day when I was lunching at her home and asked her "please to pass me the creamer", said that I should say "cream pitcher", that "creamer" is a hick word."

Julie

Your sister is right in telling you (1) that you should use "cream pitcher", not "creamer", and (2) that "creamer" is colloquial, or as she very well says, a "hick" word. (Like "drapes" for curtains!)

Light His Fiancee's Cigarette First?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman;

When a young man is at a party with his fiancee and he is passing cigarettes to a group of guests, should he, when he lights the cigarettes, light his fiancee's cigarette first or after he has lighted the cigarettes of the others in the group?

M. G.

Convenience, not precedence, would be the answer to this question. That is, he should proceed to light the cigarettes according to the order in which the guests are seated, and light his fiancee's cigarette as he arrives at her place.

SOUTHERN GENTLEMEN

Penquins are found at the South Pole but not at the North.

Fashion Flashes

WE'RE TOLD that there's a big call for long sleeves, and not only from mature women, either! This demand comes just when the shops are filled with cap-sleeve frocks. The push-up sleeve sells a frock at sight. So it looks like sleeves again for fall!

PRETTIER AND PRETTIER is the verdict on dress-up cottons for summer. Grand for a city girl is a two-piecer in black eyelet embroidered batiste. Pearl buttons for front closing of peplum bodice and skirt. White stitching on black patent belt.

CLOUDS GATHER and out comes the pretty raincoat! Tattersall checks in yellow and black on a fabric of wool and rayon mixture is used for a swell raincoat and hood. Yoke of coat and hood are bound in black.

SOMEHOW it seems that every woman has some kind of short fur jacket to see her through all but the hottest months of the year. A new beauty is a short, boxy jacket of white Indian broadtail with bell sleeves tucked below the elbow to give a two-tiered effect.

NO FLOWERS, if you don't like 'em on hats! Some of the smartest hats are ribbon trimmed, such as a high cloche in navy blue Shantung straw trimmed with massed bows of red and blue satin-striped ribbon on a blue taffeta ground.

THE BIG DEMAND, say the shops, is the pretty petticoat for wear under suits or separate skirts. Black satin with appliques of white daisies—scattered here and there, and around the hem—is a good choice.

Simply perfect for summer wear are gloves of nylon fabric in a jacquard weave, a 20-button model being first favorite. Pastels, black and white are the favored colors for gloves that should have a year-round career.

Boo Ferris May Be First Hurler To Win Twenty Games in His Sophomore Year in the Majors

Red Sox Pitcher Now Has Five Victories Without a Defeat

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sport Writer

Dave (Boo) Ferris, Boston Red Sox right-hander, has a fine start towards becoming the first pitcher to win 20 or more games in each of his first two years in the major leagues since Jake Weimer performed the feat for Chicago Cubs in 1903-04.

Many hurlers have captured 20 triumphs in their freshman season, but none, with the exception of the Cub southpaw, has repeated in his sophomore year.

Ferris, who astounded the baseball world last year by nabbing 21 victories despite joining the Sox just a few months after receiving his army air corps discharge, boasts five victories without a setback this season following his 4-0 victory over Detroit Tigers yesterday. The 24-year-old sophomore's fine performance gained an even break for the American League leaders as Detroit's Hal Newhouser beat the Sox 3-1, on four hits in the nightcap.

Yankees Win Two

The second-place New York Yankees moved to within 4 1-2 games of the Red Sox by sweeping their doubleheader with the Indians, 2-0 and 7-1.

St. Louis Cards' manager Eddie Dyer led with his southpaw aces, Max Lanur and Harry Brecheen, and they rewarded him by whipping Philadelphia Phillies twice 9-5 and 4-0 before a Philly record crowd of 35,049, to put the Redbirds back into the National League lead by one game.

Brooklyn Dodgers dropped behind the Cards when they succumbed to the right-hand mastery of Ed Heusser of Cincinnati. The Reds won the only single game of the day 4-0.

The up-and-coming Washington Senators licked Chicago White Sox, 4-3 and 7-1.

Lose 6-0 Lead

After seeing a 6-0 lead go up in smoke when Chicago Cubs came from behind to win the opener 8-6 Boston Braves came back to win the afterpiece 5-3, on a three-run seventh inning rally.

In a parade of lefthanders, Pittsburgh and the New York Giants divided a doubleheader, the Pirates winning the opener 3-1 and the Giants taking the second half 5-1.

Following up a 4-3 opening game decision over St. Louis Browns, Philadelphia Athletics unleashed an 18-hit attack, including eight doubles, a triple and homers by Hal Peck and George McQuinn to swamp the Sewellmen 13-2 in the nightcap.

KINGARVIE EASY WINNER OF PLATE TRIAL SATURDAY

Charlie Turner's David T. Wins Second Division in Driving Finish

Toronto, May 20 — (CP) — The Parkwood stable's fine colt Kingarvie showed he was the horse to beat in the historic King's Plate May 25 when he proved an easy victor over eight other three-year-olds in one division of the Plate trial, as the Canadian racing season opened at old Woodbine Park Saturday.

The other division of the Plate trial was captured by an outsider, Charles Turner's David T., in a driving finish, also over eight others.

The Plate trial was run in two divisions of nine horses each but was at only six furlongs, whereas the renewal of the King's Plate itself, oldest continuously - run race in North America, is at a mile and an eighth.

Kingarvie won his race Saturday by two and a half lengths over the late Harry Hatch's Bluesweep, and N.L. Heise's colt, Willegivit in third place was another length and a half back. Kingarvie raced comfortably back of the leaders and in the stretch came on nicely to win by a city block, as the racegoers figure it.

Kingarvie's time over a track that was barely good after repeated rainfalls was 1:14 2/5.

David T.'s time for the same distance was a fifth of a second more, and the Turner colt stood through a long drive in the stretch to gain a neck verdict over Medway stable's Khabula. G. Grove's Barefoot Joe in third place was three lengths back. David T. was run out the full mile, his race Saturday being only the second time he has worked at Woodbine.

DETROIT TIGERS TRADE AND SELL TO HELP CLUB

Acquire George Kell for Third From A's and Let Higgins Go to Boston

Detroit, May 20 (AP) — In a rapid-fire bargaining flurry, Detroit Tigers within two days have helped to solve two of the American League's most glaring infield weaknesses—both at third base.

Plugging their own gap at the hot corner by trading outfielder Barney McCosky to Philadelphia Athletics for third baseman George Kell during the weekend, the Tigers turned around yesterday and sold the veteran Mike (Pinky) Higgins to the league-leading Boston Red Sox for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Kell, who moved right in as Detroit's "regular" third sacker as the Tigers split Sunday's twin bill with Boston, is the third man to operate there for the world champs this season. Manager Steve O'Neill is confident the 23-year-old Arkansas school teacher is "just what we need" at third.

With utility man Jimmy Outlaw available as a stop-gap, Detroit then sent Higgins, a 14-year man in the majors, back to the Red Sox from whom the Tigers acquired him in a five-man deal in 1938.

Higgins, though approaching his 37th birthday, is a remarkable "clutch" hitter with a lifetime American League batting average of .295. He might prove the answer to Boston's third-base problem.

Higgins, traded to Boston by Philadelphia Athletics in 1936 for third baseman Bill Werber, hit .302 and .303 in two seasons in a Red Sox uniform before coming to Detroit in 1938 with pitcher Archie McKain in a trade for pitchers Elden Auker and Jake Wade and outfielder Chet Morgan.

Tony Acerra To Meet Kelly In Main Bout

"Tony" Acerra, the local heavyweight who polished off Toronto's "Duke" Subaro in the first round of the semi-final "go" on the last card, will hold the featured spot on the boxing show in Hume Arena Wednesday night. This time, "Tony" will meet another "Hogtowner", Jack Kelley of the Diamond A. C. and they are scheduled for five rounds.

Acerra will try to shorten it however and there's bound to be lots of action. "Tony" has had two fights before the home-town crowd and each time, has put up a whale of a battle. This bout will serve as a "trial run" for the local boy as it's the first time he has been scheduled to go the five-round distance.

In the semi-final, Cecil "Jiber" Ellis of Trenton will tangle with another Diamond slugger, Ron Nash. Ellis is still smarting from the trimming he took from the hands of George Polmanter on the last card and will be trying hard for a win in order to earn another shot at Polmanter.

Six other good bouts will round out the card.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, May 20 (AP)—Hottest unconfirmed report that has come this way recently concerns a new racetrack to be built near Chicago in time for racing next summer...Story is that it will be built just over the Indiana line, about eight or nine miles from the loop, and will hold night racing...Why not? What really counts is the lighted numbers on the tote board...Nick Londos, the Greek fight promoter, leaves tonight for Greece to see what's happened to his old home and his relatives there. After the Goodall golf tournament was dropped for the duration, the original trophy mysteriously disappeared. Sponsor Elmer Ward, who had enough of cup-hunting when he was New England amateur champion, merely sent someone out to buy a new one for this year's renewal...Jimmy Smith, Billy Conn's brother-in-law and son of the old major leaguer, is playing in the University of Pennsylvania outfield and looks pretty good.

Baseball, Softball Tonight

Two diamond attractions, it seems are scheduled for tonight in the city — the first of the season's offerings in baseball and softball attractions. In the Exhibition Grounds, Vern Goyer's Goodman Juniors will take on Frankie (Durocher) Sedore's classy mushball Flashes in a pre-season exhibition tilt while at the Alemite Field the Trenton Flyers engage Lefty Whiteman's Stewart Warner baseball squad in a return engagement. The Softball joust starts at 6:30 with the baseball gladiators teeing off at six sharp. If the latter game is rained out, the boys will go at it tomorrow night at the same time.

• • •

The Belleville Softball Association will officially open its season on Wednesday, May 22 on what is to be hoped the new diamond at the Fair Grounds. The opposing squads will be Phil Left's Point Anners and Maxie People's Stephens-Adamson buckos. On paper both teams appear to show considerable strength and possibly some old familiar faces will be seen in the line-ups. The game starts at six o'clock and in all likelihood there will be official opening ceremonies with civic dignitaries in the star roles.

• • •

Six teams will definitely comprise the league, it was decided at a special meeting of the B.S.A. Friday night. These include, besides Point Anne and Sacos, the Belleville Goodman Juniors, the Army and Navy Flashes, Mountain View, and Sixardee. The Picton and Foxboro representatives who stated previously that they wished to enter teams and would attend the meeting, failed to put in an appearance, and the Association took it for granted that no entries would be forthcoming from these places.

• • •

There will be plenty of diamond fare here this summer for the faithful of softball and baseball. According to the schedule drawn up by he City Baseball League, games will be played on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, some of them away of course, while the Belleville Softball Association will hold forth at the Exhibition Grounds on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week, until the playoffs. The games of the baseball laddies will be divided between the Exhibition Grounds and the Alemite Field. The City Parks Board is co-operating with the executives of both associations in the laying out of diamonds in the Exhibition Grounds.

• • •

With the large number of baseball and softball attractions scheduled for the coming season, plus a lot of other sports attractions, it will be humanly impossible for this desk to personally cover all the functions. Baseball and softball managers are hereby requested to co-operate especially in their away games by forwarding score cards as soon as possible after the games, that is, if they want the games publicized. If not don't say you weren't warned.

• • •

Prexy Don Thomas has just announced that the City and District Baseball League will officially get under way at the Alemite Field here on Friday, May 24, holiday or no holiday. Stewart-Warmer Alemite, and the Belleville Juniors will fire the opening guns which will be prefaced by the usual ceremonies. If and when the holiday is declared, and should Friday be "it" the game will be an afternoon affair. If not, a twilight joust. More about that opening game later.

KIWANIS JUNIORS

When the erstwhile Belleville juniors baseball team trots out on the diamond this Spring, they will be garbed in neat white uniforms bearing the name and crest of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville. For that popular service club, one of the live wire organizations of the city has taken the youngsters under their sponsorship wing for this season, and thus has added another feather of community achievement to its already well decorted hat.

• • •

The announcement was made over the weekend, and baseball life has taken on a rosier hue for Coach Speedy St. Louis and his hard-working aggregation of baseball-minded youngsters. There is a new spirit in the camp today, and the team from the coach to the water-boy is going about its business with springiness in its step and lightness in its heart.

• • •

"Naturally, I was a bit disappointed when Allan Kelleher and Bobby Bunton, two of my ace pitchers, went to Kingston to try out with the professional team down there, but after all I realize that it is the best thing in the world for them. In the meantime, the team is going along on its merits and while we are not possessed of any outstanding hurlers at present, the Juniors will get by and give the best of 'em a battle," St. Louis said.

• • •

"The boys are tickled to death to play for the Kiwanis Club, and already a marked difference has been seen in their practice. We are going to do the best we can for the league and the club, and while we may not be champions, someone will know they have been in a ballgame before the kids start kicking footballs around," he smiled.

The Juniors will practise Wednesday night, Coach St. Louis announced, adding that, "other nights will be used too, but at the moment I can't name them." The Kiwanians open the City Baseball League here on Friday next against Lefty Whitman's Stewart Warner Alemites.

• • •

The kids will be garbed in brand new uniforms and across the breast will be the name "Kiwanis" in blue, while the club crest in blue and white will be worn on the left sleeve. All players will wear numbers.

• • •

Even Colling Wouldn't do This

During an Ohio State League game between the Dayton Indians and Middletown Reds last week, Umpire George Bollinger pulled something new, even for Class D circuit arbiters. In the seventh inning with Middletown at bat, Bollinger whirled around between pitches, moved toward the stands, looked toward the press box and bellowed: "What's the count?" A fan in the stands shouted, "Three and one," and Bollinger went back to the plate, apparently satisfied.

One For the Book

The double steal by Johnny Hopp and Tommy Holmes, which broke a 2 to 2 Brave-Cub tie in the twelfth inning at Wrigley Field, Chicago, recently, was "One for the Book." With Johnny on third and Holmes on first and Nanny Fernandez at the plate Billy Southworth, Boston manager, flashed a squeeze sign from his third base coacher's box. But Nanny apparently didn't get the signal, as he made no effort to bunt the ball as Hopp came tearing in. That left Johnny stranded, high and dry, half way between third and home.

• • •

Catcher Clyde McCullough snapped the ball down to Lowrey, substituting for Stan Hack at third base, but as the startled crowd of 13,632 gasped, Peanuts held onto the sphere, Hopp scoring without a play being made on him, and Holmes dashed down to second. The subsequent explanation was that the ball became snagged in the web of Peanuts' glove and Lowrey was helpless to do anything about it.

Montreal, May 20 — (CP) — Dave Castilloux and Gus Mell put on a good fight here Friday night, but around town they're saying maybe the boys should have taken their managers into the ring and made it a foursome.

The ring maestros themselves put on a preview of the show in a liquid refreshment establishment the night before the real fight, and if they didn't show as much polish as ther charges, they at least weren't lacking in enthusiasm.

It all started when Mell's manager, Maurice Foreman, and Castilloux's mentor, the venerable Deacon Allen, were exchanging pleasantries over, probably, a glass of coke. Mr. Foreman became rather irked by one of the Deacon's sallies and came out swinging. The Deacon, nothing loath for a bit of Donnybrook, came right back and there was considerable confusion for a few moments.

It ended rather ingloriously when the Deacon removed his glasses, and so hampered found he was punishing the furniture and nearby unwary waiters rather more than he was hurting his opponent.

On the basis of the week's activities, therefore, it seems the rival camps produced a draw. And that certainly should call for a rematch with all four in the ring at once. It should be a crowd pleaser.

Montreal Notes:

Lew Hayman is looking around for a new and distinctive name for his Montreal Big Four football squad, and is pondering "Alouettes" as a moniker. Al (Montreal Herald) Parsley thinks that might be rather appropriate at that. Alouettes are swallows, which is just what there would be plenty of during those crisp autumn days — out of pocket-size containers . . . Rumors are that Montreal may share a Negro baseball team with Pittsburgh. The local squad, to be known as Crawfords, would play half their home games here and half in Pittsburgh. Brooklyn, Boston and Cleveland are the other proposed entries.

Bruce Woodcock, back in England after his fifth-round knockout by Tami Mauriello last week, hopes to return to the United States for more fights. Woodcock told reporters he thought he was winning the Mauriello fight until he was dazed by a butt on the head received in a clinch.

France ended a long string of disasters in international soccer competition when a French club defeated England 2-1 at the Colombes Stade in Paris.

Lightheavyweight champion Gus Lesnevich, who caught the fancy of British boxing fans when he stopped Freddie Mills in London last week, plans to stay in England for at least one more fight. Place, time and opponent are as yet unspecified.

A 13 to 1 shot, Blue Again, owned by R. W. Leatherdale of Windsor, Ont., defeated a crack field of pacers by 1½ lengths in the $50,000 Western Grand harness pace, closing day feature of the Santa Anita Grand Circuit meet.

Shells of the North Bay Fastball League really had to get themselves some hits to make up for their inadequacies in the field. The club committed nine errors but still managed to pound out an 11-6 victory over their opposition.

The touring Liverpool soccer team of the English League continued to coast easily past American opposition as they gave a team of American League all-stars a decisive 5-0 drubbing for the third straight victory of their tour.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 391
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The magician develops a knack for taking rabbits out of a hat. It takes plenty of practice. You could do it, too, if you were told how; clumsily, at first; a slow move at a time.

An expert bridge player develops card reading ability by much practice. You could do it, too. But such things are learned best a step at a time in slow motion.

Your basis is a lead rule that shows this order of preference; tops, longies, shorts. You are warned: Don't lead a suit-bid by the opponents; against a suit bid, don't lead away from ace or king.

When a small card is led, apply the rule of 11: Subtract the led card from 11. The result shows how many higher cards in that suit are held in the three hands outside of leader.

To these guides, you add the knowledge gained from past bids. As a further aid you can see the cards exposed in the dummy hand and the cards held in your own hand.

Against a four heart contract, sit east when your partner in the west leads spade five. You can see only these spades:

NORTH
♠J 9 4
WEST EAST
♠5 ♠K 10 6 3

The five in west is the card led by partner. The J 9 4 in the north are the spades exposed in dummy. The K 10 6 3 are the spades you hold. What can you discover from partner's lead?

Five from 11 are six. If the led five is a fourth best, no more than six spades higher than a five are in north, east, south. Two of them are seen in dummy. Three of them are in your east hand.

This tells you that the south declarer has only one spade higher than a five. That is your first step in this card-reading stunt.

You should know which high spade is held by south. You know the exact four spades held by west. What else do you know.

Make the most of your knowledge.

Mickey Vernon Slugging at .411 Clip for Senators

Washington, May 20 —(AP)— There's a new name at the top of big league baseball's leading hitters today — that of James Barton (Mickey) Vernon, slugging at a .441 clip.

Vernon is a 28-year-old, six-foot-two southpaw with little to say as he goes about his fielding job at first base for Washington Senators — but his big bat has been saying plenty.

Early in the spring Vernon couldn't get started. Not until 18 games ago did manager Ossie Bluege establish him as the regular firstsacker. Since then he has been on a batter's binge.

As the Senators beat the Chicago White Sox twice Sunday, Vernon smashed out six hits in nine times at bat, including two doubles, two homers and a triple.

He extended a consecutive hitting streak to 17 games during which he has made 31 hits in 78 attempts. Vernon already has solved Washington's old and vexing problem of finding a dependable clean-up hitter. And he is moving up on the runs-batted-in leaders with 22 to his credit.

BUFFALO BISONS TAME MONTREAL IN BOTH GAMES

Royals Almost Dumped Out of First Place by the Two Losses

By The Associated Press

Billy Pierce and Art Houtteman, two teen-aged Detroit farmhands chucking for Buffalo Bisons in the International League, have put the handcuffs on Montreal's sluggers.

Opposing the clay hopper gang which had won 11 of its last 12 starts, Pierce and Houtteman yesterday hurled the Bisons to a double victory that almost dumped the Royals out of first place. Montreal now is only half-game ahead of Syracuse and two in front of third-place Buffalo.

Pierce tamed the Royals in the first game, 7-3 although he allowed six hits and nine walks. Hourtteman needed a last-inning homer by Chet Wieczorek to cop the finale, 5-4.

Syracuse took both ends of a twin from Jersey City 5-3 and 1-0 Although outhit by the little Giants in the opener, the Chiefs overpowered the opposition on homers by Al Rubeling, Bud Wahl and Jodie Beeler. Earl (Not Hit) Harrist trimmed Warren Sandel in a tight seven-inning duel in the nightcap, yielding only three blows. Beelers double scored Roland Van Harringston with the lone tally.

Baltimore turned out the day's largest crowd, 17,476, to see the Orioles move into the thick of the crap, only 2 1-2 games behind Montreal. The Birds squeezed out two one-run wins over Newark 4-3 and 3-2. Eight walks by Johnny Moore and Charley Haag gave Baltimore the first and an error by third baseman Jack Phillips set the stage for Ray Flanigan's two-hit triumph over Duane Pillette in the seven-inning tilt.

Rochester made it a day of clean sweeps by taking Toronto in two games. Rochester rallied with three in the ninth inning to send the first contest into overtime and pulled out a 7-6 verdict for reliefer Glen Gardner. Bud Byerly, sent down from the Cardinals, blankeds the Leafs with two hits in the 12-0 finale. Rookie Charlie Diering poled out eight hits in nine trips and batted in six runs for the winners.

AT THE BELLE — Ray Milland as the tormented hero of Paramount's drama, "The Lost Weekend," 4-Academy-Award winner, attracting large audiences to the Belle Theatre, is shown with Doris Dowling, who has the role of Gloria, the too-wise, too-sentimental bar butterfly. Jane Wyman is co-starred with Milland.

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press

Spud Chandler and Red Ruffing, Yankees—Chandler shut out the Indians 2-0 with three hits in the opener; Ruffing gave up seven to win nightcap 7-1.

Dave Ferriss, Red Sox and Hal Newhouser, Tigers—Ferriss won his fifth game without a setback when he blanked the Tigers 4-0, in the opener; Newhouser gained his sixth triumph against one defeat in limiting the Sox to four hits in 3-1 nightcap.

Andy Pafko, Cubs and Dick Culler, Braves— Pafko's home run broke a 6-6 tie in the opener to help the Cubs win 8-6; Culler singled in two runs in the seventh to give the Braves a 5-3 victory in the afterpiece.

Buddy Rosar and Irv Hall, Athletics—Rosar's single scored Sam Chapman in eighth to win the opener, 4-3; Hall made four hits in the night cap and drove in three runs in the A's 13-2 triumph for a clean sweep over St. Louis Browns.

Mickey Vernon, Senators—Vernon homered and doubled to lead Washington to a 4-3 triumph over the Sox in the opener and hit a single, double, triple and homer to win the second game 7-1.

Ed Heusser, Reds—Blanked the Dodgers with seven hits as the Reds beat Brooklyn 4-0.

Stan Musial and Harry Brecheen, Cards—Musial made three hits to lead the Cards to a 9-5 opening victory over the Phillies; Brecheen blanked the Phils with six hits to win 4-0, in the nightcap.

"HOT" GEMS

It was once believed that rubies contained an internal fire which could bring water to a boil.

"WHIPPAH" MEETS HENNING HERE ON FRIDAY NIGHT

"Whipper" Billy Watson is taking no chances on that British Empire Crown slipping from his handsome noggin here next Friday night when he meets the tenacious Lee Henning, a 250-pounder who knows all the questions and two answers to each one insofar as wrestling goes.

The champion received an anything but gentle going-over from Wladyslaw Talun here a couple of weeks ago, and at present he is doing some conditioning with Phil "The Voice" Lawson in a North Hastings fishing spot. He'll return next Friday in the proverbial pink, ready to take on anything including Mr. Henning, whose ideas regarding the outcome of the match differ somewhat to those of the Whippah.

Brother Jonathan, a Belleville favorite will be back and his bout should be a dilly. He is matched with the 256 pounder from Nebraska, none other than Pat Fraley, and the faithful will remember that these two put on an apple-pan dowdy of a scrap when they drew a few weeks ago.

Dean Detton and that old 'nasty,' Leo Numa are slated for the preliminary so it looks like another exciting night all round for the fans.

SIX PILOTS GAIN START LINEUP

Indianapolis, May 20 (AP) — Wind, rain and mechanical trouble bothered drivers trying to qualify during the weekend for the 500-mile race at Indianapolis motor speedway May 30, but six pilots gained the start lineup with 49-year-old Cliff Bergere as head man.

Bergere, former Hollywood stunt driver, took the pole position with an average of 126.471 miles per hour for 10 miles.

Other qualifiers were Paul Russo, Kenosha, Wis., who won No. 2 starting position with a speed of 126.183 miles per hour; Sam Hanjs of Los Angeles, No. 3, 124.762; Hal Cole of South Gate, Calif., No. 4, 120,728; Jimmy Jackson of Palm Springs, Cal., No. 5, 120.257; and Louis Durant of Los Angeles, No. 6, 118.973.

Cole and Jackson have never competed in the grind.

Ben Hogan Wins Colonial Tròphy

Fort Worth, Tex., May 20 (CP) —Ben Hogan, golf's amazing atom lapped the field in the run for the money today, his course record five-under-par 65 that brought him victory in the rich colonial National invitation tournament pushing his total earnings for the year to $17,819.50—more than $7,000 ahead of his closest pursuer.

Hogan closed out with 279 strokes for 72 holes—one under par—to earn $3,000. Harry Todd of Hershey, Pa., finished with 280 and drew $2,000. Fred Haas, Jr., of New Orleans, six months a pro, shot a 66 on the last 18 to capture third money of $1,300 with 281.

Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., was fourth with 282 and Bob Hamilton, Chicago; Henry Picard, Cleveland and Lloyd Mangrum, Los Angeles, ended up with 283 and a tie for fifth.

Chapter 6

At dawning he stood bent above her head which was deep in the silken pillow.

The telephone awakened Audrey.) Sleepily she answered it. "What time is it? Who do you want? Mr. Blake? Mr. Who? Oh, Mr. Blake? Yes! Who's calling?"

"Never mind who's callin' just put him on the wire," a harsh voice answered. "I want to talk to him."

"He doesn't happen to be at home."

"Listen, I'm not fooling. Sure he's not home. His home is with me. I want to talk to Gordon Blake, and I got a right to talk to him."

"Don't be so curt about it," said Audrey. "I tell you he isn't here, and don't talk about your right to speak to him. Mr. Blake happens to be my husband."

"What?" The voice became thinner and higher. "Your husband? Where do you get that tripe? Who do you think you're kidding? You're nutty as fruit cake. He's my boy friend. I'll talk to him if I got to phone him every hour. Get that."

Audrey furious, answered with, "Well, you get this. You won't ever talk to him in this house if I answer the phone!" She slammed down the receiver, and muttered fiercely, "The trollop!"

That evening she told Gordon she wanted to go out for dinner. She was in dinner dress of melon pink silk and chiffon; four jewelled buttons, with giant chiffon poppies for pockets. She looked especially beautiful, but taut. He said he had expected to work on the sketches and dine at home. And that was the wrong answer; the one wrong word was either "expected" or "work." The one wrong time to say it, like the torn thread that starts a run in sheer silk.

"Why didn't you 'phone and tell me that? You knew my private phone, didn't you?"

"I was so busy, Audrey," he continued, "first work I've done for a while. Of course, I remember the number."

"Someone else used it this afternoon."

"That's nice. Old friends?"

"Not a friend of mine by a long shot," she flung back at him. "But one of yours. I wish you hadn't told her my private number."

"What do you mean, her?"

"A girl friend of yours, Gordon - an enemy of mine, judging from the way she spoke. Of course I'm not surprised that there have been other women in your life."

He faced her, surprised, eyes still and wide, and told her there was no one to whom he had ever given the number, or ever would. Audrey's answer was hot, hot as the phrases that stung her ear when she had listened to the phone.

"I'm not jealous, just humiliated. I never heard more swinish talk," she said, "and that creature certainly knew you well. She became most profane when she heard you were married. Why didn't you tell her? Afraid?"

He came closer to her, took her hand; she stared at him, level, then lowered her hand into the flowered pocket. Her crisp voice told him that Moonhollow had been hers and now she was willing to share it with him, but with none of his past "acquaintances."

"Especially feminine," she snapped, and drew away. "I've had enough of that!"

She had drawn away in more ways than one, he discovered the next day. The distance remained, as they sat across the table — words they spoke, distance between his thoughts as he rapped later at clogging typewriter keys in his study, thinking of her at her shopping in the near-by village. Oliver brought the mail.

Since "Madame was out," Gordon thumbed listlessly through business envelopes until he picked out a dark gray, heavy envelope addressed to him. There was no return address on it. It was gummed tight and he tore off the end rather than wait to get a paper knife. There was a single gray sheet inside, typewritten:

"Dear Mr. Blake,

I know that you are miserable. If you read certain letters that have been written to your wife, they will explain everything. They are in her dressing-table drawer. Press hidden button, back of mirror. You will appreciate this service rendered by-

A friend."

Gordon reread it, looked at the back of the sheet for a watermark, at the envelope stamp and postage time. The first six words were in capital letters from a standard modern typewriter. He tried to smile at them, but the sombre figures didn't smile back.

"Gordon boy, it almost looks like the beginning of a mystery. Now who in blazes would..." Gordon realizeed that the writer of the letter knew. And it seemed that the "letters" might explain something. He decided, walked quickly to the dressing-table, put his fingers behind the mirror. The top drawer which sprang open held a brooch, a bracelet and a powder puff. He ran his fingers around the back of the drawer; nothing. He laughed. Of course not!

But the second drawer was different, shallow, and his hand was tense when he placed it to the rear, and it trembled when it touched papers.

They were tied with ribbon, about twelve of them, most of them the same color, and addressed to Audrey in large, angular writing. His fingers fumbled with the bow; he looked again, to memorize the order in which they were placed. They were from Clifford Morley - all to her.

He sat, his knees weakened. Morley had written:

"Two days away from you now on this stupid trip. The days have clogged my brain and chocked my throat. My heart's ashes. witch of the wood. I want to go hand in hand with you in your magic wonderland. When I called, your voice sounded like a little bell in the telephone's throat. Beating like that blue vein in your right hand. Remember when I told you that your arms were like a necklace, holding your body like a huge jewel close to me in love and sleep."

Others were as ardent. One mentioned Oliver. "...As long as my devoted Oliver is near you, I know that you are well guarded."

"She still loves Morley!" Gordon said to himself. "She keeps his letters! No doubt re-reads them often. She wants him, not me! It's evident that she married me while she was desperately unhappy without him. I'm madly in love with her. No other woman can ever mean anything important to me. There is one woman for a man. Audrey's mine. She's the one I want to work for, to live for, to dream for. It's her kiss I want on my lips as I go ahead trying to find a better and fuller place in life. I hoped that some day she would know me."

Gordon swallowed. His throat was dry. The rest of the letters were the same. Hurriedly he tied them, flung them into the desk, snapped shut the drawer and hastened to his own room. He had heard footsteps.

* * *

Gordon plugged at his typewriter keys, listening apprehensively to the approaching footsteps. He tensed when someone knocked at his study door. It was Oliver. "Can I be of any service, Mr. Blake?" the butler asked sharply.

"No, I'm quite all right," answered Gordon. He closed the door and breathed deeply and easily. It had been a narrow squeeze. He knew how he would have hated the icy Oliver to have caught him filching the letters red-handed from Audrey's ivory dressing-table.

But the quiet disappearance of Oliver to the lower floor of the house was no signal for joy. The memory of Morley's letters to Audrey, which he had just read, made him miserable through the afternoon.

The moments crawled. The sun was dropping behind the horizon when he heard Audrey's blue roadster grinding up the limestone drive. He drew back the heavy golden draperies to watch her. She was carrying a large rectangular package covered with manila wrapping paper.

He brushed his hair, slipped into a jacket, studied himself in the mirror, wondering whether his face showed a hint of the secret he knew—that Morley's love-letters were still in her possession and kept hidden. His face was tense and dark. The scar over his left eye had whitened as it always did in anger, but his face was otherwise forcedly expressionless. He went down stairs and stood quietly in the lavish drawing-room, watching her.

Audrey unwrapped the package carefully. It was the portrait of Morley. She rested the bottom of it on the gleaming side table and studied it thoughtfully, then looked at the back of it where it had been repaired. Gordon came closer; suddenly he put his arms around her.

She recoiled, muttering. "Oh, you, Gordon. Don't frighten me so!" He raised her chin. She lifted her coral pink lips to his—obligingly—meanwhile holding the portrait in both hands.

"I miss your arms around me," he said.

"O, you silly boy. Do you want me to drop this picture?"

"If it's a choice—you know my answer." It was a danger spot in the conversation. She avoided it as though skating around a patch of thin ice at Lake Placid. She explained how the artist who painted it had repaired it. He'd done a good job on it too, by arranging the strips of torn canvas first, and then pasting them with a resilient glue to fresh strong strips of paper, and then backing them with more glue and parchment.

Gordon reminded her that she had ridden more than two hundred miles. She said she was enthusiastic about the whole job, and didn't mind the time and the rides to get it.

When Gordon reminded Audrey of the time she had spent, she flared, "But of course, it's not a silly canvas you can pick up in Greenwich Village for a dollar—it has personality!"

"So did he?" asked Gordon.

"Certainly," she answered, sitting deeper in the sailcloth-covered sofa. "Color too!" She sat admiring the portrait which she had rehung in its original spot above the black Regency mantel. "I'd hardly have fallen madly in love with anyone commonplace. Don't you like it?" she inquired.

"No! I don't want to offend you—but you asked me for a true answer. That's it. It seems to get in my way. It asks for too much attention."

"Not from you," she returned in a harder voice.

He explained haltingly then that the canvas portrait was like a thin partition—a film between them that ought not be there. Audrey resented that. He went on to say that he had felt that, especially in the last few days—a sudden cooling of her love for him—a cooling probably produced by the unseen presence of the glint-eyed man on canvas. And he told her that he would like to replace the portrait for her with a land or seascape.

This suggestion met with a blunt refusal. Gordon answered that he hadn't known there was an old memory in the family closet.

That bit, and drew bad blood. From that point on it was criticize and answer, taunt and bluster. Gordon was ready for the tiff, and felt that he'd see it all the way through.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was reeding the joke page in her Home and Table Magazine and she started to laugh out loud to herself, and I said What's funny, ma?

Oh. it's just a joke, ma said, and I said, Well G, ma, that's all anything is that's funny. What joke is it? I said, and ma said, Well, I'm not sure you'd understand it, but I'll explain it to you. It seems back in the days of Thomas Edison they used to call Mr. Edison the Wizard because of his great inventions, and it seems an old farmer actually saw Mr. Edison personly one day, and afterwards he said, "Why, he's no wizard, he's as big as I am."

G, it's funny all right, but how do you explain it? I said, and ma said, Well you see, the old farmer must of thought—oh well, as long as you appriciate the humor of it, you dont need an explination. I must tell that one to your father, just to show him he's not the only joke Smith around here, she said.

And after supper she said to pop, William, did you ever hear what the old farmer said when he saw Thomas Edison?

I dont believe so, did Edison hear him? pop said, and ma said, Now William please dont try to be funny when I'm the one that's telling the joke. The farmer said Why, he's no genius, he's as big as I am."

Yes, yes, go on, pop said, and ma said, Now William, you're not usually so dense, do you want me to draw you a diagram?

No, just give me the green light when it's time to laugh, pop said, and ma said, As a matter of fact the werd he used wasn't genius, it was wizard.

Oh, wizard, that's different, pop said, and ma said, Naturelly you can see it after I've told you, but if you were so bright you'd of guessed it without my having to tell you.

Maybe you delibritly told it wrong just to test me, pop said, and ma said, Maybe, I did, smarty.

Being the end of the joke.

Second to Climb Nelson's Column

London, May 20 (CP) — When a former naval stoker, Henry Taylor, 41, climbed a repair scaffolding around Nelson's Column in Trafalgar Square, he was fined 40 shillings and given widespread publicity.

But he was only following in the footsteps of the late Sidney Gedge, one-time member of parliament for Stockport, who climbed the column nearly 100 years ago when he was only 10.

The boy Gedge was sent out to amuse himself and given one shilling to buy his lunch. In Trafalgar Square he found the newly erected column draped in scaffolding. He climbed to the top to find angry monumental masons waiting for him and Nelson lying on his side, not yet erected.

The masons insisted Gedge should pay for his temerity and he handed over his shilling. Then he stooped down and kissed the face of Nelson.

Chinese Nationals Take Szepingkai From Communists

Nanking, May 20 (AP) — Szepingkai, stronghold of Chinese Communists, fell to a triumphant National 1st Army today after a punishing, 32-day battle on the Manchurian plain, government dispatches said.

Seventy miles to the northeast lay Communist-held Changchun, prime objective of the first army, but between it and the Manchurian capital were thousands of Communist troops, armed with artillery.

The Communists were reported lunging out 250 miles to the southwest in Jehol Province, aiming to drive another government army to the sea and cut the supply line to Manchuria.

The rising fury of the fighting in the north overshadowed a government drive south of Peiping and a new truce in Shantung Province that lifted a Communist threat to Tsinan, the provincial capital.

From his headquarters in Mukden, Gen. Tu Li-Ming, government commander, announced the capture of Szepingkai. Lt.-Gen. Sun Li-Jen, famed for his victorious campaign in Burma, hurried back from a visit to the United States and reached the front Sunday in time to lead his United States-equipped army in the assault.

Don't Concede Loss

Communist sources, while not conceding the loss of Szepingkai, said the 1st army brought up two fresh divisions and went over to the railway city Wednesday. They said six successive assaults were repulsed that first day.

Two days later, Peiping dispatches said, 17 Communist brigades opened their own drive along a 200-mile front in eastern Jehol Province, bent on annihilating the Government's 13th Army.

Preliminary attacks overran government-held Pehpiao, coal-producing centre only 50 miles north of Chinhsien, Manchurian city which guards the Government's overland supply lines to Szepingkai.

Want Immediate Action

Executive headquarters at Peiping dispatched a trouble shooter to Chengteh, Jehol Province capital, in an attempt to prod the truce team there into "immediate action" to stop the fighting.

In the new truce agreement in central Shantung Province, Communists agreed to give up four towns they had captured, release prisoners and return to their original positions.

A Peiping dispatch said that before the truce, Tsinan's power system had been disrupted and the provincial capital left with only three days' water supply as the Communists closed in from three sides.

Soldiers Can't Understand Fuss Over Galilee

Tiberias, Palestine, May 20 (Reuters)— British troops, some with medal ribbons of three campaigns, cannot understand the recent "fuss and hullabaloo" over mixed bathing, cocktails and dancing on the west shore of the Sea of Galilee.

The Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry on Palestine recommended that the government should exercise close supervision over holy places and such localities as the Sea of Galilee to protect them from desecration, and quoted the case of the Galilee Lido at Tiberias.

The Galilee Lido is no Miami. There is a dreamy, detached atmosphere about the whole place.

It is just a white brick, three-storey clubhouse, smothered in purple flowers, a collection of green and white cabins for changing clothes, a few chairs under beach umbrellas, a 20-yard jetty and a ping-pong table.

Nine-tenths of interviewed soldiers said they never "went inside" to use the bar or bear jazz —from a gramophone in summer and a four-piece band in winter.

Galilee is 600 feet below the sea level and torrid at this season. The men can swim or sunbathe from dawn to dusk at 10 cents. The clubhouse is still closed by the authorities for over-charging.

Soldiers are surprised that the Lido has been the subject of controversy, criticism and parliamentary questions. So far as they are concerned, it is a retreat from routine military duties and a scorching sun.

They acknowledge that it could offend religious susceptibilities but some point out that the Lido has been running for seven years and, anyway, there are many sports nearby offering similar drinks and dances.

more useful than this to them. While I certainly regret it very much, the fact is that this was the most innocuous report I could have put my hands on."

"You had put yourself in a position with Lunan where you had to give him something and you thought this was the least harmful?"

"That is what it amounts to."

The other report dealt with navigational aids "in the years to come, five or ten years".

Mazerall had told the commission he realized the information Lunan asked was secret and in giving it he was violating his oaths of secrecy and allegiance.

Mazerall said there had been no suggestion that he was to be paid for the information, if there had been he would have refused to participate.

He said the only occasion on which he had ever met any official from the Soviet Embassy was when his wife gave a piano recital for the Russian Medical Fund in the winter of 1942. He had then met the Ambassador Feodor Gousev.

demand more food and establishment of a "Popular Front" government.

Col. L. E. Bunker, an aide, said he believed the statement referred to a mob storming the prime ministers official residence two days before the April 10 election, manhandling of police at yesterday's demonstration and several recent incidents in which Labor - Communist delegations pushed their way through the Imperial Palace gates with petitions for the Emperor.

Gen. MacArthur said the demonstrations constitute "a menace not only to the orderly government but to the basic purposes and security of the occupation itself."

GERMAN YOUTH ENTERTAIN AT FIRST POST-WAR COUNTY FAIR

In the shadow of war shattered buildings, German boys and girls entertain crowds at Leipzig, Germany, with songs and folk dancing at the first county fair to be held since the war. The first post-war festival brought out the finest furs in the world for display with cars and other products which could be obtained for a few packages of cigarettes — if they were on sale. The show was held under the jurisdiction of Russian occupation forces.

SERIOUS MUSIC GAINING FAVOR IN AUSTRALIA

Permanent Symphony Orchestras Being Formed in State Capitals as Musical Interest Grows

By JACK HOLDSWORTH
(C.P. Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, May 20 — (CP) — Serious music is booming in Australia, where for long it has been treated with apathy.

Until recently, there was not sufficient sustained interest in this type of music to make possible the formation of a large and permanent symphony orchestra in each state capital.

But interest now has grown so much that each capital, with the exception of Hobart, has, or is planning to have a permanent symphony orchestra.

Growth of this interest has been particularly noticeable in Sydney, which is regarded as the musical capital of Australia.

Crowds beyond all expectations flocked to the concerts given recently by the American conductor, Maurice Abravanel, who was brought to Australia by the Sydney Orchestral Society and a Sydney newspaper.

Abravanel gave ten Sunday night concerts which were attended by 20,000 music lovers. At eight of the concerts, the "House Full" sign was displayed and for nearly every concert queues stood for hours waiting to obtain admission.

Prominent musicians and music-lovers said the concerts were a great tribute to Sydney's musical enthusiasm because Abravanel made no concessions to "popular" taste.

Another instance of this enthusiasm for music is the increase in the number of students learning music at Sydney University's Conservatorium. The number has trebled within ten years, and there are now 20,000 students.

Sydney suburban councils are considering the erection of outdoor music shells, the first to be erected in Australia. The state education department also plans to build up orchestras in high schools, and develop musical talent in school children.

Interest in serious music has also increased in Queensland where the state government now is considering the establishment of student orchestras or bands in every school, and the appointment of a state music director.

In all states, the Australian Broadcasting Commission has helped considerably to maintain this interest by regularly importing overseas conductors for a series of concerts given all over the Commonwealth. Within the last five years, it has brought over such world-famous figures as Dr. Malcolm Sargent, Eugene Ormandy, Canada's Sir Ernest MacMillan and the Czech conductor, Walter Susskind.

Booth Tarkington, Famous Novelist, Dies at Age of 76

Indianapolis, May 20 — (AP)— Booth Tarkington, whose novels found a place on the world's bookshelves, died Sunday night in the Indianapolis home in which he had done much of his writing. He was 76.

His death took another of the small group of writers and artists who brought Indiana its golden age of letters shortly after the turn of the century. One of his boyhood friends was the Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

With those of Riley, Meredith Nicholson, George Ade, and George Barr McCutcheon, his writings brought Indiana a prominent place in the world's literary circles. Of the group, only Mr. Nicholson is alive.

Tarkington's literary output was prodigious, and the quality was equal to the quantity. Two of his novels brought him the Pulitzer Prize for literature—"The Magnificent Ambersons" in 1919 and "Alice Adams" three years later.

His first successful novel, published when he was 30, was "The Gentleman from Indiana," and Tarkington himself often was referred to by this title in later years.

Preferred Mature Novels

Tarkington preferred to be remembered for his mature novels, but it was the tales of boyhood which won him the greatest audience. He wrote "Seventeen," "Willie Baxter, Jr." and "Little Orvie," and created his most remembered character, Penrod, in the novel of that name.

His Indianapolis home became his fortress whenever Tarkington began work on a novel. He would devote 18 or more hours a day to his writing, turning out each page in longhand on yellow manuscript paper.

These efforts finally cost Tarkington his eyesight. In 1930 he became blind, after being troubled with failing sight for years. An operation partially restored his vision, but his stories were dictated thereafter.

Tarkington ventured into the field of play-writing on occasions. His "Monsieur Beaucaire" was staged in 1901 and he followed it with a string of hits. After the production of "Magnolia" in 1923, he said he was through with the theatre. Critics had said he was a novelist, not a playwright. But in 1931 he was back with "Colonel Satan," based on the life of Aaron Burr.

Girl Walks Again After Paralysis For 23 Years

Pembroke, Ont., May 20 (CP)— Audrey Barr of this upper Ottawa Valley town is walking about and seeing the world again after being confined to her bed for 23 years during which she was unable even to move her head.

Injured in a fall while playing tennis in the early 1920's, Audrey was given up as a hopeless case by her doctor, who said he could only make her as comfortable as possible. Until last August she lay in bed at her brother's home here, completely paralyzed.

At that time, however, hospital authorities decided to try again. Removed to hospital, she was urged gradually to try walking, and finally, months later, took her first step before collapsing to a chair. More months of carefully-planned exercise followed, with work on a crutch-like device on wheels called a "walker" which helped her remember how to walk.

By last February the invalid was able to walk to the front door of the hospital. Just before Easter she had managed to walk a block down one of the adjoining streets. Now, says Audrey, "I could walk a mile."

Audrey has yet to see a talking movie, but she's not so interested in modern movies as in automobiles, which are a constant source of amazement. Rides in the country have been added to her recovery agenda.

"I'm not used to getting up even yet. There is so much I want to see and do," she stated, adding: "When the braces are taken off my ankles I'll be leaving hospital."

Brothers Rescued By Fellow Miners

Rouyn, Que., May 20 (CP) — The story of the heroic rescue by fellow miners of two underground workers, caught 200 feet below the surface of the ground, was told yesterday, one week after the men, Octave Plourde and his brother, Paul, were taken from their perilous position.

The men were trapped 11 hours underground in a drift at Francoeur Gold Mines, and after their rescue at 2:30 a.m., last Sunday morning rallied rapidly to throw off any apparent effect from the experience. The chute got out of control about three o'clock Saturday afternoon and some 200 tons of rock and clay went down the raise to block the exit from the drift to the shaft. When the position of the men was discovered, the entire mine crew went to work to remove the obstruction from the drift and toiled unceasingly until an opening was provided.

The Plourdes were working at the second level 200 feet down and 1,200 feet from the shaft. They were wet and cold but managed to keep out the weeping water by finding places on the ledges in the drift. Men working to rescue them continued to shout words of encouragement to them.

When the opening was cleared a canoe had to be brought down to convey the men the 300 feet to safety, as much water had accumulated.

Military Plane Hits N. Y. Skyscraper And Five Killed

Believed Craft Overshot Newark Airport in Overcast

JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, May 21. (CP)— A race through a darkened, deserted Wall Street skyscraper to find the plane which had smashed through its superstructure highlighted the second crash of a military aircraft into one of Manhattan's giant buildings in less than ten months.

The plane, a light transport of the United States Army Air Forces, crashed last night into the 58-storey bank of Manhattan Company building shortly before 8 p.m., E.D.T., killing its five passengers but for some time it was difficult to locate the wreckage in the vast skyscraper, fourth largest in New York.

Moving up floor by floor, police finally found the plane's ruins in a darkened 58th-storey office. All its passengers and crew—four army officers and a women's army corps officer—had been killed instantly.

Although fires were started on the ninth and 23rd floors by flaming debris, there was no fire in the office where the cabin of the plane lodged.

In Washington, the War Department listed the dead as:

Maj. Mansel R. Campbell, pilot, Pontiac, Mich., Capt. Tom L. Hall, Sioux Falls, S.D., and Lieuts. Robert L. Stevenson, Bronx, N.Y., Angelo A. Ross, Whitehall, N.Y., Mary E. Bond, Newtown, Pa.

No Civilians Injured

An Army announcement said the plane was flying from Smyrna, Tenn., to Newark, N.J., and probably overshot the Newark airfield in an overcast.

No one apart from the plane's passengers was injured in the virtually deserted building, located at 40 Wall Street, in the heart of Manhattan's financial district.

The crash recalled that of a B-25 bomber last July 28 into the 79th floor of the 102-storey Empire State Building in mid-Manhattan, in which fourteen persons, three army men and 11 office workers, were killed.

Last night's accident caused far less damage than the crash last July, when three floors of the Empire State Building were badly damaged. The plane involved in yesterday's accident was much smaller and ripped only a 15-square foot hole in the wall of a reception room of the Atlas Corporation on the Pine Street side of the Bank of Manhattan Building.

The pine-panelled office was little damaged. Bric-a-brac in wall niches and oil paintings hung around the room were still in position, although paintings were slightly tilted. Desks and furniture and corners were littered with shattered glass but otherwise undamaged.

Other offices on the same floor were unscathed.

Heard Muffled Sound

Building employees said they heard a muffled thunder shortly before eight o'clock and one elevator operator told The Canadian Press he thought there had been an explosion in the kitchen of a restaurant across the street.

Some pedestrians were struck but not injured by small bits of falling debris.

The cabin of the plane with its five passengers jammed at the front fell through the hole torn by the initial impact and police found the mutilated bodies lying on the heavy carpet of the office in front of the wreckage.

Part of one motor tore a hole in a neighboring roof, fell more than 50-storeys down a ventilating shaft, and started a small fire in a basement.

On the 23rd-floor set-back firemen found two parachutes—one open, indicating one passenger might have tried to jump at the last minute.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, May 21 — (CP)—Synopsis at 7:30 a.m.: During the night the warmer air, which yesterday spread northward from the Ohio Valley over the Lake Ontario and Southern Halliburton region, was being displaced by cooler air from the west. This cooler air mass extends over the west from the Rockies to the Appalachians and generally fair weather prevails.

Food Parley Sees Need to Remove Farmer Fears

Washington, May 21 (AP)—The focussed its attention today on the need for eliminating farmer fears International Food Conference of surplus crops and depressed prices if it is to encourage greater agricultural production.

Out to formulate fresh measures for combatting the famine threat, the parley had its attention called immediately to the farmer factor and the importance of banishing his uncertainty.

This point was raised by delegates from two major wheat-exporting countries—Canada and the United States—and by Cuba, one of the world's largest sugar exporters.

Moving into the second session of a 10-day conference, representatives from 18 nations and five international organizations concerned with the world food problem also encountered several other problems hampering greater collaboration of surplus-producing nations.

The top ones included:

1. The absence of Russia and Argentina from the conference, held under auspices of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization. Both countries are normally surplus-producing areas, but neither is a member of the F.A.O. Conference leaders said it would be difficult to work out a "completely effective" famine supply program without their participation.

2. Difference of views as to how far surplus grain-producing countries—such as Canada and the United States—should go in curbing feeding of grain to livestock to make more cereals available for famine relief. Both countries already are restricting the use of grains for feed to some extent.

Concern over possible future surpluses of wheat such as plagued its farmers in the 30s likewise was expressed by Canada's delegate, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture.

Hermann Frank Is Condemned To Be Hanged

London, May 21 (CP)—A Reuters dispatch from Prague today said that Karl Hermann Frank, former Reich's protector for Bohemia and Moravia, had been convicted and sentenced to death by a Czech court on charges that he directed the Lidice massacre. Frank will be hanged publicly, the dispatch said.

Bikini Atoll Atomic Bombings Will Be Scene of Biological Tests

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Washington, May 21 (AP)—One of the greatest biological tests in medical history will be made by the United States Navy this summer in the Bikini Atoll atomic bombings.

The purpose is to learn not only how to treat future injuries from atomic burns, blasts and x-rays, but also whether there may be long-delayed after effects.

There will be molds and fungi on the ships because these simple forms of life that grow so rapidly are sensitive to damage that might not show on larger animals. There will be insects in packages of grain, because insects are sensitive to changes in heredity from too much exposure to radioactive rays. There will be 150 special white mice, with inherited weakness for cancer, to study whether the bomb's single, massive flash of x-rays and neutrons can activate malignant growth.

There will be 4,000 white rats, 200 pigs and 200 goats, distributed over 22 ships to determine the effects of the bomb on personnel.

One reason for pigs is their likeness to humans in skin reaction to sunburn. The intense sunburn from the ultra-violet ray flash causes redness in a few minutes and blisters in a few hours. But it is important to learn how to distinguish early between sunburn, heat burns and those of x-rays. The latter superficially resemble sunburn, but are much more dangerous and in general are slower in appearing.

Second Reading Given Bill to Incorporate Air Cadet Corps; Park Boundaries Defined

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 21 — (CP)—The Commons had an odds-and-ends day yesterday and cleared several minor government bills from the order paper after quiet study in committee stage.

Third and final reading was given four measures dealing with the boundaries of national parks, sale and manufacture of explosives, sale of narcotic drugs and auditors for the Canadian National Railways while second reading was given a bill to incorporate the air cadet corps.

Later, the House debated briefly Progressive Conservative and C.C.F. motions of want-of-confidence in the government as a result of its price stabilization policy. R.H. Winters (L—Queens-Lunenburg), E. B. McKay (CCF — Weyburn) and Don Brown (L — Essex West) spoke.

At the House opening Finance Minister Ilsley disclosed that Canada expects to supply 2,300,000 tons — approximately 85,000,000 bushels — of bread grains to the world wheat pool in the five-month period of May to September this year.

viewing week-end talks between Canadian government officials

Mr. Ilsley read a statement re- and Rt. Hon. Herbert Morrison, British Deputy Prime Minister, who came to Ottawa from Washington after food discussions with United States authorities.

He said Canada had agreed to "put forth its best efforts to secure and make available additional supplies of grain."

Russian Troops For Germany Cross Czechoslovakia

Prague, May 21 (AP)—An official announcement today said Russian troops bound for Germany had begun moving across Czechoslovakia from the south in connection with "the reorganization of Russian occupation forces in Germany."

The announcement indicated that the movement would continue through May 26, date of the Czechoslovakian general election.

The main body of Russian forces was withdrawn from Czechoslovakia early this year.

A statement from the office of Prime Minister Zdenko Fierlinger said the movement was planned in consultation with the Czechoslovak General Staff, which had approved of the plan.

There was widespread speculation whether the presence of Russian troops, even in transit, would have any effect on the forthcoming parliamentary elections.

The statement from Fierlinger's office, however, said the troop movement was "due to the dislocation of Soviet occupation forces" and added that the "step has no political background. This is said with the purpose of anticipating all combinations of untrue speculations."

Swift Action by Roosevelt Helped to Save Battle Of El Alamein--Alexander

Montreal, May 21 —(CP)— An entire shipload of United States Sherman tanks which had been destined to provide the British with armor at the battle of El Alamein was sunk in the Atlantic by a German U-boat, Viscount Alexander revealed today.

The Governor-General made the disclosure in a speech prepared for delivery before the Canadian Club here and said the situation was saved when "the late President Roosevelt came to the rescue and at once ordered another shipload to be despatched to us, so that we should have them in time for that decisive engagement in the Western Desert."

Calling for the teamwork displayed by the Allies in the Mediterranean to meet post-war problems, he recalled the incident, which he said he believed was "not generally known."

"The battle of El Alamein, in the fall of 1942 was the first time we had sufficient resources in men and material with which to tackle the German on equal terms."

Reminiscing about Mediterranean battles, Viscount Alexander again paid tribute to the Canadian forces and said "it is a matter of great pride and satisfaction to me that amongst that great band of soldiers, I had Canadians with me, from the first days we landed in Italy until up to the final phase of the war.

"The 1st Division, under the command of that splendid young General, Guy Simonds, were the first to land in the assault on Sicily in July, 1943, which we overran in 38 days and which led to the unconditional surrender of Italy....

"During that great advance your young men fought many successful engagements, but none finer than at Ortona when they wrested that key point on the Adriatic from the best fighting formation in the Germany army — the 1st Parachute Division."

The Governor-General then addressed himself to French-speaking Canadians and, speaking briefly in French, said they could well be proud of the part their men had played in the Italian victories. He recalled that it was in the Ortona engagement that Maj. Paul Triquet of the famous "Van Doos"— the Royal 22nd Regiment—had earned his Victoria Cross.

Briefly he recalled other Canadian achievements in the drive through Italy: The breaking of the Hitler line at Pointe Corvo and the Gothic line at Pessaro on the Adriatic. He stressed the close co-operation of the Commonwealth, American, French and Polish troops.

STOP BLOCKING PEACECONFERENCE RUSSIA IS TOLD

State Secretary Byrnes Says United States Will Carry Matter to United Nations

Washington, May 21 (AP) — State Secretary Byrnes has told Russia, in effect:

Stop blocking a European peace conference this summer, or the United States will walk out of the Big Four Treaty talks and carry the matter before the United Nations.

Proclaiming an "offensive for peace," Mr. Byrnes in his radio address last night said such an offensive would be carried out even at the expense of the basic post-war ideal that the great victor nations should act in unison to fashion the future.

He made it plain that he held Russia responsible for the disappointing outcome of the Foreign Ministers Conference which recessed in Paris last Thursday until June 15.

His formal report on that conclave listed six outstanding issues with Moscow on which he indicated the United States would not compromise.

From the aggressive but confident tone of his speech, however, it was apparent—and officials confirmed this—that Mr. Byrnes is counting on Moscow conferences between Foreign Minister Molotov and Premier Stalin during the recess to reverse or modify the Russian position on these questions.

On the one looming biggest in his estimate—the making of peace treaties so that the countries of Europe can begin to "live and breathe" again, Mr. Byrnes declared he was confident that there would be a peace conference of the European nations and other interested powers this summer.

Recalling that at Paris Mr. Molotov blocked such a proposal, Mr. Byrnes said this power to stop "all efforts toward peace" must not be left to any one nation and added:

"If a peace conference is not called this summer, the United States will feel obliged to request the general assembly of the United Nations under article 14 of the charter to make recommendations with respect to the peace settlements."

The six top problems which Mr. Byrnes listed as involving Russia are these:

1. The holding of a peace conference. He said that when the Big Four reconvene June 15 the United States will insist on a peace conference for either July 1 or 15.

LOG-TOWING FLEET MAY BE FORCED INTO IDLENESS

Result of Seven-Day Strike of 37,000 Loggers Which Continues to Spread

Vancouver, May 21 — (CP)—A large part of British Columbia's log-towing fleet may be forced into idleness as a result of the seven-day-old strike of 37,000 loggers which continues to spread, but moves to settle the strike were expected in union and company circles today.

The strike, called by the International Woodworkers of America (CCL-CIO) over demands for 25-cent hourly wage increases, a 40-hour week and union security clauses, has affected 147 small operators on the mainland and Vancouver Island.

One company's entire towing fleet is tied up and others will be affected when the last logs from strike-bound logging camps have reached Vancouver. However, there have been no layoffs and towing operators said they were hopeful of finding other work during the next week.

In Victoria, Labor Minister Pearson said "I have been hopeful that we might have something" in the province's labor department, while from Ottawa came indications the Federal government might already be arranging moves to settle the dispute.

Keeping in Close Touch

Federal Deputy Labor Minister Arthur MacNamara said in a long-distance telephone interview with the Vancouver News Herald last night that the department was keeping in close touch with the situation and "we are anxious to get them back to work at the earliest possible moment."

"I am not saying that no steps have been taken," Mr. MacNamara said in a reply to a question.

Meanwhile, union officials here reported 47 companies have signed the union's proposed 1946 agreement incorporating the disputed demands.

The union stand was expressed at a meeting yesterday where was stated that "under no circumstances will we return to work until all matters in dispute . . . are satisfactorily negotiated and a settlement arrived at between company and union."

In the matter of union security "we again state that we are willing to submit this question to arbitration and abide by the award. To this end we are willing and ready to co-operate with the government or management."

R. V. Stuart, representing the operators, said the employers are anxious to do anything they can to get the industry back into production without delay.

16-Year-Old Girl Lifeguard

AMNESIA VICTIM FOUND ON BANK OF OTONABEE R.

Calls Herself Betty, Doctors Say She Is Suffering From Hysterical Amnesia

Peterborough, May 21 —(CP) —Police today sought to unravel the mystery surrounding the identity of an 18-year-old girl amnesia victim found this morning lying unconscious on the banks of the Otonabee river through the vigilance of Constable Clare McGillen.

The girl is known only as Betty. She was found after police received a phone call at 12.08 a.m. saying that a young girl was seen pacing up and down on the Inverlea bridge. When police arrived the bridge was deserted. They were just about to abandon their search of the river banks when Constable McGillen's flashlight picked her out, lying with her feet in the water by the bridge casement.

Revived in the police cruiser, she said "My name is Betty" and "I live near the river."

Gentle questioning failed to reveal any further clues as to her identity. She intermittently referred to "Reid and Harry" and in reply to questions said "I am trying to think back and tell you."

She whispered, "my head is swimming in circles."

Dr. H. G. Carleton diagnosed her trouble as hysterical amnesia and she now is receiving treatment in hospital. Dr. Carleton said she will recall her name in a few days.

Police officers questioned residents of the bridge area without success.

She is fair, five feet four inches in height, wore a black dress with a sky-blue and frill around her neck, a brown coat, sandal shoes and a pearl necklace and earrings. Her age was placed at 18 although police said she may be as old as 23.

15-YEAR TERMS IMPOSED

Cortland, N.Y., May 21—(AP) —Two Canadians, who had pleaded guilty to grand larceny and burglary charges, were sentenced yesterday by Judge Morse E. Ames as fourth offenders, and were given the maximum penalty of 15 years to life in prison.

The men are Harold V. Bell, 30, of Timmins, and Frederich H. Stevens, 39, of Toronto.

District Attorney Philip M. Smith said he obtained confirmation from Canadian police records that both men had served time in Canadian prisons on felony charges, and that both were fourth offenders.

Ojibway Indians to Appeal Conviction Of Fellow Member on Trapping Law

Massey, Ont., May 21 (CP) — Ojibway Indians of the nearby Spanish River Reserve decided at a meeting yesterday to appeal a magistrate's conviction of one of their number—Fred Sinbert for being found in possession of beaver, mink and otter skins under the Ontario game laws.

The 28-year-old Sinbert was convicted at Sudbury, some 60 miles east of this Northern Ontario town, May 14 by Magistrate W. F. Woodliffe who imposed a fine of $1,020 or 500 days in jail. Sinbert, unable to pay his fine, is in jail at Sudbury.

The decision to appeal was reached by the 30-man council, representing the Reserve's 300 Indians, in a conference with Chief Arthur Jones and his three top advisers.

It was based on the plight of Chief rested a copy of one of the Robinson treaties—the one dealing with Indians living on the north shore of Lake Huron, one of the councillors was Joe Bennett, a great grandson of Chief Panaissy, one of the signatories of the treaty which was signed at Sault Ste. Marie in 1850. Another signatory, Chief Oningegun, was represented by a grandson, John Maiosegejig.

Speakers at the council meeting spoke of the plight of Sinbert's wife and the hard luck that has dogged them since their marriage in 1942. Their eldest son, Albert, now 2, was born with a hairlip and needed several operations. Mary herself was seriously ill last fall and only recently returned from hospital in Toronto. It was when she came home that Sinbert's 23-year-old wife, Mary, who is sick and has two children to care for at their backwoods shack on a little farm which cannot be worked unless her husband is freed and on the question of Indian rights under the Robinson treaties of 1850. The Indians claim the treaties give them the right to hunt and fish on their own reserves even in closed season.

"This affects Indians all over Canada," Chief Jones told the tribal representatives who sat on straight-backed chairs around the walls of the Indian council house, a one-storey structure several miles inside the boundaries of the reserve which has been an Indian settlement for hundrds of years.

On a table in front of the Sinbert trapped the 49 beaver, three otter and one mink which led to his conviction. He was on his way to sell them when he was arrested.

The councillors held that the Robinson treaty, which guaranteed their hunting and fishing rights in perpetuity, takes precedence over the Ontario game laws which make it illegal to be in possession of skins in closed season.

After the council meeting, Rev. Charles G. Kehler, an Anglican minister, who has lived among the Indians since 1941, said "it is time the government took action against the illicit fur dealers who encourage the Indians to trap for them."

The minister said the Indians

Seek SS Fugitives, Ammunition, Black Market Supplies

Hundreds of Boat Occupants Removed for Investigation

Vilshofen, Germany, May 21 — (AP)— Four thousand American troops, striking by surprise at dawn today, raided a Hungarian river fleet suspected of smuggling S. S. fugitives, ammunition and black market supplies along the Danube river in southeastern Germany.

Vilshofen is on the Danube 12 miles northwest of Passau, which is on the Austrian-German border.

Nearly 400 boats, including many former units of the Hungarian navy, were boarded and searched by heavily armed troops.

Hundreds of the boats' occupants were removed for investigation. The report said many machine-guns and other weapons, radio transmitters and receivers, quantities of United States army food, clothing and other contraband were found.

No armed resistance was encountered. The only shots fired were by American troopers at three German river patrol boats co-operating in the raid, which were improperly marked and slow in heeding commands to halt. One German patrolman was wounded.

Cover 45 Miles of River

The raids covered a 45-mile stretch of the Danube from the Austrian border to Deggendorf.

At least 30 of the vessels seized — including 12 gunboats — were formerly part of the Hungarian navy and fought alongside the Germans against the Russians, army officials said.

Aboard them were believed to be several hundred ex-enemy sailors and high ranking officers of the Hungarian navy who fled from the Black Sea up the Danube ahead of Soviet forces near the end of the war and found sanctuary in the American occupation zone. There they remained comparatively unmolested for a year.

Counter-intelligence agents declined to explain the long delay in moving against the Hungarian "naval displaced persons," but one officer suggested it had been necessary to keep the original crews aboard the ships to maintain them.

Reporters were invited to witness the elaborately secret operation, but several of its mysteries remained officially shrouded for hours after the raid began.

At mid-day there was no indication as to whether any hunted S. S. troopers actually had been discovered or whether the raiders had found Admiral Trunkwalter, whom United States agents described as the present commander of the remnants of Hungary's navy.

Trunkwalter was reported to have succeeded to the command after Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungarian Regent, failed in his attempt to surrender the Hungarian fleet to the Allies.

The 11th Regiment of Maj. Gen. Ernest N. Harmon's zonal constabulary led the operation under the direction of Brig.-Gen. Edwin L. Sibert, chief of the United States European headquarters intelligence branch. It was the first major task of the hand-picked, specially-trained constabulary, which will take over the chief security role for the American occupation army July 1.

Armed with machine-guns, tommyguns, rifles and pistols, the troops sealed off the 49 miles of the Danube. Then at 5 a.m. they rushed aboard the ships anchored near the river bank.

Apparently caught completely by surprise, more than 3,000 persons, including women and children of 12 nationalities, were tumbled from their beds and rounded up to be held for questioning by the commander-in-chief.

Thirty-four minutes after the start, all ships were under the raiders' control.

The only physical resistance reported was an attack on one American soldier by a Hungarian armed with a shovel. He was quickly subdued without gunplay.

The Danube river enters the Soviet occupied zone of Austria beyond the border of Passau. There was no indication as to whether the Red army was notified of the raids.

Alexandria again was out-of-bounds for British troops today and the Egyptian army continued to guard public buildings, the British Consulate and British service clubs. Police and firemen patrolled in trucks.

THEATREGOER TAKES SIGN TOO LITERALLY, LEAVES PERMIT IN BOX

There is apparently one resident of this city who believes in signs.

Outside the Belle Theatre where the picture "The Lost Weekend" is showing, is a box with a sign "Leave Your Liquor Permits Here."

It of course, is an advertising stunt, but one chap took it too literally.

So he promptly extracted his liquor permit from his pocket and placed it in the box.

Now, Manager George Forhan of the theatre, is concerned lest some joker may go him one better and place a box with a sign, "Leave Your Liquor Here."

Concert Assoc. Reports Complete Ticket Sell Out

"A complete sellout". That in brief is the story of the 1946 - 47 membership of the Belleville Community Concert Association.

Upwards of one thousand membership tickets have been sold for the coming season, Chairman Russell Hachborn of the Association announced yesterday, and that about completes the quota for the year.

An outstanding array of brilliant artists, vocalists, instrumentalists and in one case a symphony orchestra will appear here next year under the aegis of the Concert Association.

Following one of the most successful seasons in the history of the association, which was climaxed by the brilliant voice of James Melton, operatic star, the demand for tickets for the coming season was the heaviest in years. A number of applicants had to be refused.

Firecracker Sales Presage Colorful And Noisy 24th

There will be plenty of youngsters in the city who will see their first pyrotechnic display on May 24, or thereabouts.

For the first time since 1939, when the manufacture of firecrackers and rockets was stopped due to war exigencies, the pinwheels, cartwheels, crackers, Roman candles, "cannons" and other varieties of fireworks are available to youngsters and oldsters as well.

And stores of the city, who sell the miniature explosives report a land-office business. They were going like the proverbial hotcakes this morning, and if sales volume can be judged a criterion, then the city is in for a "cracking" good time on Victoria Day and night.

The giant crackers, however, are missing. It appears that this delight of the small boy, especially when a fat man is in the offing, were manufactured in China, but that country has had a more or less disturbing war on its hands for some years, and Chinese manufacturers were busy on other and more important things than the production of giant firecrackers.

However, there will be plenty of noise and color with what pyrotechnic materials are available. And no small number of youngsters, as was mentioned before, will revel in their first sight of streaming rockets, cascading lights, and the hissing, crackling sounds of fireworks when the holiday rolls around.

Cases Presented in Police Court Steadily Increasing Magistrate T. Y. Wills Tells Rotary Club

Amount of Fines Vary Sometimes Going as High as $4,000 a Month

The number of cases presented to the Magistrate's court of Belleville has been steadily increasing during the past few years, Magistrate T. Y. Wills told the Rotary Club in an interesting address at the weekly luncheon on Monday.

"In 1943," Magistrate Wills said, "the number presented was 2,778. In 1944, this increased to 3,142 and last year it reached the figure of 3,978."

Not all persons involved in these cases appear before the court, the speaker pointed out, as many are summoned under the Highway Traffic Act, the Liquor Control Act and municipal by-laws. Most of these people appear at the city police court, plead guilty and pay their fines, which are all subject to the approval of the magistrate.

Some of these cases, however, have to be dealt with in court, and in these instances the parties have to appear.

Amount of Fines Vary

"The amount of fines and costs varies from month to month," Magistrate Wills said. "In a poor month possibly $2,000 is collected, while a heavy month will bring in approximately $4,000. These fines and costs," he added, "are divided between the province and the municipalities. The province gets 40 per cent direct, while the municipality gets the rest after deduction of clerical and other minor expenses."

"No," he smiled, in answer to a quip from one of the clubmen, "the magistrate is not entitled to any of these monies."

Previous to legislation passed some time ago, the magistrate was restricted to a territorial district, paid by the municipality and had no jurisdiction outside of the town or city to which he was appointed. Now, the magistrate has jurisdiction all over the province and this has proved a sound policy.

May Change Courts

Magistrates at the present time may change courts as may be convenient, in their own district, but in changing, outside of that district, must receive the permission of the Attorney General, the speaker said.

The court, he went on, deals with a variety of cases, from those presented under the Criminal Code to those dealing with the Highway Traffic Act, Liquor Control Act, not to mention parking and other municipal by-laws.

It deals with all cases under the penal laws of the Dominion, the province and the municipality, and has the absolute power to deal with those coming under the head of summary conviction.

The more serious offences, those of an indictable nature are listed under three groups. First, those over which the magistrate has absolute jurisdiction; second, those tried with the consent of the accused, in which the magistrate can impose sentence as laid down, and third, the indictments of murder, manslaughter, etc., in which he can hold a preliminary hearing only.

Describes Court Procedure

Magistrate Wills described the court procedure from the "information" which can be laid by any one, but in his opinion, should be done by police officers, to the sentence. He outlined the duties of the court clerk, including records of all cases, fines collected etc., which are sent to him monthly for approval and forwarded to the Attorney General's Department.

In his early remarks, the speaker pointed out that the Magistrate's Court here had always been called the "police court." This had been done for years, is done at the present, and he presumed it would continue to be called that in the future.

Refers to Cases

He referred especially to cases arising from breaches of the Children's Protection Act, where children are sent to the Children's Aid Society because of neglect, desertion, illegitimacy where the mother cannot support the child, improper home conditions, etc.

"It seems that these homes to which these children are sent by the Society are highly satisfactory. I am pleased to get such good reports about them," was his comment.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Gordon Robertson, with club appreciation expressed by Rotarian Tom Ruston. President "Mac" McLean was in the chair.

START HUNGER STRIKE

Los Angeles, May 20 —(AP)— County jail authorities reported last night that six conscientious objectors held for federal authorities had started a hunger strike because one of their number, Richard Stanhouse, a Negro, was segregated from the rest. Jail Inspector Charles A. Fitzgerald said races always had been segregated because "we find it prevents internal disorder among prisoners."

Two-Year Term Given Richards On Theft Charges

John Anson Richards, recently of this city, was sentenced to two years in the Kingston Penitentiary when he pleaded guilty in local city police court before Magistrate T. Y. Wills on six different theft charges.

Charges against Richards comprised the theft of articles and wearing apparel from the local stores. Evelyn Roderique, jointly charged with Richards on the six counts, also pleaded guilty and was given one year's suspended sentence.

Goods and articles admitted by Richards as having been stolen by him included a dress at the Artistic Store; a leather case at Stroud's; a suit at the C.D.S.; dress and coat at Lipson's; an electric fan at Christian's and a purse belonging to a saleslady from a local department store.

When apprehended by police on May 11, Richards was stated to have had the electric fan concealed on his person, while the balance of the goods, with the exception of the purse, was found in a Front Street apartment. Richard's lengthy police record was taken into consideration by Magistrate Wills in awarding sentence.

The accused was represented in court by E. E. Follwell, local barrister.

Case Enlarged

Charges of breaking and entering and of theft of an automobile against John Thompson, of Rossmore, and Roy Thompson, of Oshawa, were laid over for one week at the request of the former. Roy Thompson was ready for his trial but as cases were parallel, both were laid over until the later court. John Thompson was represented in court by Richard Arnott.

Speaker Gives Timely Talk On Housing Shortage

In the absence of the guest speaker, Charles Lundy gave a very timely talk on the housing situation in Belleville at the regular meeting of the Junior Board of Trade, Monday evening, in the Masonic Temple.

Mr. Lundy has been conducting a survey in this regard and quoted various figures which will be submitted to the Chamber of Commerce when they meet with "Housing Enterprises Ltd." and city council representatives this week.

An "open forum" was held after the talk during which certain recommendations were passed, to be submitted, regarding the housing situation in Belleville as it affects new industries considering Belleville as their location.

In the course of the evening, committee chairmen submitted reports on the work of their committees.

Ted Schwab was chairman for the meeting and the sing-song was under the direction of Ernie Colebourne and Gardner Duff.

Lloyd Hicks Heads Region 13 Power Boat Association

Lloyd Hicks, chairman of the Belleville Rotary Club Regatta Committee, was re-elected vice-chairman of Region 13, American Power Boat Association at the annual meeting held in the Prince George Hotel, Toronto, over the weekend. Other officers re-elected were: Chairman Robert B. Schelling, Fort Erie, and Robert (Bob) Finlayson, Toronto, who recently returned from active service.

Mrs. "Dody" Schelling who acted as secretary during Mr. Finlayson's absence, received the appreciation of the meeting for a job of work well done. Last year's board of directors were re-elected with the addition of Mr. J. Jacoby, Barrie; who filled the vacancy caused by the demise of the late Walter Winter, Toronto.

Present were, L. L. Hicks, Belleville; George Guthrie, manager Canadian National Exhibition; Allan Lamport, Alderman; and Blake Van Winkle, National Yacht Club, all of Toronto; Bill Braden, Hamilton; Percy Bedell, Waterloo; Dr. Armand Clairmont, and Aime Laurion, Valleyfield, Que.; J. Jacoby, and Homer Henderson, Chairman Regatta Committee, Barrie. Harvey Archer, Port Perry, and Earl Barnes, Gravenhurst. Picton was not represented.

Depends on Sponsor

Secretary Bob Finlayson announced to the meeting that he had received word in a communication from Guy Lombardo famous orchestra leader that his presence at the Canadian Vacation Circuit, a series of regattas scheduled for Belleville, Barrie, Picton and Valleyfield, Que., during late July and early August, depended on his sponsor's attitude towards vacations. If Mr. Lombardo can get a week's holiday at the time the Circuit Regattas are being held, he will be here in person. His 225 Class entry will race in any event. (no pun intended).

More than thirty-five of the cream of American and Canadian drivers will participate in the regattas, the meeting was told, and will be seen here when the Rotary Regatta is run off at Massassaga on Wednesday, August 7.

All Coming to City

All United States American Power Boat Association events formerly scheduled for the latter part of July and early August have been cancelled to allow United States drivers to compete in the Canadian regattas.

According to messages received from American drivers, a lot of them past and present holders of world's championships in speed boat racing, they have a large warm spot in their hearts for Canada and Canadians. A consensus revealed that the drivers from south of the border think highly of Canadian hospitality, the fair play encountered during the various race meets, the sincerity of Canadian officials and the many courtesies shown them both as drivers and as American visitors.

Price Received for Installing Artificial Plant in the Arena

A price has been received by the City Council for placing an artificial ice plant in the Hume Arena, that has been purchased by the city and the City Council on Monday night recommended "That providing a satisfactory reply is not received from the various ice plant firms contacted re-submitting a tender on the installation of a plant in the arena the Mayor notify the Canadian Ice Machine Company Ltd. to submit their contract at the price they have stated in previous communications with the council".

It was felt by the members of council that the Arena should have an artificial ice plant installed because of unfavorable weather conditions that prevail almost every year when playoff time in hockey rolls around and with this end in view a committee of council met a representative of the Canadian Ice Machine Company, who have installed ice plants in all the principal cities in Ontario and who have the contract for putting in a plant in the Peterboro Curling rink. After viewing the rink and taking measurements, a price for the ice plant was given the council on Thursday evening last. Some members felt that other firms should be allowed to submit a price on the same specifications and the order was held up until these prices arrived.

It was also submitted at the committee meeting of council the suggestion that provision should be made to install curling ice in the future and that a plant sufficient for all needs should be installed at the present time. As the representative of the company had not figured on this proposition he stated he would submit another price for Monday night's meeting and that price was received. It would not be fair to give the price for the equipment seeing that the council had asked for other tenders but this amount will be given when definite action is taken. The means of raising the money was left in abeyance but it is proposed to have the plant installed in time to open the rink between October 1st to 10th.

24-Pound Lake Trout Caught In Devil Lake

Kenneth Ayling, 17-year-old Izaak Walton of Kingston is not an ordinary fisherman. In fact, he disdains the smaller fry. He has been fishing since a tiny tot and his biggest catch, up to Sunday was a 14-pound grey trout.

But now, even that beauty is past history. For on Sunday he went to Devil Lake and came home with 24 pounds of grey trout — all in one fish.

With his father George Ayling and Lorne Rousseau of Buck Lake, he was using 250 feet of copper wire line and a homemade spoon when the big fish struck. It took over 15 minutes to get the miniature whale into the boat.

Overall length of the trout is 39 inches and its widest circumference is 20 inches.

The spoon used, was made by the youthful fisherman, and is a silver wobbler with three hooks. Sunday proved quite an eventful day, for scarcely had the big fish ceased its struggles than he hooked another, this time a ten-pound beauty.

Death Accidental Jury's Verdict

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury Monday night at Roblins Mills at the adjourned inquest looking into the death of eight-year-old Marilyn Wannamaker who one week ago suffered fatal injuries as she ran into the side of a passing truck at Salem schoolhouse in Ameliasburgh township.

The inquest was held before Coroner Dr. R. A. Thompson with Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley acting for the Crown.

Although returning a verdict of accidental death the jury strongly recommended that larger playgrounds be provided at Salem school, and also that suitable "school" signs be placed on the road both east and west of the school.

Dr. J. B. McKay, pathologist at Belleville General Hospital, told the jury that the Wannamaker girl had died as result of a fractured skull.

School children witnesses stated Marilyn had been watching a sawdust pile burn at the side of the road and when the school bell rang had turned and run into the side of the truck. Ross Snyder, driver of the truck stated he was going only "ten or twelve" miles per hour at the time of the accident and had thought all the children at the roadside had seen his truck.

Swift Employees Shown Film Of Life of Founder

The Belleville premiere of the motion picture based on the life of Gustavus Franklin Swift, meat packing industry pioneer, was presented at the YMCA on Friday evening before 150 employees of the local branch of the Swift Canadian Company, their families and their friends.

The film "Red Wagon" a feature length full-color historical picture, tells of the life of Swift from the time he bought his first heifer for $18 at Barnstable, Mass., when only sixteen to his death in Chicago in 1903. Its showing to employees celebrates the 60th anniversary of the incorporation of Swift and Company.

William C. Miller, Swift's manager in Belleville, said the idea of producing "Red Wagon" was an outgrowth of the Swift suggestion plan and was shown to employees as a feature of the annual family suggestion party here.

Filmed in Hollywood

Most of "Red Wagon" was filmed in Hollywood with a cast including 23 principal characters and number of bit parts, together with hundreds of Swift employees. It was produced for Swifts by top ranking Hollywood motion picture technicians. The picture stars John Whitney in the role of Gustavus Franklin Swift, and Barbara Wodell who has the part of Ann Higgins Swift, his wife.

The early scenes show Swift as a youth at his Cape Cod home in the middle 19th century in the period when he got his start in the meat business in New England. The story follows his progress which brought him to Chicago and describes development of the refrigerator car which made possible year-round long distance transportation of dressed meat.

Mr. Miller acted as chairman for the evening's program which consisted of a sing song and refreshments served by the Women's Auxiliary of the YMCA.

Dionne Quintuplets Approach Twelfth Birthday as Advanced As Other Children Same Age

Yvonne Still Heavyweight of Group and Marie the Midget

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Callander, Ont., May 21 (CP) —When they were weighed in a potato scale at birth, Marie was the midget of the Dionne quintuplets and Yvonne the heavyweight. Now, approaching their 12th birthday May 28, they still hold those positions in the scale parade of the five famed sisters.

A Canadian Press reporter who helped their father, Oliva, weigh the quints when six hours old, renewed acquaintances with the five little girls in their mansion-like home for the first time since the outbreak of war and found them as natural and far-advanced as other children their age.

Sister Superior Aimee Des Anges, who with Sister Marie Reine Des Creurs, teaches the quintuplets, considers that although the youngsters were backward compared with average children in their early schooling, they are now easily up to par.

Given Normal Schooling

"When they were on public exhibition so much they only had two hours schooling a day," said the Sister Superior, "but since they've been obtaining normal schooling and playing with their sisters and brothers they made up for lost time. Their understanding of literature and composition is more developed than most 12-year-olds."

All musical and willing pupils on their three pianos, unlike some children who merely sing the melody, the quints "are quick to respond to the feeling of the words."

Their father is set against any ideas that Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Yvonne and Marie may some day form a musical stage team but he thinks if they performed at a church charity function one of these days "a lot of people would be surprised at the sweetness of their voices."

Don't Speak English Well

Though they haven't tried oils as yet they are becoming expert at free hand drawing and water-colours. Their ideas of color schemes are advanced and this is demonstrated in playroom decorations which they have outlined themselves.

Although admittedly the quints do not speak English as fluently as they do French, their teachers think that will be corrected as soon as the children enter a larger school where they will receive more opportunity for conversational English.

The Nuns expect the quints to have completed their private schooling by 13 but it has not yet been decided where they will take their high-school training.

Mr. and Mrs. Dionne take the quints to North Bay, 13 miles away, from time to time to sec movies and the children have their own sound machine. Deanna Durbin is their favorite singer and westerns rate tops in films.

Lovers of sport the quints play softball with their mother and their teachers "but we tire so quickly while they never stop running."

Girls Individualists

Asked if they had decided what they'd like to be when they grew up, the quints admitted they hadn't given the matter much thought.

"But when they do you'll probably get five different answers," interjected Mr. Dionne. "These girls are individualists." The Nuns nodded agreement and the Sister Superior gave these thumbnail sketches as proof:

Yvonne—Great sense of humor; a tease just like her daddy; very influential and the group leader.

Annette—Always a dreamer; most artistic.

Emilie—Most mischievous and most big-hearted.

Cecile—A practical lady; less shy in public than her sisters; best organizer.

Marie—The "sweet little flower" and known to the others as "Little Marie." She doesn't try to be otherwise and feels herself younger.

HONOR MEMORY CYCLE INVENTOR

Courthill, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, May 21 — (CP)—More than 1,500 cyclists, cycle manufacturers and cycle agents gathered here yesterday to honor the memory of "Daft Pate," the village blacksmith who built the first bicycle operated with pedals.

His name was Kirkpatrick Macmillan and this was the first large-scale ceremony honoring him. Sir Harold Bowden, president of the National Committee on Cycling, unveiled a tablet in memory of the inventor, a ceremony postponed since 1939.

Winnipeg Woman Fatally Slashed With Lather's Axe

Winnipeg, May 21 — (CP) — White-haired 60-year-old Mrs. Harry Herman suffered fatal injuries when slashed with a lather's axe in a North Winnipeg rooming house Monday.

Police announced Abraham Goodman, 63-year-old baker, is in hospital suffering from poison, said to have been taken on the street near Mrs. Herman's home. He is under police guard.

Mrs. Herman was found in her room after the landlady heard her screams and called police. She was badly cut and slashed by the axe, found lying at her side.

Police said Goodman had visited Mrs. Herman early today on the way home from the bakery where he was employed on the night shift.

Shortly after 10 a.m., Goodman was found writhing on the street. Police administered first aid and he was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital where Mrs. Herman died, about an hour before he was admitted.

Mrs. Herman, believed to have come from Regina two months ago, was separated from her husband, now reported living in Vancouver. Goodman is a widower, his wife having died five years ago.

Police were told Goodman had been attentive to Mrs. Herman for some months, calling at her home each day when en route from work. He had told friends she had refused to marry him and that he had "a lot of trouble."

"Goodman called shortly before 7 o'clock this morning," Mrs. H. Crystal, the landlady, reported to police. "I heard Mrs. Herman say 'Close the door.' Shortly after I heard screams."

Goodman was not seen leaving the house, but he returned to the bakery where he was employed and workers reported he prayed, and then left the building. Police found him on the street a short time later.

TAKES PONY IN CAR

Barrie, May 20 —(CP)— The unusual sight of a Shetland pony and a Collie dog sharing the rear seat of an automobile attracted attention here yesterday. The six-year-old pony was being taken by a Toronto family to their summer home at Glen Rest Beach, 40 miles beyond Barrie.

Shoe Shine Raised To Fifteen Cents In Montreal

Montreal, May 21 — (CP) — "Shine, mister — for 15 cents?"

The Prices Board announced today the boost of boot-shine prices from the traditional dime to 15 cents, but a survey here shows that boot-blacks in general haven't taken too well to the change.

Previously the proprietor got the dime and if a nickel tip was forthcoming it went to the shiner. Now the proprietor gets 15 cents outright and customers appear loathe to part with another nickel.

Shoe-shine parlor owners are in a select class which includes waiters and taxicab drivers, for they pay no income tax, not being required to keep books.

Falls From Apt., Dies in Hospital

Frankfurt, May 21 — (AP)—A 38-year-old American woman died Sunday night from injuries which the United States Provost Marshal said were suffered when she fell from the second floor of a United States Army captain's apartment in the headquarters compound here.

Lt.-Col. Redmond J. Connolly of New York, the Provost Marshal, said the woman was found, nude and unconscious, lying on the backyard porch by a German charwoman.

She died in hospital 12 hours later. She was identified by Col. Connolly as Miss Dorothy Knapp of Staten Island, N.Y. a war department typist.

Col. Connolly said the fall "appears to have been purely accidental."

The name of the captain was withheld.

Plenty of Words For Us to Use

(From "Pedagogues and Pedaguese," by Daniel Gibson)

There are now, I am told, over 600,000 words in the English language and new ones are coined daily. Shakespeare employed less than a fortieth of that many words, Milton even fewer, and they expressed themselves fairly well.

There are those who contend, of course, that possession of a large vocabulary is not merely a social asset but an absolute necessity for district logical thought and communication. They point out that the cultural status of a people is determinable from the range of its languag. resources. A primitive folk is possessed of a scanty vocabulary. Accordingly we today with our 600,000 words should be a vastly cultured people.

One may note on the other hand that Samuel Johnson's famous dictionary in 1755 contained only some 50-odd thousands of words and that Noah Webster's original work 73 years later included only 70,000. Has the past century and a half landed us in a cultural millenium 12 times more advanced than that of Johnson's England? Apparently the logic of language-pro-culture breaks down somewhere.

GIVEN TWENTY YEARS

Chatham, May 21 — (CP)—Augustine Cadotte, 21, Wallaceburg, Monday was sentenced to 20 years following his plea of guilty to a charge of gross indecency. He was arrested following his attack on a 10-year-old boy.

Magistrate Craig pointed to Cadotte's record of sex offences as a juvenile and as an adult, and said "The young boys and girls of this community must be protected." He likened him to a 'dangerous animal running at large in society."

General Public:

This is to acquaint the public with the true facts of the NEW UNIVERSAL JEEP. This new MIGHTY JEEP developed by the WILLYS-OVERLAND MOTORS, INC., the makers of the famous wartime JEEP, has been totally redesigned to meet the requirements of the farmers and the industrialists as a light tractor and a portable power unit and must not be confused with the wartime JEEP. There have been incorporated more than 48 changes from the wartime JEEP making this new wonder machine adaptable to hundreds of uses the wartime JEEP couldn't do. Just a few of the changes are: A much bigger and heavier clutch, both front and rear differentials changed to suit the heavy draft of farm work, the steering has been changed to meet the requirements of field work, the transmission and the transfer case has been changed and strengthened to stand the abuse of constant heavy pulling, the motor has been changed to withstand long periods of hard work and to ensure long life, and many other improvements too numerous to mention, but which we will be only too glad to explain to anybody who is interested.

One of these Mighty Jeeps may be seen driving a 50-inch saw mill with ease at Wooler, Ont.

Two others units may be seen in operation on two farms, replacing tractors, at Picton, Ont.

Several of these units may be seen doing line work for a Utility Co., and others are doing many jobs throughout the county with ease and economy and to the complete satisfaction of their owners.

You are cordially invited to come in and look the new JEEPS over, or we will arrange a free demonstration for you.

YOURS SINCERELY,

Jack Bonn

We're glad to report that a substantial shipment of new JEEPS has arrived and are on display, and we expect continuous shipments during the next few weeks. Destructiveness

Citizens who spend money, time and labor to improve their properties by planting bulbs and flowers are doing a civic service of which the entire community should be proud. But quite often the intentions of the persons who add to the improvement of their property are frustrated just when the blooms appear, the very time when they can best add to the attractiveness of a garden or lawn and the appearance of a whole street. Some one who thoughtlessly or wantonly does not respect the private rights of a citizen intrudes and snatches the blooms.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Adams, Cedar Street, had this spring a lovely showing of tulips from bulbs sent from Holland by their son, when he was serving in that country. Now this choice arbor or garden of color and beauty has been ravished, one hundred blooms taken by some person or persons unknown.

Such destructiveness is to be greatly regretted. There should be some means of reaching or educating everyone to recognize the rights of others to flowers and other things of beauty. Who are guilty of such misdemeanors is often difficult to determine, whether children in their young thoughtlessness or others not so thoughtless but older than children, are to blame for spoliation of flower gardens. Citizens have every right to expect that flowers will be undisturbed but experience sadly enough at times teaches that someone does not regard such rights.

Surely something can be said in more ways than one that will help to preserve gardens and flowers from the hand that destroys growing beauty. A plant in a garden is in its natural place and its bloom looks best there.

In this local instance the wholesale snatching of a hundred blooms is at least shocking and has a tendency to disturb and discourage those who plant bulbs and plants and cultivate beauty.

In the British Zone

"We have built up a Control Commission worthy of our country which has successfully overcome many problems and is marching forward with confidence," said Field Marshal Montgomery when handing over control recently in Germany to Air Chief Marshal Sir Sholto Douglas.

In the year since Germany's surrender one of the problems dealt with has been repatriation of victims and foreign workers found in the clearing up of the concentration camps in Germany. 800 camps were established for displaced persons of whom over one and a half million were repatriated by September. U.N.R.R.A. gradually took over this responsibility. Some 400,000 displaced persons remaining in the zone are housed in camps with medical, educational and other amenities. They have higher rations than the Germans and levies for clothes for them have been made on the German population.

Akin to this problem is that of transfer of Germans displaced by various war causes. Operation "Swallow" has brought Germans from the area taken over by Poland. The total influx into the British zone has been estimated at over 2,000,000, compared with a prewar population of 20,000,000.

German war material destroyed includes half a million tons of explosives along with over a thousand planes. The latest phase is the destruction of all vital parts of U-boats still on the stocks at Hamburg.

Disbandment of German forces has proceeded by priorities and Operation "Barleycorn" released half a million for last year's harvest. There were twenty thousand miners provided under Operation "Coalscuttle." By early this year demobilization of all three services in the zone was almost complete except some two hundred thousand war prisoners retained for essential labor.

As the world knows, war criminals have been brought to trial according to Allied plan. The major trial at Nuernberg has been paralleled in the zone by trials of other criminals. In extensive denazification, eighty-nine thousand persons had been dismissed for Nazi associations by March and well over fifty thousand interned.

A start has been made with reconstructing the German administration on a democratic basis. The local permanent official has been subjected to the control of the local council, merely retaining executive authority. Pending autumn elections local government bodies are renominated. Administration has been built up to a provincial level.

There has been growth in the year of democratic political parties and trades unions. British policy is to insist on parties being developed from the bottom up on a democratic basis. Unions settle their own form of organization. Strikes are not barred though security of the occupation forces must be maintained. Local co-operatives have just been authorized.

Education has shown remarkable progress. Though there was a lack of suitable textbooks, by February over twelve thousand schools were open in the British zone and all children receive some schooling. There are twenty-three teacher-training institutions and over six thousand democratic youth groups. The British controlled news agency D.P.D., supplies some thirty thousand words daily. Well over one hundred publishers have been licensed and literature banned by the Nazis is appearing again.

On the economic side food is the greatest problem. The zone used to import fifty per cent of its requirements compared with 20 p.c. for Germany as a whole. Though vigorous measures have been taken to plough up grassland, Britain has had to supply over 800,000 tons of cereals, 50,000 tons of potatoes and 26,000 tons of vegetables, partly from U. K. stocks. The world situation in March led to a cut in the basic ration to just over 1,000 calories daily. This caused a drop in coal production which in February reached 43 per cent of prewar figures. A slight recovery was seen in April. Since December British authorities have directly controlled all collieries.

By March excellent results were shown in production of gas and electricity and nearly 90 per cent of inhabited urban houses had a water supply, a fine record in view of the great bomb damage. Gas is exported to the French zone and electricity to French and American zones.

Nearly all of the 7,500 miles of main-line railway have been repaired along with nearly 800 rail bridges, two of them over the Rhine River and canal traffic was restored and industries restarted.

Over 500 doctors were mobilized by the British Red Cross. Effects of rations are studied. D.D.T. application checks typhus among the displaced persons. By January one fifth of the necessary house repairs had been completed, in face of the fact that two million dwellings in the British zone has been destroyed during the war. Rationing and price control and recent drastic taxation check any inflation tendencies.

This is something of what British control has done in Germany. It is expected that in the next twelvemonths this will cost the British taxpayer eighty million pounds.

Newspaper Facts

Newspaper advertising is "by far the most direct and economical" road to people's minds says S. A. Boyer, assistant to the President of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railway.

A unique development recently patented is a method for making coffee tablets, says Rotary Magazine. The coffee beans are roasted and ground in the conventional manner. The grains are then pressed between pressure rollers which roll them into thin flakes, a predetermined amount falling loosely into a mold. The flakes are then compressed by high pressure into dense, hard tablets which do not oxidize to ruin the coffee flavor nor disintegrate until dropped into hot water. The tablets may be variously packed and are a great boon to hunters and the like.

In a day of talk of much need of building the following from Collier's Magazine is interesting news:

"One of the oldest houses in the world still in possession of the original owning family is the ancestral seat of the Oglanders in the village of Nunwell on the Isle of Wight, a few miles off the south coast of England. This house has been occupied successively by 27 generations of this family since it was built by Roger Oglander soon after he came over from Normandy with William the Conqueror in 1066."

PRIDE

"I love you very much!" she said,
And kissed my cheek and stroked my head
And toyed a little with my tie,
And oh so very proud was I!

"I love you lots!" I heard her say.
I'm over-stout and turning gray,
But not too fat and not too old
To swell with pride when that I'm told.

"I love you very much!" said she,
And promptly climbed upon my knee.
Now I'm the proudest man alive,
For I've a sweetheart almost five.

40 YEARS AGO

One of the most creditable and largely attended church parades in the history of the local red-coat regiment was that of yesterday when the 15th. Argyll Light Infantry went to St. Thomas' Church to listen to the annual sermon preached to them by their chaplain, the Rev. Rural Dean Beamish and at the same time to deposit in the sanctuary of Belleville's Premier Anglican Church, the old colors which had been borne for nearly 42 years. The regiment under the command of Lt. Col. J. Earl Halliwell, paraded on the market square and marched by way of Front and Bridge Streets to the church. The regiment made a gallant show going up Bridge Street, the band playing a dashing march. The men looked spic and span. The old colors were carried by Lieut. A. C. McFee and Lieut. Clifford Walker. Both bands and six well filled companies were on parade. The brass band had 27 in line. The processional hymn was "Onward Christian Soldiers" to Sullivan's setting and it was gloriously sung. In the refrains Prof. Spooner pressed the grand organ pedal and the volume of harmony was something to remember as the magnificent instrument, mellow and rich, seemed to shout and sing with joy. The service was a bright and exceedingly well appointed one. Lt. Col. Halliwell read the lesson and the rector of the church sang the service. At the close of the sermon the offertory was taken and as the wardens marched up the aisle to present the alms, Lieut. McFee and Lieut. Walker followed them bearing the old and tattered colors. After the alms had been presented, Lt. Col. Halliwell stepped forward to the chancel steps and addressed the rector of the church as follows: "Reverend Sir, as commander of the 15th. Argyll Light Infantry, I ask you to accept and become custodian of these old colors which 43 years ago were presented to the regiment by the ladies of Belleville." Rural Dean Beamish then accepted the colors on behalf of the wardens and vestry of the church and they were deposited on either side of the altar while the congregation sang the National Anthem. There was great inspiration in the scene and occasion.

Italian Industry Production Grows Very Rapidly

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Rome, May 21 — (CP) — (By Air Mail) — The return to normal in Italian industrial production is so rapid that leaders claim output will exceed pre-war figures by the end of 1946, while automotive production may double that of 1939.

Only governing factor, says Meuccio Ruini, president of the Council of State, who makes this forecast, is availability of raw materials. Though ravaged by war in so many ways, Italy's heavy industry installations in the north are largely intact.

However, jobs still are not available for any appreciable part of Italy's 2,000,000 unemployed.

More than one-third of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration's current $325,000,000 budget for Italy is devoted to industrial rehabilitation and a further allocation is to be made for the second half of 1946. Coal imports scheduled for industrial use between January and June this year total 2,395,000 tons.

Thus stimulated, Ruini says, production of agricultural implements and chemicals will soon be at normal again. Railway equipment (now leaving the shops at a rate of 417 new and repaired freight cars weekly), other machines and motors, and rubber goods including vehicle and bicycle tires will soon be leaving assembly lines at 125 per cent of pre-war figures.

By year's end automobiles will be produced at 200 per cent of their 1939 figure, he predicted. Exhibitions of agricultural, industrial and automotive equipment are thronged with buyers.

UNRRA also helps by disposing of certain products abroad, consistent with its policy of using surpluses in receiver countries to meet needs in other lands.

Admits Being Asked To Pay Over Ceiling Price for Meat

Toronto, May 21 (CP)—The score was 8-1 against the question whether Toronto retail butchers had even been asked by wholesale meat suppliers to pay over-ceiling prices for beef, when nine retailers appeared on the stand yesterday before J. D. McNish, sitting as a Royal Commissioner inquiring into the Toronto meat situation and alleged black markets.

But the score was 9-0 against the question whether any of fthe butchers actually had paid over-ceiling prices for wholesale meat.

The one butcher who admitted that he had been asked to pay over-ceiling prices was Edward Secor, and he said he had refused to have anything to do with a deal of this kind.

The Commissioner closely questioned one of the nine, Leslie Whale, partner with his brother in a retail butcher store, who denied that he had ever been asked to pay over-ceiling prices and also that he had ever bought at illegal rates. Whale said he recalled being visited by Constable Edward Smith of the R. C. M. P. but that he told the policeman he had no information to give.

The Commissioner thereupon called Constable Smith to the stand. He testified "Whale talked quite freely to me; he said that for any butcher to stay in business it was necessary to buy in the black market. He told us the methods used. The invoice for meat deliveries would be at ceiling price but once a week a salesman would collect extra on the meat."

Constable Smith said he arranged with Whale to return to the store two days later at which time the butcher would have the invoices and oher documents. When he returned to the store "Leslie said that what he had said on Monday was not true. He said his brother did all the buying and had told him the information he had given was incorrect."

The Commissioner then asked Whale if he had anything to say in view of the constable's evidence. The butcher replied: "No, sir."

BIKINI ATOLL

A large series of tests is based on the fact that men on a warship have not place to go to escape atomic rays. They cannot take trenches or dugouts. For those below decks there are unanswered questions as to how much the radiation will penetrate and how much radio-actively contaminated air the ventilators will suck in, what harm it will do, and how to protect or treat the victims.

Neither can naval men dodge spray and waves coming aboard, though the water may be as dangerous as machine-gun bullets because it is carrying many temporarily radio-active particles.

Certain kinds of clothing may protect not only against radioactive spray and radioactive dust particles, but against flash heat as well. On the other hand the wrong kind of clothing might be a death trap. Goats will have haircuts and shaves so that parts of their bodies resemble those of fighting men. Over these parts different kinds of clothing will be tested.

Much information that the animals furnish will be secret. This will cover precise distances at which occur the various types of injury from infra-red, ultraviolet and x-rays and from blast.

Another large medical field will deal with the risks to personnel due to the unusual strains placed on a ship's structure, piping and machinery. In all there will be four groups of medical activiyit—naval medical research, damage control safety, radiological safety and normal medical service.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed letters, not more than one page or 100 words long, pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper.

Readers addressing letters to Dr. Brady will please include the word "Canada" on their return envelopes, as these letters have to be forwarded to Dr. Brady. And it is requested that readers use standard size envelopes that will hold a small booklet

SACCHARIN IS SACCHARINE OR WOULD YOU CALL IT SWEET

About this time each year, when the sulfur and molasses is gone and the woodbine is growing like mad over the little gray house out yonder, I get a lot of special delivery letters from our feminine readers, all sizes of envelopes and colors of paper and most of them marked rush—which puts the postoffice staff in a dither—asking me how they can reduce eighteen pounds by vacation time in June.

Now, just why is it that the ladies can drag such a handicap around all winter without a thought about the plight they'll be in come vacation time, and then wait till spring is nearly over before they commence to get ready to start to reduce? I suppose most of them have been going on a diet next week all winter. Aren't they always? Next week?

Please don't rush me, ladies. I hate to hurry. In the course of the next six weeks I'll include several articles on reducing in this column. If you can't wait, I offer two alternatives: (1) if your complaint is just simple nutritional obesity—you know, from overeating—send me a stamped self addressed envelope and ask, in writing, mind you, for the pamphlet "How to Lose Weight; or (2) if you have glandular obesity or if you think faulty function of your ductless glands is a factor, send twenty-five cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope, and ask for the booklet "Rules for Reducing."

I recommend to every one who wants to reduce, of course painlessly, the use of saccharin instead of sugar for giving tea, coffee or other things a sweet taste. Saccharin is a chemical (benzosulfinide), has no food or caloric value, and is much used in canned goods, chewing gum, soda water flavors, pop, ginger ale, chewing, tobacco, etc., to give a sweet taste.

There is ample scientific evidence that any one may use up to five grains of saccharin a day with impunity, and many persons have used that much or more daily for twenty or thirty years without any ill effect.

A little tablet of 1-4 grain or 1-2 grain of saccharin or saccharin soluble is equivalent to a teaspoonful of sugar in sweetening effect.

Suppose you usually take two cups of coffee for breakfast, with a rounded teaspoonful of sugar per cup, there is 65 to 70 calories right there that you may as well brush aside by dropping a couple tablets of saccharin in your coffee instead.

Please do not ask me whether you can take more than 5 grains of saccharin a day. Maybe you can take considerably more, but 5 grains a day is all I can advise any one to take.

I do not advise the use of saccharin in place of sugar in canning fruit. If you can't get sugar now, can the fruit without it, and maybe there will be sugar when it comes time to eat the canned fruit.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Papers, Letters, Books and Disease

Is there any risk of getting disease, such as typhoid, cholera, or whatever disease may occur in the area, from a letter from a man in military service in China or India? (E.T.)

Answer—No. Papers, books, magazines, letters, paper money and the like do not carry disease—despite ancient legends to the contrary. Correspondence, printed matter, books, newspapers etc., are not subject to the quarantine or sanitary restrictions.

Eating Ice

Why does a person crave ice, especially the white part of the frosty part formed on the tray from the refrigerator? I am not pregnant and I wonder if my body is lacking in some mineral?

(K. J.)

Answer—I don't know. It is harmless.

Skyshine for Baby

I believe there is no benefit from walking the baby daily if the sun doesn't shine.

(Mrs. V. L. R.)

Answer — Diffuse daylight (skyline) contains some ultra-violet even if not so much as bright direct sunshine does. So give the baby his place in the sun every day, whether the light is bright or not.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why are the engagement and wedding rings worn on the third finger?

The custom of wearing engagement and wedding rings on the "third finger" of the left hand originated in an ancient belief that a very delicate nerve runs directly from that finger to the heart."

The third finger on both hands was known as the "medical finger." Greek and Roman physicians used it to stir drugs and medical mixtures because they believed no poisonous substance could come into contact with this finger without giving warning.

According to Aulus Gellius, this belief was mentioned in the Egyptian writings of Apianus, who wrote at Alexandria in the second century A.D. During the Middle Ages the connection was supposed to be a blood vessel instead of a nerve. Henry Swinburne, an English ecclesiastical lawyer who died in 1623, left a quaint observation on this subject of the wedding ring in his "Treatise of Spousals or Matrimonial Contracts."

"The finder on which this ring is to be worn," wrote Swinburne, "is the fourth finger of the left hand, next unto the little finger; because, by the received opinion of the learned and experienced in ripping up and anatomizing men's bodies, there is a vein of blood which passeth from that fourth finger unto the heart called vena amoris, love's vein."

In those days the English began with the thumb in counting the fingers. Reference to the "ring finger" as the "fourth finger" in the marriage service is a survival of that usage. Now we generally say the engagement and wedding ring are worn on the "third finger."

The right hand has generally been the symbol of strength and authority, while the left hand has been the symbol of weakness and subjection.

Among most Christian peoples the ring is worn on the left hand; but among members of the Greek Orthodox Church it is customary to wear it on the right hand.

In Elizabethan times it became a fad for Englishwomen to wear the wedding ring on the thumb.

Of course, the notion that the ring finger is connected with the heart in a peculiar way is without foundation.

The fourth digit on the human hand is the least mobile, the least sensitive and the least used of all the digits, and accordingly it is the most convenient and satisfactory finger on which to wear a ring.

Board Approves Adjustment Of Salaries for Secondary School Teachers at Meeting

Reports of Vocational School Inspectors Read to Board Members

Suffering a profound nervous collapse believed to have been precipitated by responsibilities in carrying out his professional activities, Mr. Norman Smith, machine shop instructor at the Belleville Vocational School will require a prolonged period of rest before resumption of his academic duties, members of the local Board of Education were told at their regular meeting last week.

Mr. Smith has been seriously ill since May 11th and recommendation for a long rest was made by his attending physician, Dr. R. M. Anderson. During Mr. Smith's absence from the school his position will be temporarily filled by Mr. Heard, it was decided by the board.

Long Meeting

The meeting was one of the longest held by members of the board, with committee meetings not being concluded until well after eleven o'clock, following which the regular board meeting was held. The Advisory Vocational Committee reported that Mr. Russell E. Smith, William Street, had resigned his membership and Mr. D. Martin, manager of the F. W. Woolworth store, elected as chairman of the committee in Mr. Smith's place.

Salary adjustments for all members of the secondary school staff who had not received increases at January 1st and whose work had not been reported unsatisfactory, came up for discussion by members with above adjustments being approved. All adjustments will be retroactive to January 1st, it was decided.

Approval Given

Formal approval of the proposed agricultural classes to be set up at the collegiate next term has been given by the deputy minister of education and arrangements have been made for a special committee of board members to meet Mr. Mislap of Ridgetown who is an applicant for position of director of Agriculture Department. A student from the College of Education, Mr. Mislap is temporarily at the Ridgetown Vocational Agricultural School.

Miss Isobel McClure, B.A., at present with the Perth Collegiate Institute, has been selected to fill a vacancy in the commercial department and board members are awaiting notification of acceptance. The board secretary was instructed to secure definite information from Dr. J. W. Howard and Mr. H. Thomas regarding their intention of returning to the staff of the collegiate.

The matter of accident insurance for pupils attending school was discussed, it being decided to take steps to secure information on the plan used in a few other cities where parents contributed a small sum annually for this protection.

Clubs Thanked

The board instructed that letters of appreciation be directed to the University Women's Club for an arts display, and to the Women's Canadian Club for an arts and craft display which had been secured for the extension of education in the city, and for making these displays accessible to the pupils in the schools.

The report of Principal George S. Currie to the board showed that present enrolment at the Collegiate is 520 pupils, composed of 227 boys and 293 girls. Attendance varied from 85 per cent to 99 per cent with an average of approximately 94 per cent.

Vocational school enrolment consists of 118 girls and 117 boys, total 235.

Reports Received

Reports of the vocational school inspectors who visited the collegiate on May 9 and 10, were read before board members, together with recommendations. Inspector Davies urged that something be done to facilitate the despatch of ordering for the school. In connection with this matter, Mr. W. H. Finkle presented a motion instructing the secretary make orders available to members of the staff for procurement of needed materials.

The inspector also recommended that if the vocational enrolment should increase so as to require more classrooms, the two rooms used for motor mechanics be made into classrooms and a proper motor mechanics room be built. It was also recommended by the inspector that Mr. Norman Smith be made director of shops for evening classes as well as for day school and that a secretary be appointed for night school in the principal's office.

Report on Teachers

Inspector Hilmer recommended that typewriters in the typing rooms be replaced every ten years and that additional business equipment be purchased when requested by Mr. Archibald. Brief verbal reports were given on the work of several of the vocational teachers.

Board members were in receipt of a letter from the Secondary School Teachers' Federation congratulating the Board of Education on the adoption of a definite and improved salary schedule for the teachers of the secondary school and advising that every co-operation might be expected from the Federation. Approval was given to a canvass among the staff of the secondary school on behalf of the Cancer Foundation.

City Council Ready to Issue $40,000 Debenture if Municipal Board Approves Expenditure

Parks Board Will Use Part of Mill Appropriation to Pay Debenture for Improvements at the Fair Grounds

If the Municipal Board will approve the expenditure of $40,000 for park improvements by the Parks Board, the City Council will issue the necessary debentures for the work, the money to be paid by the Parks Board out of the mill appropriation they receive by Provincial Statute it was decided at the regular meeting of the council held on Monday night. It was midnight before the members completed their deliberations and considerable business was transacted.

A lengthy discussion followed the introduction of the recommendation and at the conclusion the yeas and nays were asked with Mayor Follwell, Aldermen Armstrong, Wilbur, Trudeau, McDougall, Follwell, Tice, Chamberlain, Woodley supporting the motion and Aldermen Clarke, Allin and Thompson opposing. Ald. Thompson was of the opinion that it would force the tax rate up and that the work could be put off when costs might be cheaper. It is proposed to build a new horse barn, a new roadway thru the fair grounds to the grandstand, a new fence and a lighting system for the ball field. Ald. McDougall showed by figures that in 1947 the Parks Board would have $6,700 besides their debenture payment to improve and manage the other parks in the city, $5,600 in 1948, $4,500 in 1949, $5,600 in 1950 and $8,300 in 1951.

Should go to People Claim

Ald. Thompson: "When the debenture by-law was issued which set up the Parks Board $75,000 was voted and the people expected to be relieved of that burden when the debentures were completed but now you wish to saddle the ratepayers with another $40,000 and I think we should go to the people before the money is spent."

Ald. McDougall: "I think the park should be improved and it is a step in the right direction."

Ald. Allin: "We are elected by the people and the money could be spent in other parks besides the fair grounds."

Ald. Clarke: "I am not objecting to the expenditure but I want the people to have their say as to approval of the expenditure."

Mayor Follwell: "I think the name of the park is misleading and should be called 'Recreational Park', not the 'Fair Grounds'.

I am sure that all industries that are looking for locations want recreational facilities for their employees and I think the request of the Parks Board is quite in order.

Ald. Tice: "The Parks Board in its original form was elected by the people and each year the council appoints a number of men to serve on this Board without remuneration and I believe they have given the question considerable thought and their recommendaton should be respected and acted upon. The Parks Board is entitled to one mill of the tax rate for Park Purposes and they tell us they can maintain the remainder of the parks in the city on the money they have left after paying their debenture and all they are asking us is to guarantee the money. I think the improvements suggested are needed to make the park the recreational centre it is supposed to be and I am ready to support the recommendation."

Thinks Mill Not Enough

Ald. Follwell: "I do not think that one mill is enough to maintain the parks in this city. The Parks Board could spend twice as much on Victoria Park as is being spent. They could spend on Bayside Park. We have an unexcelled location with respect to our waterfront and I say it is a "dump". It is the intention of the Recreational Committee to ask the city to approve of a Community Centre and they have decided that the Fair Grounds is the best location for such a building and I cannot see why the Parks Board should not improve their part of the property. Belleville should have beautiful parks and you cannot get them without money.

Ald. Clarke: "I am putting a mortgage against my property if I vote to issue these debentures. I think fairs are losing value in the Province because there are outside classes that go from fair to fair and take all the prizes away."

Fair Not Deteriorating Claim

Ald. Chamberlain: "I have to disagree with Ald. Clarke. The Belleville Fair is not deteriorating and last year the Fair Board were at wits' end to accommodate all the horses that wanted to come and many were stabled in private barns. It is true the Fair Board only uses the barn for three days each year but I am sure that the improvements to the grounds are needed."

Ald Armstrong: "There are 85 acres of parks in the city and some years ago $75,000 was voted. The Parks Board have used that money wisely and have paid the debt and now they come back and ask for another $40,000 to further improve their property and they tell us that the whole can be financed out of the mill they can demand by statute. Every industry is looking for recreational facilities and if we have not good parks people will get in their cars and drive to where good parks are and the merchants of Belleville lose that revenue. I think it is good business and I am going to support the recommendation."

Ald. Woodley asked the members of the Parks Board who were present if the improvements could be financed out of the mill allowed and being assured that it could, the Alderman announced his intention of supporting the motion. Ald. Allin was still of the opinion that the ratepayers should decide but when the vote was taken the motion was carried ten to three.

STOP BLOCKING

2. Solution of the problem of Trieste. Byrnes said Britain, the United States, and France favor a settlement of this boundary-territory dispute along an ethnic or nationality line which would give Trieste, but not all the surrounding country, to Italy. Russia uncompromisingly backed Yugoslavia's claim to the entire area.

3. Future economic arrangements in the Balkans. Mr. Byrnes said the United States is insisting in economic clauses in the Hungarian, Romanian and Bulgarian treaties which would develop free commerce in Eastern and Central European nations.

Thinks Russia Will Go Along

4. Long-range suppression of Germany. Mr. Byrnes said that while his proposal for a 25-year, Big Four Alliance to control Germany received British and French support, he also had thought Russia would go along because Stalin had promised to do so at Moscow last December.

5. A German peace treaty. Mr. Byrnes proposed at Paris, but the Russians blocked, a plan for creating a council of special deputies who would begin at once the task of drawing up permanent peace arrangements with the beaten Reich.

6. The evacuation and restoration of Austria. Here again Mr. Byrnes specified that the Russians had blocked a major American objective simply by declining to discuss the problem or saying when it would be discussed.

On the overall picture Byrnes declared that "our problems are serious, but I am not discouraged. Our offensive to secure peace has only begun."

Parallel Parking on Both Sides Front St. Adopted by Council; Take Out Island, Boulevard

Progress Made on Riverside Drive Project in Lengthy Session of City Council

A notice of motion was introduced by Ald. Allin at Monday night's committee meeting "That the by-law pertaining to installation of parking meters in the City of Belleville be tabled in council at the next regular meeting." As no discussion is allowed on a Notice of Motion it was read and handed to the clerk. The question has been before the council before this year and a motion to purchase the meters was passed but after a delegation of the merchants awaited on the council it was decided to forego the purchase for the time being with the understanding parking facilities would be made available.

Previous to the introduction of the notice, Ald. Hyde as Chairman of Public Works recommended that parallel parking on both sides of Front Street, on East Bridge Street from Front to Church Street and on Victoria Avenue from Front Street to Pinnacle Street be instituted and that the Parking By-law be so amended. Ald. Hyde stated he believed this would assist traffic moving up and down Front St. to a considerable degree. Ald. Allin asked how many cars less would be able to park on Front Street and the Mayor said "possibly ten along the full length of the street." Ald. Woodley stated this was the recommendation of the Police Chief and also it was requested that a stencilled sign: "One-hour parking" be put in between the lines. The by-law will be amended and put in force before the lines are painted.

Recommended Removal

It was also recommended that the island on Front Street opposite the Upper Bridge and the boulevard on East Dundas Street along with the sign near the hospital be removed and the road resurfaced to make it wider so that traffic could move more freely. All were agreed to the motion. A returned soldier was given an extension on his covenant to build a home. Ald. Clarke reported for the committee appointed to report re-sewerage and water on Benjamin and Lewis Streets and all the recommendations made by the committee were carried. The report is as follows:

May 20th., 1946.

His Worship Mayor Follwell and members of the City Council.

Gentlemen: — Your committee appointed to report re-sewerage and water on Lewis and Benjamin Street beg to report as follows:-

(1) The engineer reports that a sanitary sewer is possible of construction on Lewis Street. We recommend that the present diagonal lines between lots be maintained and that the property owned by the city be sub-divided into lots with a frontage of approximately 53 ft. 8 inches. This will avoid the necessity of acquiring any land that we do not already own.

(2) The engineer also reports to us that it is easily possible to provide a sanitary sewer on Benjamin Street. We recommend that the property we own on that street West of Yeomans, be subdivided in the most advantageous way in the opinion of the engineer.

(3) We further recommend that a suitable notice be inserted in the Ontario Intelligencer, informing prospective buyers, that we have available building sites on these streets and that we are prepared to take the necessary steps to provide sewer facilities just as soon as sufficient lots are contracted for, to satisfy the requirement of the Municipal Board.

H. J. Clarke, H. D. Bateman,
Committee.

Arrange Appointment

came in for discussion and a motion "That the Regional Planning Committee have authority to arrange an appointment with the Municipal Board for approval of our intention to proceed with the proposed Riverside Drive the appointment to be made as early as possible so that options may be taken up before July 1st and that the by-law necessary for this work be prepared by the City Solicitor. A committee of Mayor Follwell, Aldermen McDougall, Clarke, Tice, the Comptroller and the City Engineer was appointed to consider the advisability of amending the building by-law to comply with specifications of the National Housing Act in order to permit the erection of prefabricated houses in the city and report findings to council.

Mayor Follwell and Ald. Armstrong were named on a committee to interview the Parks Board for approval of proposed seepage wall between Zwick's Island and mainland as approved by Dr. Berry, Provincial Engineer of Sanitation and if approval authorized by Parks Board, that corporation ask for tenders for proposed fill for submission to council. A member of the Restaurant Association interviewed the council with respect to the Sanitary by-law and asked the council to have the by-law enforced without fear or favor. "It is the wish of the Association that this be done", said the delegate. He also spoke on health regulations and was invited by the Mayor to appear before the Board of Health with his proposition,

Carried on Division

A recommendation asking the City Solicitor to prepare the by-law to ratify the agreement between the City and the town planner engaged was carried on division, eleven being for the recommendation and two against. Under the heading of inquiries Ald. Allin asked if the Utilities Commission had answered the council's request why water cannot be given those who have new houses ready and the clerk stated no reply had been received. Mayor Follwell stated he believed the cause was due to the shortage of materials and good pipe layers not being available. Ald. Woodley asked if a report on the gas plant had been received and the Mayor stated it would be ready in four weeks.

Hold Holiday Friday

Also taken up was the question as to when to hold the holiday on Friday or Monday and the members felt that the holiday should be held on the day set and therefore the holiday in Belleville will be celebrated on Friday. The Mayor, however, suggested that a motion be sent to Ottawa requesting that legislation be passed making the Monday nearest to the holiday be observed. This will be discussed at a future meeting of the council. Ald. Thompson, chairman of Light, read a clipping from a Toronto paper, which stated that the Toronto Hydro Commission was paying the capital cost for the new lighting that is being installed in Toronto. Mayor Follwell suggested that this should be done in Belleville and took the clipping to present it to the Utilities Commission at their next meeting. There were a number of by-laws passed.

Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Being Formed in City

Belleville is to be added to the long list of towns and cities to have a chapter of Beta Sigma Phi, international sorority. This organization, to be opened next week with the formal initiation ceremony, has nearly 1,700 chapters located throughout the United States and Canada, in Mexico, England, Alaska and Hawaii. Membership in the sorority numbers approximately 50,000. Started in 1931 in Abilene, Kansas, Beta Sigma was founded "for the purpose of giving young women in search of further cultural advantages and expanded social contacts an opportunity to unite in fellowship with other young women who also desire to develop their cultural natures by definite courses of study with the ultimate aim of making an Art of Living".

In the cultural program of Beta Sigma Phi the arts are studied in relation to the girls' everyday living. Each member of the chapter participates in the program either in its preparation or in the general discussion following its presentation. Besides the cultural side of the organization, there is a delightful social side, commencing with the beautiful formal initiation ceremony. The social activities are planned and carried out by the girls in the chapter.

Many outstanding international figures are honorary members of Beta Sigma Phi. Included in these are Mlle. Eve Curie, Osa Johnson, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Lady Fiset and Freda Draper. Any girl, once a member of the sorority, has the privilege of transferring to a chapter in another city, if she should move, and thus finds a new group of friends awaiting her. Mrs. Esther Lewis, of Kansas City, Kansas, is spending several weeks in the city helping to organize this new Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi.

Trained Nurse Shortage to Last At Least 2 Years

(By The Canadian Press.)

Although there is no scarcity of applicants for training courses, the shortage of trained nurses, which has already forced some Canadian hospitals to curtail facilities, is expected to last at least another two years. Wartime marriages, higher wages and better working conditions in alternative employment have been given by hospital authorities as causes of the shortage.

Wards have been closed at Westminster Hospital, London, and the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives. Queen Alexandria Sanatorium, London, may be forced to suspend surgical operations shortly if relief is not forthcoming.

"D.V.A. and military hospitals train no nurses," said C. J. Decker, superintendent of Toronto General Hospitals. "They rob civilian hospitals of nurses and contribute none to the profession. That's true also of many other groups taking nurses—Public Health Groups, Industries, Welfare Units and so on. Nurses have been drawn into many more fields than ever before."

Dr. M. J. McHugh, superintendent of the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives, said nurses in the armed services obtained better pay than could be paid by hospitals, which offer about $100 a month. He said that the department of Veterans' Affairs and the armed services can offer about $150 a month.

Short of Ward Aids

Warning that an epidemic at the present time could lead to a national calamity, Dr. Harvey Agnew, Toronto, secretary of the Canadian Hospital Association, suggested Monday that Ontario follow the scheme practised in Manitoba where a school for training ward aides has been set up.

A joint committee of the Canadian Hospital Association and the Canadian Nurses' Association is studying a scheme for training aides to assist trained nurses. At Chatham, Miss Priscilla Campbell, administrator of Chatham General Hospital announced a nine-month training course for nursing assistants would be started immediately throughout Ontario.

Graduation of approximately 130 trained nurses from Nova Scotia Training Schools within the next few weeks will ease the situation there, but there will still be a serious shortage throughout the province.

In Winnipeg, Dr. H. Coppinger, superintendent of the General Hospital, said that although more nurses were required there was no danger of wards being closed. Misericordia Hospital, Winnipeg, reports enough trained nurses to carry on normal operations.

The Muskoka Sanatorium near Gravenhurst, has reported a critical shortage, while in Hamilton hospitals are crowded to capacity. Christie St. hospital, Toronto, reports that in recent months resignations of nurses at the hospital have outnumbered new appointees.

HUGE SAVINGS DEPOSITS

Norwich, England (CP)— Sir Harold Mackintosh, chairman of the National Savings Committee, speaking here recently announced that nearly £11,000,000 ($49,500,000) had been raised in savings in the United Kingdom — nearly half in small savings.

Delegates Give Reports on V.O.N. Meeting in Ottawa

Highlights of 48th annual meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada were brought to the local committee at the regular monthly meeting in the Chamber of Commerce on Monday evening when delegates gave most interesting reports of the three days' conference in Ottawa. The president, Mr. N. E. Edwards, was in the chair, and welcomed new committee members, Rev. J. W. Houston and Mr. K. L. Reid. In addition to the members of the nursing staff present, Miss Margaret Cahoon doing field work with the Public Health Nursing course attended the meeting last evening.

Resume of Report Given.

The delegates' report of the annual meeting at which the local association was represented by the president, Mr. Edwards, Mrs. F. B. Foley, and Mrs. Ray Grant was presented by Mrs. Foley. Mrs. Foley gave a resume of the program of conference and entertainment, stressing the addresses which had formed such a valuable part of the sessions, and the resolutions which concluded the Round Table Conference. The address at the luncheon meeting was delivered by the Hon. Ray Atherton, United States ambassador to Canada, and the meeting was presided over by the newly-appointed national president, Senator N. M. Patterson. Glowing editorial comment was made by the Ottawa press on the address by Mr. Atherton in which he compared the aims of the United Nations Organization to that of the Victorian Order representatives, saying that the U.N.O. must develop thousands of trained world public servants. "We want and must have sincere devoted men and women who will make world interests their life work, will feel toward humanity as a whole, the loyalty and responsibility that each Victorian Order nurse feels toward every patient."

Should be Started.

Such a force cannot be created over night but it can be created and should be started immediately. The Ambassador said the world organization for peace should closely resemble the set up of the Victorian Order of Nurses. It should have the Christian, democratic ideal of service to mankind. "The spirit," he pointed out "which created and which has steadily inspired your movement is the only spirit which can help our world today."

An interested visitor at the luncheon was Her Excellency Viscountess Alexander who is the honorary president of the Victorian Order of Nurses.

Nursing Aspects

The report of Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Foley included an outline of the address by Miss Smellie the Chief Superintendent of the Order. Miss V. Adair who also attended the meeting gave a fine report of the nursing aspects of the year's activities. She referred to the films and their value in illustrating V.O.N. work Three new branches were opened last year bringing the total to 102. The part publicity plays in educating people to recognize the importance of V.O.N. in the community was the subject of an address presented by Miss Belcourt. Miss Smellie's report showed that over one hundred thousand cases had been cared for in Canada's last year by the nurses of the Order. She pointed out how nursing services and institutional nursing can co-ordinate and outlined a new venture of the Victorian Order, the establishing of a health service in Lincoln County to work with the County Health Unit there.

Appreciation Expressed

Appreciation of the members for the excellent reports was expressed by the president, Mr. Edwards. The business of the meeting included the appointment of Mrs. Foley as chairman of a committee to prepare a history of the local organization as requested by the national office, and a committee composed of Miss Adair, Mrs. A. C. Burton, Mrs. J. E. Madill and Mr. W. S. Stone in connection with the revised quarters for the V.O.N. at the Kiwanis Centre. A letter of thanks was read from Mrs. C. A. Cameron for the splendid support given by officers and members to the tag day program.

April Nursing Activities

The monthly report of the nursing service was given by Miss Adair showing fifty-eight new patients admitted in that period. Twenty-two attended the toxoid clinic whose value was brought clearly to mind by the death of two children by diphtheria, children who had lived in this area very recently and had not been immunized. Four pre-natal classes were held and three Chld Health Conferences. Miss Millman of the University of Toronto was a visitor in April.

Attend Divine Service

The parade was made more colorful by the attendance of the Trenton Lions Club Boys' Band and by Belleville Canton No. 8 who turned out in full force.

A large number of visitors were on hand from Belleville, Picton, Stirling, Campbellford, Cobourg and Springbrook.

At the close of the program, Mr. Ernest Trumble moved a vote of thanks to Miss Smith, teachers and pupils for the splendid evening of music. Fresh and vibrant dance dress

By VERA WINSTON

JUST THE FROCK for a charming young lady since it is fresh and vibrant, and yet very much of the mode. Discreet use is made of the bare midriff theme achieved by the gathered skirt which is set on to a broad waistband which buttons on to the short bodice leaving pert peek-a-boo triangles of bare skin. The fabric is cotton in pink plaided black. The midriff detail is discounted by the high neckline.

Mrs. G. C. Down, of 630 Princess Street, Kingston, says: "Super Suds' EXTRA SUDS are just a mercy to anybody with a big wash. I have four active children and believe me they certainly get their clothes dirty and grimy. However, thanks to Super Suds clothes are a cinch to wash. It takes so much less rubbing to get things clean with Super Suds, and that helps things wear longer. Saves loads of time, too."

Thank you, Mrs. Down, for your grand letter. You see, Ladies, Super Suds is Concentrated. Super Suds actually gives you far more washing-power . . . livelier, richer suds, without hard rubbing. And Super Suds costs no more than ordinary washday soap.

Cloth Hat and Bag Ensemble

By PRUNELLA WOOD

ONE'S HAT AND HANDBAG have always been prime, important accessories to the tailored suit and the soft suit, too; but putting the accent on them at the expense of overshadowing the suit is rather newer.

That's what Hollwood's Savona King, above, has done, however . . .and with eye catching effect. The very large hat and just as large handbag, are made of stitched fabric which has been frosted liberally in an Italian design achieved with pearl beads and hot pink sequins and bugle beads.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Open House in Honor of a Priest

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to have Open House in honor of a priest who will be leaving soon for mission work in the Far East.

1. I am especially interested in how the invitations should be worded. How would you suggest?

2. What do you think I should serve for refreshments? I had planned on serving punch and small cakes.

3. What about decorations for the party?

T. S.

1. My advice is that you write cordial little notes of invitation: perhaps worded somewhat like this:

Dear Marie,

In honor of Father Murray, and so that we can all have a little visit with him before he leaves for the Far East, I am having Open House on Wednesday, July tenth. I do hope that you and Joe will come in some time between four and six o'clock.

Sincerely,

2. You may correctly serve only punch and small cakes, or for either a late-afternoon party or an evening party (you didn't tell me the hour you have chosen) you may serve (and I think you should) coffee, and add, if you wish to, small sandwiches with simple fillings or one or two nibbly accessories, such as potato chips.

3. No decorations are necessary. . .but a simple flower centrepiece on your buffet table and a vase of flowers in the living-room would be nice.

Should He Dance with His Hostess First?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently my husband and I were guests of another couple at a night club. My husband danced with our hostess before he danced with me. Later the question arose as to the correctness of this procedure. I believe it was the thing for him to do, but one of my friends insists that the first and last dance should always be danced with one's escort. However, I am perfectly willing to be corrected, and would very much like your opinion.

J. O.

The rule that your friend quotes doesn't by any means necessarily apply to the circumstances for which she applies it. While it is true that one of the formalities of a dance is that a woman dances the first and last dances with her escort, it certainly wouldn't be necessary to abide by this formality in a night club, and particularly when there are only two couples in the group. Your point of view is a gracious one. . .that it was entirely proper for your husband to invite his hostess to dance the first dance with him.

Engagement Ring Should Be Given in Private

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My parents are going to give a party to announce my engagement, and I wish you would please answer a question as to when my fiance should give me my ring. Should it be before the announcement party, or at the party? Our families differ as to when it should be.

Clea

Your fiance should give you your engagement ring before the announcement party. . . .sometime when you and he are "alone together". This giving-of-the-ring should be a private affair. You wear the ring for the first time in public at the announcement party.

USED TO CATCH MICE

Albuquerque, N.M., May 20 — (AP)—Passersby gathered in a knot on a downtown corner to gape—from a respectful distance—at a three-foot bull snake sunning itself on the running board of a parked car. Willie Salas broke up the show before anyone learned how the reptile got there. He pocketed the snake and strolled away, remarking: "I've got mice in my cellar."

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

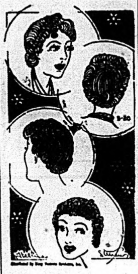
Short hair for summer

If you are thinking of shearing your wool, this is the time to do it. You can dash around the wide open spaces, the wind can be blowing great guns, yet your hair will sing and dance. And when you get into the house you rake your three-inch curly-cut with the comb and you are prettied to beat the band.

Swimming will be more fun. Bathing caps aren't always leak proof. If you get your abbreviated tresses wet, what of it? They'll dry in no time. Pity the girl with the draped hair-do, one of those wonderful built affairs that are difficult to arrange! She'll be in for a lot of fussing and fixing. Yea, yea, the short cut is the beauty ticket for the silly season. Cut 'em in the spring; grow 'em in the fall. A very good rule, seems to your pulchritude preacher.

No doubt about it, the short cut makes for comfort and good grooming with little bother. It is the ideal arrangement for the career girl who naps in bed until the last minute, laps up a cup of coffee, nibbles a piece of toast and beats it out of the house. What time has she for the draped coiffure which, unless carefully anchored to the last whisp, will undo itself some time during the day's business activities. Looks grand, we admit. But it looks better immediately after professional care than when one wrestles with it oneself.

A charming arrangement of the three-inch trim shows smooth hair at the back with a short part in the middle of the crown. Front, sides and back, the hair is rolled away, not in a firm puff, but with end curls showing. Should it happen that the busy girl has a little or no time for pilgrimages to beauty shops, she can turn all the ends—front, back and sides—upward on metal curlers. Or, as bangs are good again, she can sport a light forehead fringe. By using a setting lotion and manipulating the comb, she can put two or three wave lines in her bangs. This style is flattering, carries the youthful touch, and is as smart as mustard.



No doubt about it, the short cut makes for comfort

The cut must be exactly right for the short coiffure. Three inches is the usual length. The ends of the hair must be tapered so that when a comb is passed through the curls the ends blend into a lovely, fluffy hirsuite ruffle. Blunt ends kill the whole effect.

There is only one fly in the ointment, short hair requires a permanent every four months. During that period the hair may grow as much as two inches.

Roll at sides and back calls for hair of five-inch length; that is, if the rolls are to be full.

The small, compact hair-do makes the selection of the hat much easier than when the arrangement is elaborate.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Asked Her to Wait for Him, Then Married Someone Else

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a soldier who is a home town boy and I have been going with him for some time. He was overseas, and when he asked if I would wait for him, I promised I would.

He came home in December, and we were to get married in early January. But he went to visit his sister, and when he came back, he asked me if I could forget him. I told him no, and he said I had to because he had met another girl.

Now he is married and gone back to camp. He wrote me and asked if I would come where he is. I love him dearly and he knows I do. Shall I go on loving him or shall I forget him? I have tried to forget him, but it seems impossible. His parents are not pleased with his wife, and I do not think he is, either.

A. M. J.

Well, whether he's pleased with her or not, he's married to her, isn't he? So why should you go where he is or have anything whatever to do with him? You would be very foolish to waste any thoughts on a man who takes love as lightly as he seems to do, even if he were unmarried, and when he threw you over for someone else, I should think that would be enough of him for you. If you really want to, you certainly can forget him, and now that he is another woman's husband, you ought to.

They Wrote to Each Other Every Day—Then He Stopped Writing

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a sophomore in high school and 15 years of age. My mother thinks I am too young to go to the movies with boys. Do you think so?

A few weeks ago I met a boy I liked very much. He asked if he could write to me when he went back to camp. He is in the army. I told him yes, and I received a letter from him every day.

Then he came to see me with a friend he stays with when he comes here. This friend does not like him going with me, and he always takes him away and gets him some other girl, whether he wants to or not. I like him very much, and write every day.

He did not answer my last five letters. He says I am his only girl, but I don't know whether to believe it or not. He will be coming soon again. Shall I go with him since he did not write, and shall I keep on writing to him?

R. A. J.

If you like this boy so much, and he asks you to go with him the next time he comes to town, I don't see any reason why you shouldn't go. After all, he wouldn't ask you unless he really wanted you, would he? And if he does want you, I shouldn't think he'd be so easily influenced by his friend.

As for writing to him every day, I don't think I'd do that. Daily letter-writing is a pretty hard thing to keep up when you aren't any more to each other than just friends. Since he has not written you for awhile, why not stop writing until you do hear from him or see him? After that, write him only in answer to letters of his.

No, I don't think 15 is too young to go to a movie with a boy provided he sees that you get home at a reasonable hour.

Better Find Some Other Way to Meet Servicemen, Girls

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are two homely girls who would like to write to someone in the service.

We love to write and receive letters.

Is there anything you can do about it?

Two Homely Girls

No, girls, there isn't a think I can do about it—or would if I could, for that matter.

You see, I don't believe in girls picking up men by letter any more than I do in picking them up any other way. I think there are much better ways for girls and boys to meet than that.

You live in a big city. Isn't there a Service Centre in town? If so, there is no harm in going to that headquarters and asking if there isn't some volunteer work you can do, such as helping out at servicemen's parties or with similar activities.

Do you belong to the Y.W.C.A. or any church clubs? Sometimes they give servicemen's parties at which the girls act as hostesses.

THEIR WAY TO Enjoyment

Our lakes this summer are going to attract thousands of friendly visitors from the States. We want them to enjoy themselves . . . it's in our own interest to see they get the very finest of everything we can give them.

WHAT CAN I DO? The answer is plenty! Here are some of the things anyone can do. These practical suggestions come from a well-known Ontario Hotelman:

1. Know the places of interest and beauty spots in your district and tell people all about them.
2. When you write your friends in the States tell them about the places they would really enjoy visiting.
3. Try to make any visitor glad he came to Canada.

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! The Province of Ontario profits to almost the same extent from tourist business as it does from the gold mining industry. It's up to each of us to see that it goes on growing.

This diagram shows how everyone benefits from the Ontario tourist income. Every dollar is shared this way . . . 1. Hotels; 2. Stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc.; 5. Amusements; 6. Garages.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them . . . we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday . . . so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend.

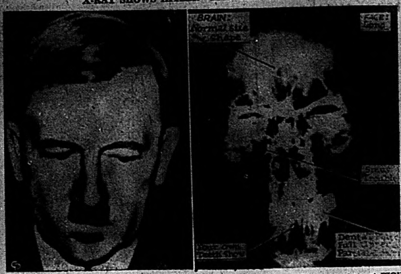
X-RAY SHOWS HITLER HAD NORMAL BRAIN



Documents and an X-ray brought back from Germany by Herman Merl, los Angeles X-ray technician, are said to reveal that the Fuehrer, who plunged the world into war, had a brain normal in shape, size and makeup. The ABOVE combo shows, LEFT, one of Hitler's last pictures before his reported suicide. The exray photo at RIGHT was taken from his doctor's files. Merl was assigned to help arrange reports of Hitler taken from his physician's file. Analysis of the X-ray and reports show that Hitler had a long face, normal size brain, symptons of sinus trouble, full upper dental plate and partial lower plate.

10 TONS OF BOMBS STILL UNEXPLODED

London, May 21 — (CP Cable) — Nearly 10 tons of high explosives in 21 unexploded German bombs still lie beneath the rubble of Greater London's bombrazed sites. Capt. G. A. Frake of the Royal Engineers' No. 2 Bomb Disposal Company — famed for detonating Stan, a 1,000-pounder at Croydon several months ago — said yesterday that seven of the bombs are being dealt with while two discovered recently had been abandoned because they were not a public danger.

FRUIT-A-TIVES LIVER TABLETS

Eire News Letter

By ALAN MONTGOMERY
Canadian Press Correspondent

Dublin, May 21 (CP)—Eire has joined in the international drive to increase food production and plans call for a record 700,000 acres to be planted with wheat this year. Production will not be for export but will enable Eire to reduce wheat imports, making the supplies available for use elsewhere.

Concurrently the flour extraction rate will be increased from 85 to 90 per cent, compared with the pre-war 70 per cent. The twin moves are aimed at making available 100,000 tons of additional wheat for domestic consumption.

Tourists: British tourists are pouring into Eire in increasing numbers, hungry after years of austerity rationing for the fresh eggs and beefsteaks which go with the country's scenic attractions. But some Irishmen can't help feeling Eire is getting too much of a good thing.

"Let us try to see what happens when 10,000 tourists arrive with £100,000 of British treasury notes in their pockets," said the Irish Times.

"First, they are converted into Irish currency notes or coin. Back to London go the British notes, to be replaced by an equal issue of our central bank notes to traders through our commercial banks. Thus another £100,000 is added to Eire's already inflated currency—£100,000 that would not have been required if those 10,000 tourists had spent their money at home or in some other country.

"By some such means...they go to swell the total of currency in circulation and thereby to maintain, or to raise, the level of already inflated prices."

However, The Times decided, tourists should not be discouraged, for "when deflationary forces begin to operate and prices begin to fall, tourist revenues may be assets of very real value."

Progress: Industry Minister Lemass had promised a grant from state funds of up to £500,000 toward the cost of a new graving dock for Dublin. Ultimate cost will be £750,000, with the port board contributing the balance.

The present graving dock can only accommodate vessels of up to 400 feet in length and is unsuitable for modern cargo boats and tankers. Plans for the new dock have not been completed, but it is proposed to provide accommodation for vessels up to 630 feet in length and 18,000 tons.

Teen-Ager Desires Career as Surgeon

Elizabethtown, Pa. (CP) — Worms and frogs held more interest for 17-year-old Marilyn Rohrer than the latest fashions of the bobby sox brigade. This high school senior, winner of a $2,400 college scholarship and top national recognition in the fifth annual Science Talent Search, hopes to become a brain surgeon.

For more than a year, Marilyn has been collecting and preserving brains of more than 50 kinds of animals, fish, birds and even a human being, the latter obtained from a hospital. She works in her own laboratory in the basement of her home.

Desert Stretch Now Golf Course

By EDDIE LEE

Phoenix, Ariz. (AP)— Blond Helen Dettwiler hardly looks like the type who would spend her time dreaming up devices to make a golfer's life miserable. But that is exactly what she has been doing for the last few months at Indio, Calif., where she's engaged in converting a stretch of desert into a nine-hole golf course.

Miss Dettwiler is a professional golfer with a pretty smile and that outdoor appearance. She will be the professional at the new course when it opens in the middle of May.

The course is owned jointly by Jacqueline Cochrane, wartime head of the WASPS and woman flyer of considerable note, and Floyd Odlum, New York financier. It will be open to the public.

Questioned about the business of building golf courses, Miss Dettwiler says it is "a lot of headaches."

"At first it was just a lot of desert, you know, bush and sand," she says. "We had to figure the acreage and then fit in the nine holes to the best advantage."

Weather Handicap

Water pipes had to be laid under the fairways and irrigation ditches built. The weather was not always co-operative. She had to replant one 20-acre stretch three times following sand storms.

She visited Phoenix to gather some information from the Phoenix Country Club on the upkeep of greens. The club is noted throughout the southwest for the condition of its greens.

"The landscaping (that's placing obstacles so you can't miss them and making them attractive looking) was the toughest part," she says.

Miss Dettwiler started playing golf 12 years ago at Washington, D.C., and took her first lessons from Willie Low, present Phoenix professional who at that time worked at a Washington course. In 1939 she won the Western Open championship for women at the Westmoreland course in St. Louis. She turned professional the same year.

She served in the WASPS during the war and has been working on the course at Indio since her discharge.

"It's been fun," she says. "I drove a bulldozer and a tractor and built some of the sand traps by hand."

COMMONS CLEARS

Working on Measure

Justice Minister St. Laurent told the House he hoped it would be possible to place upon the order paper within the next two or three days a bill for the redistribution of seats in the House. The Justice Department was working on the measure.

In the Senate, discussion centred around the contentious "Canada Day" bill and Senator Arthur Roebuck (L-Ontario) suggested a one to three-year hoist be given the measure, which would change the name of Canada's national holiday — Dominion Day—to Canada Day.

Senator Gustave Lacasse (L-Ontario) supported the bill, which already has been approved by the Commons.

In the Commons, considerable discussion developed during study of the explosives bill and John R. MacNicol (PC-Toronto Davenport) and John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) urged action to prevent the sale of rockets and powerful firecrackers to youngsters.

Amend Explosives Act

They drew attention to the case in Toronto two weeks ago in which an 18-year-old boy suffered fatal head injuries when struck in the head by a rocket fired on the street by other youths.

Resources Minister Glen said government law officers were satisfied the bill, which amends the explosives act, gave the government authority to pass regulations restricting the sale of rockets such as that which caused the Toronto fatality.

The minister said the bill provided "important" changes, such as authority to inspectors to seize and retain explosives which they believed to be unauthorized and authority to the minister to seize and destroy abandoned or deteriorated explosives which had become dangerous to the public safety.

Must Keep Record of Sales

The measure also will require vendors of explosives to keep a record of all sales.

During consideration of the narcotics bill, which amends the Opium and Narcotics Drugs Act, Health Minister Claxton reported a "very considerable" decrease in the number of addicts of marihuana, the narcotic weed, and said production of the drug also had declined. The bill will strengthen control over the sale of narcotic preparations.

The national parks bill will redefine the boundaries of some of Canada's national parks, adding small areas to some and withdrawing land from others. Parks affected will be Banff Park in Alberta, Kootenay Park in British Columbia, Riding Mountain Park in Manitoba and Point Pelee Park, Flowerpot Park and Mallorytown Land Park, all in Ontario.

Area of Point Pelee Park in Essex County would be raised to 3,869 acres through the addition of 255 acres.

Flowerpot Island in the Manitoulin district would be added to the Georgian Bay Islands Park, increasing the acreage to 3,438.

About four acres would be added to the Mallorytown Landing Park, one of the St. Lawrence Island parks, bring the Landing Park's acreage up to 10.

The air cadet bill, which will place that corps on a basis similar to that of the Army Cadet Corps, created considerable debate and John Blackmore (SC—Lethbridge) urged the corps be expanded because the world was on the verge of a Third Great War.

The C.N.R. bill, passed with little discussion, provided for the re-appointment of the Montreal accounting firm of George A. Touche and Company as auditors for the government-owned railway.

Oshawa Entry Favored For King's Plate

Governor-General to Attend 87th Running of Canadian Classic at Woodbine Park

By EDGAR SIMON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto (CP)—Attention of racing enthusiasts all over Canada will be focused on Toronto's Woodbine Park May 25 for the 87th renewal of the King's Plate, Canada's top-ranking horse race and the oldest continuously run turf event on the North American continent.

With Canada's new vice-regal couple, Viscount and Lady Alexander in attendance, a field of Canadian-bred three-year-olds will go to the post in quest of the purse of 50 guineas, gift of the King, and $10,000 added money.

The royal donation was originally made in 1859 by Queen Victoria in response to a petition from the Toronto Turf Club through Governor-General Sir Edmund Head for a Queen's Plate of 50 pounds "to be run for at Toronto or such other place in Upper Canada as Her Majesty might appoint."

Under political pressure, the race was staged at a number of Ontario tracks until Woodbine became its permanent site in 1883. James White's Don Juan was the first winner of the Plate at Carleton, new West Toronto, in 1860.

The Seagram Stable of Waterloo, Ont., has been the most consistent winner of the guineas, establishing an eight-year monopoly from 1891 to 1898, and carrying off top honors no less than 20 times. A Seagram entry, Kanshore, is a candidate for this year's running.

Most successful campaigner in recent years has been the late H. C. Hatch of Toronto who has won the Plate five times in the last 10 years. The Hatch estate has two entries in this year's race, Palermo and the highly-rated Bluesweep. The latter will probably be ridden by Bobby Watson who booted home two straight Hatch horses, Acara and Uttermost, in 1944 and 1945.

Track record over the 1 1-8 mile distance was set last year by Uttermost who covered the course in 1:53 4-5.

The Hatch stable established another mark in 1944 when its three-horse entry of Acara, Ompalo and Sayonara finished first, second and fourth respectively, leaving only the $1,000 third money to an outside competitor.

Originally limited to Ontario-breds, the race is now open to horses bred anywhere in Canada. Sioris, owned by Dr. F. G. Salisbury of Saskatoon, is entered this year and Quebec province is represented by Gallant VI, owned and bred by C. H. Conyers.

Favorite for the race is still Kingarvie, king of last year's two-year-olds, owned by R. S. McLaughlin of Oshawa, with Bluesweep, Harry Giddings' Karakas and the Medway Stable's Khabula currently receiving considerable attention from the railbirds.

Derby to Be Run On June 5th At Epsom Downs

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 21 — (CP Cable) — Austerity conditions, probably the best description of Britain's post-war life, creep into the sports pages so often it seems natural to apply them to the June 5 Derby over the world - famous Epsom Downs course, although a crowd of nearly 500,000 is expected.

This first peace-time Derby in seven years and the greatest of the country's flat-racing classics has all the earmarks of drawing one of the largest crowds in its colorful history of nearly 150 years.

The King and Queen will travel 35 miles from London by rail to attend and it is expected they will drive down the course in their Royal carriage before the race.

The war-blasted grandstand which suffered damage of nearly £40,000 ($180,000) has had an alteration job worth only £6,000 by works ministry order, thus cutting down its seating capacity tremendously, but the spectators likely will forget the patched-up stand.

The horses will suffer no war-induced discomfort — the 1½-mile course, untouched by hooves since 1939, has never looked better.

Happy Knight, Sir William Cooke's colt, was a 5-1 favorite at yesterday's Callover and is expected to remain No. 1 choice at the next Callover Friday.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS IN FIRST PLACE OF INT. LEAGUE

Defeat Jersey Giants to Move Ten Points Ahead of Montreal

Syracuse Chiefs are back in first place in the International League today after almost a week as runner-up.

Syracuse defeated Jersey City Giants, 4-2, yesterday and moved 10 percentage points ahead of Montreal Royals, who were idle along with Rochester Red Wings, Buffalo Bisons and Toronto Maple Leafs.

The victory was the Chiefs' third in a row and it stretched the Giants' losing streak to seven straight.

In the only other contest, Newark clipped the Baltimore Orioles, 5-3, behind four-hit elbowing by Walt Dubiel.

Newark scored three runs in the fifth and knocked Baltimore's Al Barillari out of the box with another run in the sixth. The Bears notched their final run at the expense of Johnny Podgajny in the seventh. Howie Moss, the circuit's most valuable player and home run king in 1944, accounted for all of the Oriole runs with a three-run sixth inning homer.

PRATT WILL NOT PLAY WITH LEAFS NEXT SEASON

Smythe Confirms Report But Does Not Know Where Pratt Will Play

Toronto, May 21 — (CP)—Connie Smythe, manager of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, last night confirmed that Walter (Babe) Pratt, Leaf defence star, will not be on the team next season — but said he didn't know with whom Pratt would be playing. Smythe thought it likely that big Walter would be either in the uniform of Boston Bruins or a new NHL entry from Philadelphia.

Pratt's departure helps to make the Leafs' defence problem for next season the biggest headache confronting the board of strategy. When the Leafs report for training next fall the rearguard prospects will include veterans Bob Goldham, Wally Stanowski, and such eligibles as Jim Thomson, Doug Baldwin, Gar Boesch. An invitation will be sent to either Gus Mortson or Vic Griggs of the Leafs' farm club at Pittsburgh.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Mickey Vernon, Washington's slugging first baseman, led both major leagues at bat with .411 average, including Sunday's games.

Vernon held a 22-point edge over the National League's Dixie Walker of Brooklyn who advanced from ninth to first place in one week. Walker had .389.

Runnerup to Vernon in the American was Dario Lorigiani of Chicago, now sidelined with injuries. "Lody" was hitting .386, just a shade better than Boston Ted Williams at .382.

Walker's National League margin was one slender point over St. Louis' Stan Musial at .388 who was followed by two Dodgers, Billy Herman .369 and Reese .364.

Jack Dempsey, former world heavyweight champion, says if he had the handling of Bruce Woodcock for six months the Britisher could beat every heavyweight up to Billy Conn and Joe Louis. Dempsey says Woodcock, who was knocked out by Tami Mauriello of the Bronx last Friday, is the best British heavyweight ever to fight in the United States.

Dispatches from Milan said Adolfo Consolini, who betters the world record for the discuss throw virtually every time he tosses the platter, did it again Sunday with a heave of 177 feet, three inches. His official record is 174 feet 10 3-4 inches.

Billy Fox, cuts and welts across his face, his eyes and lips still puffed from fistic battle, held a string of 39 consecutive kayo victories aloft today — the latest against Ossie (Bulldog) Harris last night — as his ticket for a light heavyweight title clash with champion Gus Lesnevich.

Defending champion Craig Wood and 10 other former United States titleholders have filed entries for the National Open Golf Tournament to be played June 13-15 at the Canterbury Club in Cleveland, O., first open championship test since 1941.

The entry list totalled 1,107 when the deadline was reached yesterday but officials ordered an extension today to take care of entries delayed by the brief rail tie-up last week-end.

Halifax, May 21 — (CP) — Granddaddy of Maritime bowlers, Wilbert Martel of Halifax just keeps knocking down the pins with monotonous regularity—and this season has been no exception for the trundler who has been on top of the heap for the last 40 years.

Martel added another notch to his long string of successes last week when he led his team to the Nova Scotia - Prince Edward Island championship at the New Glasgow tourney — the big event on the Maritime bowling calendar.

In Halifax league competition this season Martel rolled a brisk 421 in his final game to finish up as leader of the Fraternal League averages and runner-up in the City League. A charter member of the select "400 class," Wilbert is figured to have rolled more 400's himself than all other members of this group in the Maritimes combined. His single string of 213 has long stood as a world's record for candlepin bowling — the toughest game of them all.

At Long Last.

Better things are in store for junior hockeyists in Halifax next season if Boston's Bill Cowley decides to accept the invitation extended to the Bruins' star by the Civic Recreation Committee last week. Reports around the National Hockey League have the Ottawa-born playmaking wizard hanging up his skates before next season rolls around and if he does, Halifax sportsmen would like him to lend a hand in developing junior hockey talent down this way.

Known in Boston as the "man who made more wings than Boeing," Bill would be a big factor in shaping a strong Maritime contender for Dominion junior laurels. Cowley is well known in Halifax, having played for the old Wolverines back in the early thirties before he turned pro with St. Louis Flyers.

Sports Roundup

New York, May 21 (AP)—Jack Carberry, the Denver sports scribe who throws some harder punches at the boxing racket than Denver boxers apparently throw at each other, wants the N.B.A. to provide some protection against affairs such as one that took place recently in his home town.... Seems a "fighter" went down without taking a punch and later explained that he had suffered a "heart attack." He got off with six months' suspension....Jack proposes that the N.B.A. require every boxer to present a certified record of his bouts so that unknowns who are subject to heart attacks could be weeded out.

Going to the Dogs

When the light heavyweight champ Gus Lesnevich presented a trophy to the winner of the Greyhound Grand National Race in England the other night, he put his arms around the mutt and hugged it...."This is the first clinch I ever got into with a greyhound," Gus explained, "but he was my third winner tonight."

Not in the Ointment

Earl Douchette, the big fish and game man from Maine, tells of an angler who was trying to entice some trout from a Maine pond... After a long session of unsuccessful casting, he clipped off the fly, laid it on the side of the boat and tied on another...The discarded fly was knocked into the water and a big trout gobbled it up... The story is true, Earle maintains. He was the fisherman.

WILLIAM POWELL BEATS P. ZADUK IN FIVE ROUNDS

Newsboys' Show One of Best Seen in Toronto in Long Time

Toronto, May 21 (CP)— William Powell, Canadian welterweight champion from Port Arthur, took a five-round decision over Pete Zaduk of Guelph in the headline bout of the annual Newsboys' boxing show at Maple Leaf Gardens last night when a crowd of 4,129 contributed to a gross gate of $5,700.

The amateur boxing show was one of the best fight cards seen here in a long time. In the main bout Powell was on top of Zaduk all the way and Toronto fans who made Zaduk a 7-5 favorite were startled as the Port Arthur welter tied up the Guelph fighter at close quarters, punched his way out of dangerous spots with a solid body attack and never gave Zaduk a clean target.

Zaduk was way behind on points going into the fifth round, when he started throwing vigorous punches. He connected a couple of times but Powell was always the master.

In the semi-final Bruce Richardson of Toronto outpointed Chuck Scullion of Montreal in five rounds.

The Paul Malone trophy went to Powell, and the Toronto Telegram trophy was awarded Richardson.

Oshawa Fighters Win

Ronnie Lacelle of Ottawa, the Canadian amateur bantam champion, lost a split decision to Rudy Pasquale of Toronto in a five-round bout for the Toronto Daily Star trophy.

Other results:

Larry Johnson, Port Colborne, won five-round decision from Nick Poppa, Hamilton, for Globe and Mail trophy.

Tony Ducharme, Montreal, outpointed Ral Laviere, Port Colborne, in three rounds to win Willie Morrissey trophy. Ducharme is Canadian amateur flyweight champion.

Henry George, Port Colborne, knocked out Bill Gennick, Toronto in 1.59 of the second round to win the Daily Racing Form trophy.

Val Mancuso, Toronto, won a split decision over Billy Goulding, Oshawa, for the American News trophy.

Joey McPhee, Oshawa, earned three-round decision over Mike Zaduk of Guelph to win the Sinnott News trophy.

Al Hardsands, Oshawa, won a three-round decision over Sam Sicurello, Hamilton, to win City News trophy.

The William Frankel trophy for the gamest loser was awarded to Nick Poppa of Hamilton, beaten by Larry Johnson of Port Colborne.

MILLS TO VISIT U. S.

London, May 21—(AP)—Freddie Mills, British light heavyweight boxing champion, is going to the United States to "fight several warm-up matches" and take in the Joe Louis - Billy Conn bout June 19. His manager, Ted Broadribb, said "I have come to the conclusion that our British fighters are not as good as the American boxers and Mills needs a few warm-up matches with men who are making good in the United States."

Chicago's Neglected League Champs Win Seven of Last Ten Games to Threaten Leaders

Cavarretta and Pafko Two of the Reasons Why the Cubs Have Climbed

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Chicago's neglected league champs, ignored in the early rush to hop on the St. Louis bandwagon, have tiptoed into the race while the Cards and Dodgers were looking the other way and now are within two games of 1st place.

The Cubs have won seven of their last 10 outings, with Phil Cavarretta, the defending batting king, and Andy Pafko, an all-star centrefielder, two big reasons for the climb. Cavarretta has started to thump the ball at his customary pace and Pafko, benched for weak hitting earlier in the season, has hit a sizzling .415 over the last 10 games.

But last night, Claude Passeau was the most important factor in a 6-4 triumph in Boston. The 37-year-old belted a two-run homer that kayoed Mort Cooper in the second inning. He also added a double to the Bruins' 11-hit attack, but Bob Chipman had to come in to help in the ninth after three straight hits had loaded the bases.

Brooklyn closed in on the Cardinals, slicing their lead to a half-game, by downing Cincinnati, 4-3.

The four other clubs in the National, and Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit and St. Louis in the American were not scheduled.

Washington continued to sizzle through the west, trimming Chicago 10-2, for its eighth triumph in its last 10 games.

Cleveland won the day's most dramatic contest, 4-3 from New York, on Kent Keltner's ninth-inning home run off reliefer Bill Zuber. Nick Etten and Bill Dickey had tied the score with successive round trippers in the Yankee half of the frame. Etten also hit one earlier off Steve Gromek who lasted the nine heats to score his sixth straight over New York.

Two Main Bouts On Boxing Card At Hume Arena

There will be two main bouts on the boxing card at Hume Arena Wednesday night according to an announcement made by promoter George Polmanter.

The first one will bring together "Tony" Acerra, local heavyweight favorite and Jack Kelley of the Diamond A. C., Toronto. In his last local appearance "Tony" stopped Toronto's "Duke" Subaro after only a minute-and-a-half of the first round. Needless to say, Acerra won for himself a host of admirers and, no doubt, they will be on hand to root for him when he climbs into the ring against the Toronto battler Wednesday night. Incidentally, "Tony" is quite a vocalist as well as a fighter. While overseas, the big fellow copped first prize on one of England's best-known amateur shows and on another occasion, took second money. Acerra and Kelley will go 5 rounds.

The other main "go" will involve the "Pride of Trenton" Bill Westfall and Charlie Pyle from Montreal. Westfall has been showing real form in his last few appearances, winning his last bout via the "KO" route in only 38 seconds.

The semi-final should prove to be quite an attraction as well. Cecil "Jiber" Ellis, the Trenton lad with the long larruping right, will meet "Ronnie" Nash of Toronto, over the four round distance. This bout could, very easily, steal the show as both boys have loads of experience and plenty of ability. Anything can happen.

The preliminaries should also produce lots of action with 'Johnny' Pigeon of Belleville meeting Lorne Vieau of Trenton, Frank Morton of Napanee meeting 'Soup' Whitney of Trenton, Harry Derushia of Belleville mixing with "A" Rowand of Toronto and "Singing Arthur" Duby of Belleville meeting Ernie Majurie of Toronto.

The curtain-raiser will bring together a couple of youngsters, Bruce Polmanter of Belleville and "Bobby" Vieau of Trenton.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

WE CONCUR

Headlines:

"Four Toronto Boys Sentenced to Penitentiary; Two Get 20 years.

"Belleville Hockey Star to Try Out With Pro Squad."

The above headlines which actually appeared in the press, are not published with a view to distinguishing between Toronto and Belleville youths . Behind each one lies a story. One, filled with heartbreak, and remorse, pain and suffering; the other glowing with pride of achievement, clean living and a brilliant future.

• • •

Cec Perdue, sports editor of the Peterborough Examiner, writes a timely editorial in his column which ties in with the above. It is worth reading, and we pass it on to you. Here 'tis:

"While sports pages are filled with accounts of clean, healthy competition, with adventure and humor sprinkled about liberally—and unquestionably are the best pages in a paper —yet one does sometimes read other pages. Even though the front page may reek of wars and famine, the local page be full of accidents and police court items, and the funnies not so funny any more. Yet one can't live entirely in a world apart, inhabited only by athletes and sports lovers. There is a seamy side to life, too, as anyone notes who glances over the gazette of an evening."

• • •

"All of, which is our roundabout way of saying we noted recently in the paper where four youths up Toronto way got themselves into some trouble. Shot a storekeeper in an attempted hold-up and faced a murder trial. They got off with manslaughter, two drawing 20 years and the other pair 15 each. It happened in the hockey season but these boys weren't hockey players. Otherwise they would have been bumping each other around on the ice about that time of evening, instead of bumping off some citizen in the back of a store. Two of them were of junior hockey age and the other two should have been playing in the juvenile section."

• • •

"Maybe they didn't have a rink in their neighborhood. Maybe their folks and neighbors weren't particularly interested in boys' clubs. Maybe the boys themselves were really bad. We don't know. But we do know that you see mighty few athletes' names in the local police court news. Boys playing hockey or ball or soccer or lacrosse, or boxing, haven't much time or energy late in the evening to go out looking for trouble. Nor have they the inclination. They're having too much fun playing games."

• • •

"Yes, it costs plenty for playgrounds, rinks and organised sports. No question about that. But look what this one crime cost. A man's life, and the resulting loss to his family. Sorrow to the families of four youths ranging in age from 17 to 20. Loss to society of four young men —who could emerge from the pen 15 or 20 years hence as hardened criminals. Their cost for that period to the taxpayers, not to mention the expense of the trial, lawyers, etc. That's an outline of the cost of just one crime—without dwelling on the heart-breaks caused. Yes, organized sports often cost a lot, but it also costs a lot NOT to have them."

HERE'S THE DOPE

Just in case you are being misled by those persistent rumors that Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadian orchestra "The Sweetest Music This Side of Heaven" have been engaged to play dance engagements in this district around the first week in August, here's the dope practically straight from the "horse's mouth" so to speak.

• • •

At the meeting of Region 13, Eastern Canada Branch of the American Power Boat Association, held in the Prince George Hotel, Toronto, on Friday night last, Bob Finlayson, who recently returned from active service to his secretarial job with the region, and his editor's chair in the editorial offices of "Canadian Boating" read a communication from the famous orchestra leader to the effect that his presence at the various regattas here depends entirely on the attitude of his sponsors.

• • •

"I will be there," Guy wrote, "providing my sponsors agree to my taking a week's vacation at the same time the Canadian Vacation Circuit of speed-boat regattas is being staged in Eastern Canada. At present I cannot tell whether I can make it or not."

• • •

In any event Lombardo's 225 class speedster will be raced at the various regattas including the Rotary Regatta here on August 7. And dispelling another rumor was the statement that Lombardo's "My Sin" swank Gold Cup racer, will not be here. She was built exclusively for the Gold Cup races usually held on the Detroit river.

• • •

President Don Thomas, of the City Baseball League announced today that the opening game of the loop between Stewart Warner and the Kiwanis Juniors next Friday, will start at 4 p.m. at the Alemite field. There will be opening ceremonies and it is expected that His Worship Mayor Frank Follwell, Mr. Arthur Young, of Stewart Warner Alemite and Jack McVeigh, 1945 loop president will take part.

• • •

Sure, and it was a grand day for the Callaghans up in Peterborough a wholle back. For didn't Maurice, the ould man, the spalpeen, head a bowling team of the family aided by one outsider, and begorra, end up tied for second place in a tournament that attracted, bedad, the cream of the bowlers from this part of Ontario. And yisterday, the bhoys received handsome prizes from the Lift-lock City, for their skill wid the mapleos. Besides Maurice, were those broths of bhoys, Jackie, Maurice Jr., Tommy, and Donnie Taylor.

• • •

Those Point Anners must live right; pay their income taxes; refuse black market commodities; go to church regularly, and disdain profanity. For while city teams fidgeted and swore at the antics of the rain last night, Jupe Pluvius passed up the Ox Pointers and the result was a softball game between the home lads and SACOS. From all reports, the game which ended in a 4-all tie after nine innings was a fine pre-season sample and augurs well for the loop opener between these teams tomorrow night at the Fair Grounds. Pitchers of both teams were in fine fettle letting down the opposition with five hits. Fielding was good and the hitting was so-so. So it looks as if that 6 p.m. opener tomorrow eve will be a dilly. There's opening ceremonies, y'know and all that stuff.

• • •

Ole Jupe Pluvius again stepped into the sports picture last night and was mainly instrumental in the calling off of the exhibition baseball tilt between Stewart Warner and RCAF Trenton, and the softball joust scheduled for the Fair Grounds between the Goodman Juniors and the Army and Navy Flashes. The Fair Grounds diamond was a morass of mud and water, while the Alemite Field was in anything but playing condition.

RED ARMY USING GERMAN OFFICERS

Berlin, May 21 — (Reuters) — The Russians are incorporating many former German army officers into the Red Army, it was learned here Saturday night. They include many men who were prisoners of war in the United States and British zones. German officers have been allowed to go back to their homes in the Russian zone, it was said. On crossing the zonal frontiers, they are arrested, taken to "quarantine camps" and asked if they will join the Red Army.

Pt. Anne, Sacos Tie 4-4 In Exhibition Game

Point Anne and Stephens-Adamson's SACOS gave the Ox Point fans an exciting dress rehearsal of the Belleville Softball Association official opening Wednesday night, by battling to a nine-inning four-all tie last night on the Point Anne diamond.

The squads, who meet in the loop opener tomorrow night at the Fair Grounds, produced a mid-season calibre of the summer pastime with each squad using all available players during the game.

Don Boyle, ace hurler of last year's Ontario champion Columbian Squires, and Pat Maracle, Indian star, did the hurling for the Pointers with Al Adams, ex-Columbian Squire, the veteran Jim Hunter, and a newcomer, Keith Baldwin dividing the chucking chores for Sacos.

Both squads connected for five hits each. The Pointers led at the end of the third 2-1, the end of the 7th, 3-2, but Sacos came back strongly in the latter innings to score two to the Pointers one and tie up the pastime.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 392
By SAM GORDON,
The Kibitzer

Card reading does not require a new pair of specs. You know what is in plain sight. The reading is done with your brain. You mentally search out the holdings of the other players.

Your oppenents have reached a contract of four hearts without bidding any other suit. Your partner in the west leads spade five. When dummy spreads, you see these spades:

NORTH
♠J 9 4
WEST EAST
♠5 ♠K 10 6 3

Apply the rule of 11. Subtract the led five from 11. The answer of six tells how many spades higher than a five are in north and east and south. North dummy has two of them. Your own east hand has three.

This tells you that south has only one spade higher than a five. Which is it? Partner does not lead away from ace or king against a suit contract. You have king. South must have the ace.

Therefore, west started with Q 8 7 5. Of the cards smaller than a five, you see the four in dummy and the trey in your own hand. If partner has not the deuce, south must have it.

This tells you that south has the ace alone or the ace and deuce with no more spades. So, if dummy plays the four, you can safely play your trey. If dummy plays the nine, play your ten on that trick.

Recall the trump length declarer has shown by his bids. Add to your own and dummy trumps. Partner will have the balance. This tells you how many spades and hearts are held in the hidden hands.

Having no doubt led his longest, partner has not more than four in diamonds or clubs. Nor a sequence in either, or he would have led a top. Dummy and your own hand will tell you what south has in them.

These are the things that go to make up the brilliance in play. We do not acquire them in one reading. Nor learn to apply them in one hand. So, do the best you can with what you have.

We can't have everything. Some are better with pie-crust.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 21 — (AP) — It may sound like biting the hand that feeds her royally, but Myrna Loy says the Hollywood "star system" does an injustice to the public and the stars themselves.

"I have often seen roles in a film that I'd like to sink my teeth into," said the ever-charming redhead, who has been acting for the cameras 21 years. "But because the roles were small, it wouldn't be considered right for me to play them."

"Well-trained actors should be able to and want to play all types of roles," she said on the set of "The Best Years of our Lives."

But stars are prevented from this because:—

1. If a star played a small role, the public would think she was slipping.

2. Studio comptrollers wouldn't like paying so much for small roles.

3. Actors' agents would fear for their 10 per cent.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was helping ma carry things home from the market, and I waved at Nuckles Gibson going passed, saying ,High, Nuckles, I hear your father got locked up in the nut house.

Aw shut up, Nuckles said.

Being his favorite answer, and ma said, Now really, Benny, I mean really, that was a terrible thing to say to that boy.

It was true just a same, I said, and ma said, Then that makes it even worse, I mean I really am shocked and I dont wonder he answered you so rudely. He had every right to forget his manners under the circumstances, she said.

,Well aw G, ma, all the fellows say that to him, I said, and ma said, Two wrongs dont make a right, and neither do 2 duzzen for land sakes. How can you have the hart to taunt a poor boy with his poor father's helpless misfortune? Suppose I unavoidably fell and broke my leg, heaven forbid—how would you feel if the other boys twitted you about it? she said.

But G, ma, you didn't break your leg and I hope you dont, I said, and she said, Thank you very much I'm sure. Goodness, has that poor child's father really lost his mind? she said.

I dont think so, or else he couldn't make so much money, I said. Nuckles Gibson gets 60 cents a week to spend any way he feels, besides a doller to put in the bank no matter how he feels, I said, and ma said, Then why in the werld did you make such a gassly remark about his father?

Because I tell you it's true, ma, I said. His father did get locked up in the nut house. He makes nuts and bolts in a big factory, I mean the factory makes them and he's the president, and he got locked in by mistake because nobody knew he was still in his offfice, and he had to telefone to the night watchman to come and let him out, I said.

The result being ma still didn't think it was as funny as it really is.

Connecting Rod Bearings Give Drivers Trouble

Indianapolis, May 21 — (AP)—Duke Nalon of Beverly Hills, Cal., planned to try auxiliary rocket power on a racer at Indianapolis Motor Speedway today but the rest of the speed clan was more worried about its connecting rod bearings than any sudden innovations in the racing business.

Nalon's rocket-booster ride is purely experimental. The JATO rockets, of the type used during the war to help get heavily loaded planes into the air, make too much smoke for competitive use.

The connecting rod trouble, which cropped out in three speedsters last Sunday, is due to a shortage of a special babbiting metal that was scarce during the war. Connecting rods in many of the cars were babbitted with a substitute that hasn't proved successful and mechanics are tearing down motors to install new bearings.

The speedway event is scheduled for May 30.

CHAPTER 5

He felt he'd just as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb. But deeper down within his spirit it was no lust for blood that drove him on, only the sad realization that the shadow of Morley had lengthened between him and Audrey—a shadow that was darkening their love.

Audrey followed her woman's psychology. She took the defensive for Morley—as most women of generous heart defend men—worthy or not.

"Me thinketh the lady doth protest too much," gibed Gordon. "You spring to this fellow's defense much too quickly. When I came here you hadn't told me anything about him. Remember that after a divorce, an ex-husband dies completely."

"Does he?"

"Of course. You don't know that I am being reminded of Morley in a thousand subversive ways; Morley's chestnut horse and the hound who almost chewed me—the initialed bath and bedroom accoutrements; his books, his radio, the evanescent, lingering presence of the man, clings to everything like an unpleasant perfume. All right, I'm jealous. I admit it. I want to clean house, clean out anything that would aid in the remembrance of him."

Audrey's defense of Morley had just started. It rubbed Gordon the wrong way. Now she began by praising him his family and his early years at fashionable Bar Harbor and Sutton Place. Audrey went on about Morley at St. Paul's and Amherst and Harvard. He was a Phi Beta Kappa man. How Morley had hazed the frosh. How Cliff's gang had wrecked the Cap and Pudding Club's annual show — how Morley had been voted "Most likely to succeed after graduation."

"And did he succeed?" asked Gordon, grinding out a cigarette.

"Yes," she answered slowly. "Yes, I believe he did."

"Believe? How?" Gordon kept her warm with his grilling. He wanted the truth, and didn't care how he got it. He wanted to have from her lips exactly what she still thought of Morley. Gordon wanted to lay the ghost. He wanted her subconscious self to talk; a subconscious self that, Gordon suspected, still loved the man she had divorced. Gordon wanted to probe, to discover the truth and carve out of her heart the whole memory of Morley that still lurked in her like germs of a fever. He wanted all of her, not just what she was offering him.

And the fever began to show in her face. Gordon hoped fervently he could make Audrey show him a hundred faults of her former husband that he could destroy with contempt.

She told him how she had met Morley at a dance at Spring Lake, New Jersey. She went on reminiscently, "He was like a dark dream that night—in his evening clothes, and a cloak. Did you ever wear a cloak?"

"No. Why should I?" Gordon snapped. "But I know somebody who does. He has a pale face and heavy, red lips and he stands, smiling under a tree of poisonous apples."

"Clifford has a fascinating smile."

"Well, I haven't. Nor a Phi Beta Kappa pin, nor a car. I never owned a good pair of trousers until I earned enough money to buy a pair. Mine were always patched when I was a kid. And I never had summers off to swim at Spring Lake."

"How unfortunate," she sighed mockingly. "If you swim as well as Clifford did."

"Lord, don't be like that, Audrey! It's the first time I heard it in you."

"I guess you're right, But you started it. I'm sorry. I need something to do. Then I wouldn't be flying from Bermuda to Bar Hampton and Sulphur Springs. I've been so upset since I divorced Clifford—don't know whether I want to come or go. Please understand."

She paced the room nervously—stared out toward the Sound, grew quieter. He asked her to continue, and she did, as if she were very happy to talk. She talked, still looking out the French window, her voice low, remembering as if her spirit had escaped the four walls of the room and was side by side with Morley amid the palm fronds and music of that first night they met.

Gordon felt it—that she was moving farther away from him then than ever before. He felt that she wanted to talk and was enjoying her escape.

Morley hd fascinated her. She told Gordon how her own escort was ditched and she huddled with Morley, sat until dawn, in a leathern corner seat of a Red Bank tavern, sipping brandy.

"He was awfully clever and quick with his tongue," she reminesced, "sometimes it dripped honey—other times it cut like a knife. Every time I was with him I hung between exaltation and depression!"

"Do you remember any of the things he said to you that night?"

"Why, of course, everything."

"But you were awfully young," Gordon suggested.

"Of course I was," she flared. "But it wasn't a silly infatuation. I adored him!"

"I see. Well, let me tell you the rest of your romance. You had a basketful of meetings after that. And he drove his car with the top down, and a silk muffler flooping in the breeze. Then you bless the water with your presence at Bar Harbor or the Southampton Bathing Club, when all the time you wished he might take you to Coney Island. He'd lean over close and lift his left eyelid knowingly, and his voice would be as intimate as the rustle of silk sheets."

"Gordon, stop it. Stop it, I tell you. If there's any talking to be done about him, I'll do it."

"I know his type. He's not unique. Only you thought he was, didn't you? You've too much sentimentality, my dear!"

That stung. She was facing him stiffly, desperately, cheeks taut, lips in a thin line, almost trembling. They stared at each other a minute, silently, then Gordon added slowly, "Then he'd take you to dinner; probably Lesterson's on the Jericho Pike, maybe a ballet or a musical, with a drink later at some gilded sewer in New York where the doorman gave you a special greeting as you floated in wearing his tawny orchids."

"Don't stare at me so," she said in a high, thin voice. "Yes, you're right. Only there was more. Now that you've started it, you'll hear the end of it."

She told him the rest.

Morley had been no poor upstart like he was. He had been a [illegible] in the silk shirt of New York Cafe Society. He owned a gold mine somewhere in Colorado, and spent money like water. She recalled a night, how she had said she loved to rhumba; how the silly college boys circled the dark floor watching the two of them. Yes, Audrey had liked that.

Then she told Gordon about the night Morley asked her to marry him. He had leaned forward. She had felt something new coming; he seldom did that, usually sat straight without leaning his back against the back of his chair. With garlands of words he received for her their nights together. He spoke about the cocktails... the white dewy gardenias. The clip, clop, clop, of lazy horses through Central Park moonlight.

"It must be like this always. Will you marry me, my sweet? Could you manage to say: 'I love you' and mean it?"

She could and did. She knew she was madly in love with him. She answered him that love was in the heart and soul of her.

"You gave him the response any girl out of high school would have given. The whole story is mere routine. He knew you'd answer that way," Gordon shot back at her, fury burning each word.

More of the story unfolded. There had been the ride up a long and beautiful slow Hudson River, then east through parkways to a little country town with stone walls and white wooden houses.

"Greenwich?" asked Gordon.

"Yes, Greenwich," she smiled in reminiscence. "The traffic cop was our witness."

She recalled for Gordon how Cliff would speak to her at morning, tend her at lunch, on the beach, and at night tell her that she was his jewel.

She was standing now as she said this, skin flushed, hair sparkling.

Gordon said. "All that attention, and a gold mine too. It sounds fishy somewhere. How'd he get the mine? Win it at a bingo party?"

"He inherited it from his first wife," answered Audrey.

Gordon leaned forward, breathing a sibilant "Sooo" through his clenched teeth. "You never told me that you were his second catch!"

"There was no reason too. That I happened to have Morley didn't make any difference in his love for me," she declared defiantly.

"Then if he was so wonderful," Gordon shot at her, "why did you divorce him?"

Audrey turned sideways on the sofa—waited a moment, then added, in a lower voice, "There was a woman who came between us. He was a friend of hers before he met me—and she wouldn't let go of him."

Gordon's face grew hot; his collar was suddenly tight as the thought crept into his mind, like a snake—Audrey had married him only as a means of escape. She wanted someone to help her forget Clifford Morley.

Audrey continued: "This woman wasn't rich... or smart. Her name was Cora Leroy. She sang and danced in night-clubs. A 'hugger-mugger.' She clung to Clifford like a leech. I offered to buy her off. She laughed at me. Then she became dangerous!"

The words were coming slowly from Audrey's lips as she recounted the tale. Gordon listened eagerly, happy that she was unburdening herself, but sad that she did not blame Morley more.

Audrey poured herself a drink, then said, "Cora Leroy said she would shoot Clifford if I didn't give him a divorce."

Gordon watched her hand tremble. She gulped her drink, looked up at him, then out the French windows again toward the garden and Long Island Sound. "And she meant it! So I had to divorce Clifford to save his life. He is living in Denver now with her!"

She was close to the windows. The crosspieces cast a shadow on her—a shadow like a cross— and she was crucified, her voice was agonized; the wound in her heart was deep. It had been a long time since she had talked of Morley and Cora Leroy and her threat to kill him.

Her voice went on in a curiously flat tone. Cora had vented her spleen. She had visited her. Pleaded with her; then threatened. She had spouted a choice collection of verbal garbage; written poison pen letters.

"She wouldn't give up—and she didn't," said Audrey, "and I didn't want a murder on my conscience... Clifford's or hers."

"Well?" asked Gordon.

"You can see how I got bloody well sick of the sight and mention of her. I was jealous too and afraid for Cliff. I had a nervous breakdown in Reno."

"The female of the species," grunted Gordon.

"Female, my foot!" snapped Audrey. "I'd let a shameless baggage split and smash my life."

"And mine!" said Gordon.

"I didn't have to tell you all this. It wasn't any of your business, I hope you're satisfied."

Her voice was thin and high. Suddenly she thrust her face into her hands and began to sob. Gordon bent low, put his arms around her, facing her with his knees bent, balancing on his toes. She pushed him—sent him sprawling backward. She screamed at him, "Go away; keep your hands off me." Then she spun around and dashed out the panelled door, rushed upstairs. He heard a door slam behind her.

Beef Scarcity In Second Month

Toronto, May 21 — (CP)—Toronto's beef scarcity went into its second month with no relief in sight. Cattlemen said they could see no hope of improvement before mid-July when grass-fed cattle reach the market.

At the weekend, 1,600 cattle were received at the Ontario stockyards. Officials at the yards said that figure gave no indication that more cattle would reach the yards this week than last.

Meat experts say that when grass-fed cattle — cheaper to produce than winter-bred, farm-fed cattle — are ready for sale, farmers may be more willing to sell them for prices packers now offer for farm-fed cattle. At present, packers say they lose as much as $10 a head if they pay the prices the producers want.

"Thanks to you, Grandpa Kruschen . .

My Rheumatic Pains Have Practically Left Me"

Here is a saline treatment for the relief of rheumatic pains, which helped this Liverpool woman so much, that she wrote this letter of thanks:—

"For years I have suffered from rheumatic pains. My general health was gradually failing too, when I was given the tip to try Kruschen Salts. I got a small bottle and after taking it for about a week, the pain, which had often kept me awake at night, gradually subsided. Now—when I am on my second bottle—my health has improved and the rheumatic pain is negligible."—Mrs. H. H.—Liverpool

After obtaining relief from the first bottle of Kruschen, you can imagine how hopefully Mrs. H. H. started on the second. So follow her example if rheumatic pains are bothering you. Start taking the Kruschen saline treatment at once and continue until you give it a fair chance to help you. Like Mrs. H. H. you should soon feel improvement, because Kruschen is a combination of several mineral salts which aid the organs of elimination and in this way leads toward improvement in health and ease from rheumatic pains. Thousands have been benefited by taking Kruschen. Give it a trial in your own case.

Kruschen is 25c. and 75c. at all drug stores.

Obituary

MRS. ALBERT R. CARMAN
(Toronto)

Mrs. Gertrude Walker Carman, 79, widow of Albert R. Carman, former editor-in-chief of the Montreal Star, died Saturday in her apartment at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto. Mrs. Carman came to Toronto to reside a year ago after her husband's death. She was born at Belleville, Ont.

Her husband was a son of the late Rev. Dr. Carman, at one time connected with Albert College and for many years General Superintendent of the Methodist Church.

Cremation will take place in Toronto.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, May 21 —(CP)— The industrial group recorded an index gain of .38 on the stock exchange at noon and the other groups were narrowly lower. Volume was small at only 639,000 shares for the first three hours.

Beaulieu weakened to 1.40 at the opening but recovered to 1.50 for an overnight loss of 7 cents. The industrial share strength was based mainly on the higher prices for the liquor and paper issues.

OJIBWAY INDIANS

have a definite right to know their status under the law. He added there is no doubt that they have some hunting and fishing rights under the old treaties.

So far there has been no indication of the form the appeal will take. That probably will be determined by Sinbert's counsel, G. M. Miller of Sudbury, who said a week ago there were two possible courses. One is appeal for a re-trial before a district judge. The other is to have a stated case submitted to the Ontario Supreme Court for a ruling.

The question of the validity of the Robinson treaties was before the Supreme Court of Ontario in 1938 when the late Mr. Justice Green ruled that the treaty provision was inconsistent with Ontario law and hence invalid. His judgment over-ruled a decision of Magistrate J. H. McCurry of North Bay who had freed two Ojibway Indians on charges of violating game laws in the closed season.

Assembly

I was asked by one of the masters at the opening of Assembly last Wednesday if it was the Wedding March that came over our recording system. I hope this doubt has been cleared either positively or negatively.

Mr. Hill presided over the assembled students in the absence of Mr. Currie.

The devotional exercises were conducted this week by Mr. Davidson who read from Proverbs, chapter 24.

Announcements

Miss Billings reported that there had been a total of twenty (20) dollars donated by various forms to the "Blankets for Britain" fund this year.

Miss Bunting asks that any books brought in for sale this week be in good condition.

Mr. Hill may be contacted about more information regarding the weekly broadcasts concerning the Atom explorations and the atomic bomb. Using the Smith report, Dr. R. H. Wright conducts very interesting discussions on that topic.

Mr. Maybee reminded us that out of the 200 Concert Association memberships available in this city, 100 have already been taken up. The student memberships are available at 1.50 for three concerts. There are students about the school who have membership cards for sale.

A moving picture entitled the "Niagara Frontier" constituted the remaining part of our assembly period.

Coming Events

Wednesday afternoon at 4 p.m. or thereabouts, BCI's third game of the current softball series will be played at Albert College. This game, with the boys in yellow and black, promises to be one of the best of the season—and well worth the trek to the "College on the hill." Be there on Wednesday and see if we aren't correct.

A week previous to this game we inquired of Miss Bunting the answer to the $64 question, "When is the Elevator coming out?" To which we received the reply, "Sometime next week." Now whether Miss Bunting, who knows this column appears on Tuesdays, meant her "next week" to date from the time we asked her or from the time you read this, was and still is, a matter for conjecture. When it comes to any kind of conjecturing we are strictly M. D. (mentally deficient). So we contacted the business manager of the book to see if he could throw any light on the subject. The only definite statement he would make was, and we quote: "The Elevator staff will not be responsible for damages to any band instruments left in the Elevator room." From that we infer two things:

(1) The band had better move their instruments to a safer place, tout de suite.

(2) The Elevator is on its way and should be here very shortly.

Don't forget the BCIVS Spring Formal on May 23rd. While we are on this subject we would like to make a correction. Last week we said, or implied, that each invitation was good for two people. What we meant to say was that each person paying the charge of two dollars would receive two invitations, one for himself (or herself) and another for its better half. Incidentally if you haven't as yet put in your name for the "invites" see Scott Denton, president of the Students' Council and he'll see what can be done.

There are a number of softball games yet to be played in the Inter-Form league. However, until such time as Mr. Currie and Mr. Shiels arrive at a definite understanding with regard to the RCAC parades we think it advisable not to publish the date of any of the games. As you no doubt know, Cadet Inspection Day will be Friday, May 31. And that is only eleven days hence. So we won't be surprised if dress parades are called every day from now 'till the end of the month. If they are, it will mean short noon hours five days a week and the end of inter-form softball.

Coming out of the James Melton concert last week someone mentioned to me that Filet Mignon was an opera by Puccini. Personally I think that sounds a bit fishy. Don't you?

I have, alas, been told that iron was found because someone smelt it. Could it be that some of my jokes are found in similar fashion?

THE JUNIOR RED CROSS

The regular meeting of the Junior Red Cross was held on May 13, with the president presiding. At this meeting three more boxes were packed for Holland. This was the sixth and final box. We would like to thank all those who have brought in clothing for these boxes. We know they are appreciated, as Miss Dwyer read to us two letters from Dr. Vente, to whom the parcels were sent. He wrote that the food situation was getting better but clothes are urgently needed. Our thanks also go to Mrs. Casement for the contributions she has sent to us. The next meeting will be held on May 27 and we hope all the members will be present. Please bring any finished work, so we can get a box packed for Bancroft. The final meeting will be held at Miss Dwyer's home on June 3.

THE WOODS

Wouldn't you love to live in the wood
Just like the outlaws and Robin Hood?
It would be fun to cook o'er campfires
And sit and talk till you are tired.

I'd live to ride the winding trails
And listen to the huntsmen's tales;
I'd love to ride the winding
And then, at night, by the fires lay.

Oh! To be in the woods all day
Watching the animals hunt their prey —
Yes, t'would be nice to live in the wood
Just like the outlaws and Robin Hood.

—June Reeves, 9E.

Canadian Legion Will Discuss Rehabilitation

By DOUG HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, May 21 (CP) — The Canadian Legion is expected to thrash out its rehabilitation policy for the next two years on the floor of its 11th biennial convention today.

The first of four days behind them, delegates will hammer at housing, unionized industry, educational benefits and other issues today in possibly the most important session of the convention.

More than 1,000 delegates, including women veterans, are attending the first post-war national gathering of Canada's premier ex-servicemen's body which has sprouted to a membership of some 250,000 through an influx of new veterans.

The basis of their discussion today is the report of the rehabilitation committee which, like others, gathered several days ahead of the main body of delegates to cut a mass of resolutions down to a size the convention could handle.

Unification in Housing

Its recommendations include one that efforts of all government departments involved in housing be unified, another that a national housing program for low-income homes be launched, and a third that production, distribution and export of all building materials be controlled with a general priority for the low-priced builder.

Two other important recommendations are one calling for legislation giving veterrans seniority rights in unionized industry equivalent to that of war workers and a second recommending higher allowances for students.

College veterans attending are believed to want to go beyond the committee's recommendation for $20 increases to $80 a month for single men and $100 for married men.

Compulsory Training

Most spectacular of yesterday's developments was the resolution which demanded "a system of national compulsory military training for defence purposes based on the fact that members have carried a large scale of the burden in two world wars and do not wish a third."

Veterans of the First Great War stood aside and allowed the new veterans to express their opinions, that resulted in scrapping of an original committee resolution which simply "strongly recommended" compulsory training and did not use the "basis" clause.

They shouted down a contention that such a policy was "dictatorship" and gave equally short shift to another which urged that Canada wait to see what the United Nations asked of her in a military way, then act accordingly.

A RECORD PRICE

Was YOUR long distance call delayed?

MOST Long Distance calls go through all right. But from time to time there is a delay.

That is because there are so many more telephones now and so many more people are using Long Distance.

We're hard at work adding new switchboards and lines and training many more operators to get Long Distance service back to pre-war speeds and even faster.

In the meantime, when you find circuits extra busy you can help relieve the load by observing the proper sequence, and by being patient if there is a delay.

WHEN YOU PLACE a Long Distance Call . . .

FIRST, give the operator the name of the distant city . . .

THEN, the telephone number of your party . . .

THEN, when the operator asks it, your own telephone number.

If you don't know the distant telephone number, please make a note of it for future use when you hear the operator repeat it.

2 Wartime Naval Officers to Control Soft Coal Mines

Truman Orders Seizure To Keep Mines Working

Washington, May 22 (AP)—Two wartime naval officers took over United States soft coal mines today and waited eagerly for a sign from John L. Lewis that his 400,000 union members will stay on the job.

Government seizure — which raised the American flag over 4,500 pits—was announced by the White House in an urgent bid to keep alive the two-week strike truce, now set to expire Saturday night.

President Truman designated Interior Secretary J. A. Krug, 38-year-old former naval lieutenant, as Federal mines administrator. To aid Krug, he assigned the boss of the wartime Seabees—Vice Admiral Ben Moreel, who ran United States oil refineries after a similar seizure step last year.

The lieutenant and the admiral (their ranks now good-naturedly reversed) immediately went to work to avert resumption of the strike next Monday. After that comes the task of settling the coal contract dispute without scattering the government's wage-price policy.

At a preliminary session yesterday, Mr. Lewis told Mr. Krug and Mr. Moreel that the question of working was one for each individual miner to decide. Mr. Krug also met with the operators yesterday.

He emphasized at a press conference that whatever contract the mine administrators work out —in principle or otherwise—will have to be submitted to the operators before the agreement can be completed and the mines released to their owners.

Mr. Lewis never has made known his specific wage views. Ahead of wages, he has placed his demand for a seven-per-cent payroll levy for a union-administered health and welfare fund, which the operators estimate could net the union $70,000,000 annually.

In New York an industry spokesman said the seizure action indicated an understanding had been reached. Declining to be quoted by name, he said a three-way administration, presumably consisting of union, management and public, was likely to be created to handle the fund and that the levy might be between 1 1-2 and 3 1-2 per cent, capable of raising $17,000,000 to $35,000,000 a year. The wage increase, he said, would stay within the general industry pattern of 18 1-2 cents, "or a little more."

March of Russians In Czechoslovakia Has Been Postponed

London, May 22 —(Reuters)— Prague radio announced today that at the request of the Czechoslovak government the march of Soviet troops from the south to the north of Czechoslovakia has been postponed until after the Czechoslovak general elections May 28.

Munich radio said last night that some Czechs had protested against the Soviet march, fearing that the presence of Soviet forces during the general elections might "have some influence on the voting."

DISCHARGED SOLDIER

Healdey, Hampshire, England, May 22 — (CP Cable) — Pte. Matthew Hell, 18, of Toronto, today was sentenced to two years' hard labor and discharged from the Canadian Army by a court martial which convicted him of 10 charges of theft from sleeping soldiers in repatriation camps.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, May 22 (CP) — Synopsis at 7.30 a.m.: Cold air from the Mackenzie River basin has spread south and eastward from its source lowering temperatures 10 to 15 degrees in the Prairie Provinces and North Western Ontario. Along the leading edge of the cold air showers occur and skies are overcast. In the Great Lakes region and in the U.S. east of the Mississippi the weather is generally clear this morning. The low pressure area which moved across Ontario Monday is now centered in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and overcast skies with rain is general in the Maritimes. Indications are that the cold air now over the prairies will in part move across Northern Ontario and Quebec and in part over the western U.S. plains leaving Southern Ontario in warmer air at least till Thursday night.

Woman Slain While Detectives Watch Thru Hole

Liverpool, May 22 (CP)—Two detectives peered through a ceiling peephole last night as an attractive, red-haired manicurist was stabbed and strangled in her salon.

Mrs. Ella Staunton, 30, the manicurist, and a thin-faced man wearing a brown Homburg hat passed momentarily out of the detectives vision and then the slaying occurred.

A hunt was on throughout all Northern England tonight for the man, who, authorities said, also wore a new Mackintosh purchased with the slain woman's clothing ration coupons.

Mrs. Staunton once won a beauty contest on the Isle of Man and was at one time a champion British ballroom dancer. She married Thomas Staunton of Liverpool, but the couple had been estranged for several years. Their only child a boy, died.

Liverpool authorities said the detectives had taken up their positions last night on orders to investigate the use being made of the premises by Mrs. Staunton.

The detectives said Mrs. Staunton and the man passed out of their line of vision briefly as they peered through the hole.

Then the woman screamed. The detectives, unable to see what had occurred, rushed downstairs and entered the room.

Mrs. Staunton lay dead on the floor, stab wounds in her face and heart, and the cord from a table lamp twisted about her throat. The man had left.

Police Supt. T. A. Smith said 4,000 photographs and descriptions of the suspect had been circulated in Northern England and that all roads and railway stations were being watched.

The salon is in the heart of Liverpool and hundreds of persons were passing during the early evening rush hour when the slaying occurred.

Lord Alexander Receives Degree At McGill Univ.

Montreal, May 22 — (CP) — Their Excellencies Viscount and Viscountess Alexander, who arrived here yesterday on their official visit to Montreal, will attend today a special convocation ceremony at McGill University where the Governor-General will receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, deliver an address and hold an investiture for student war veterans.

Today a weather front which yesterday dumped heavy showers on this city but left the reception to Their Excellencies undampened started to move eastward and McGill hoped the break would permit the holding of convocation on the campus over which looms wooded Mount Royal.

Tonight the Vice-Regal party will attend a concert of Les Concerts Symphoniques to complete their two-day visit here and will leave for Toronto about midnight.

PRICE CONTROL POLICY BLASTED BY OPPOSITION

Claim Only Way To Increase Farm Production to Provide Better Returns to Farmers

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 22 —(CP)— The government's price stabilization policy came in for further criticism yesterday as the Commons continued debate on Progressive Conservative and C.C.F. motions of want-of-confidence arising from price control administration.

Opposition to the policy was expressed by Hon. Earl Rowe (PC-Dufferin-Simcoe), G. S. White (PC-Hastings-Peterborough), J. M. MacDonnell (PC-Muskoka-Ontario), Hazen Argue (CCF-Wood Mountain), John Probe (CCF-Regina City), W. D. Wylie (SC-Medicine Hat), F. D. Shaw (SC-Red Deer) and Liguori Lacombe (Ind-Laval-Two Mountains.)

Rising to its defence were Thomas Reid (L-New Westminster), Rene Jutras (L-Provencher), Don Brown (L-Essex West) and Andrew Stuart (L-Charlotte).

Labor Minister Mitchell announced the re-appointment of Mr. Justice Gordon Sloan in an effort to bring together labor and management in the week-old British Columbia lumber strike. Any final decision in the dispute will have to be approved by the British Columbia War Labor Board.

Mr. Mitchell also disclosed the Labor Department hopes to make an increased number of German prisoners-of-war available to help with the harvest of sugar beets in Western Canada and in Western Ontario.

Police Discover Another Batch Of Stolen Bonds

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Provincial Police late last night announced discovery of another batch of bonds—worth possibly $100,000—believed stolen from the Bank of Commerce at Minden, Ont., in a burglary Saturday night.

Bonds worth roughly $100,000 had been found on the roadside north of Toronto Sunday afternoon and traced to the Minden bank. Nearby were broken safety deposit boxes.

The latest missing bonds were found in a bush off No. 12 Highway near Whitby by Provincial Constable George McGuire.

Exact amount of bonds taken from the bank in the North Haliburton county town was not disclosed as bank officials worked to discover what was missing in 30 safety deposit boxes that were taken by the burglars and broken open in the countryside late Saturday or early Sunday. Apart from the bonds only a small amount of silver was taken by the burglars who broke a window to enter the bank and then chiselled an entry into the vault.

TWO CONVICTED OF RAPE

Windsor, May 22 — (CP) — After deliberating for more than nine hours an Assize Court jury late last night convicted Percy Price, 18, and Howard Fleming, 20, of charges of rape against a 30-year-old married woman on April 24. They will be sentenced on Thursday. Defence counsel intimated that an appeal would be filed.

Evidence of "Pain Ceiling" for Humans Obtained by N.Y. Medical Centre

By WILLIAM GLOVER

New York, May 22 (AP) —That toothache—or any other pain you have can hurt only just so much.

Evidence of a natural "pain ceiling" for human beings, above which increased stimulus cannot add to an individual's distress, has been obtained for the first time as part of a clinical project underway at New York Hospital Cornell Medical Centre.

The investigation of pain intensity is one phase of pioneer study into the relationship between an individual's bodily ailments and his emotional-physical makeup.

Cataloguing types of human personality is part of the project, because a high degree of accuracy has been found possible in relating various disorders to persons of various emotional and biographical patterns.

Case studies have been made on several hundred patients since the daily clinic was set up in mid-February. Persons from 14 to 80 years of age have been examined.

The study of pain has shown that a person is able to distinguish differences in intensity of painful stimuli up to a specific measurable point, after which there is a levelling-off in reaction. It is suggested that the ability to perceive the difference in intensity "has an upper limit at approximately twice the intensity of stimulus at the pain threshold (the point where pain is first felt)."

Earl Wager Believed Drowned at Corbyville

Believed to have been drowned in the Moira River near the dam at Corbyville some time after the supper hour Tuesday evening, the body of Earl Wager, 29, Trent Road was still not recovered by searchers at noon today.

Employed at the Canadian Industrial Alcohol plant at Corbyville in the capacity as night watchman and driver, Mr. Wager disappeared from his work shortly before dark Tuesday and according to plant employees has not since been seen. Mr. Wager's dinner-pail remained untouched.

Mr. Wager was a veteran of World War 2 having served in the R.C.A. and while overseas married an English girl who flew to Canada at her own expense to be with her husband. He has been employed at Corbyville since November, 1945.

Provincial police joined in the search for the missing man's body on Wednesday morning but dragging efforts proved unsuccessful up to the noon hour.

GOVT. INCREASES PROCESSED MILK, CHEESE SUBSIDY

Cheese Subsidy Raised 10 Cents per 100 Pounds and for Milk Eight Cents per 100

Ottawa, May 22 — (CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley yesterday announced increases in the government subsidies paid for fluid milk going into production of cheese and processed milk, both effective May 1.

He told the House of Commons the cheese subsidy was increased 10 cents — from 20 to 30 cents a 100 pounds while that for fluid milk going into concentrated milk was boosted eight cents — from 15 to 23 cents a 100 pounds. Both increases are retroactive to May 1.

The cheese subsidy increase will continue until April 30, 1947, unless "absorbed into the sale price in the meantime, while the subsidy on concentrated milk will be effective until next Sept. 30, when it will be considered further.

The two increases follow a recent increase of 20 cents a 100 lbs. — from 35 to 55 cents — in the subsidy to fluid milk producers for the period from May 1 to Sept. 30 this year.

Mr. Ilsley was asked by John Hackett (PC — Stanstead) what was meant by the reference to "absorbing the cheese subsidy in the sale price. The minister explained that he meant the payment may be added to the sale price of the cheese.

"Most of the cheese goes to the United Kingdom and would have to be added to that price," he said.

Progressive Conservative Leader Bracken said he felt the subsidy policy would discourage fluid milk production and its entry into products other than cheese.

A Toronto delegation headed by Mayor Robert Saunders conferred with Mr. Ilsley earlier in the day and heard there was "no chance of the government changing its mind" regarding termination of the two-cent consumer subsidy on milk next June 1.

Mayor Saunders said Mr. Ilsley had told him the government policy was one of de-control and over a period of time all price controls would be removed. The mayor said removal of the subsidy would increase the cost of milk for residents of the Toronto area by $2,660,000 annually and predicted a decline in milk sales which would affect the health of children.

After the meeting, Mr. Ilsley told reporters that in returning regulation of milk prices to the Ontario Milk Control Board, he believed the matter was in the hands of a "conscientious, competent authority."

Fred Rose's Trial Again Adjourned Until Monday

Montreal, May 22 (CP)—Trial of Fred Rose, Labor Progressive Member of Parliament for Montreal-Cartier on a conspiracy charge, today was adjourned to Monday.

Charged with conspiring unlawfully to communicate information to the Soviet Union, Rose appeared in court of King's Bench Monday when his trial was postponed until today because important exhibits needed here were being used at Ottawa at the trial of Edward Mazerall, whose case was completed yesterday.

Philippe Brais, special prosecutor, said that the crown exhibits still were being used in Ottawa and even though a jury could be sworn in it would be unfair to hold them over the Victoria Day weekend.

Milan, May 22 — (Reuters) — Edmondo Leppo, Mussolini's doctor, was among 35 leading members of the illegal non-Fascist organization arrested in a raid by Milan political police, it was disclosed today.

BELIEVE LOOT TOTALS $6,900 IN BANK HOLDUP

Sum May Reach $14,120 and Police Search District for Two Bandits

Ailsa Craig, Ont., May 22 (CP) —Manager R. J. Stevenson said today that some $6,300 was taken yesterday by two armed and masked men who held up the Bank of Commerce branch and fled in an automobile, possibly driven by a third man. The figure was reached after books had been balanced.

While a province-wide manhunt was under way, it was revealed the currency included more than $1,000 in United States paper currency as well as 100 $100 Canadian bills and 18 mutilated $100 bills.

Full descriptions of the two hold-up men were furnished Provincial Police who threw a network around roads leading from this community 20 miles northwest of London.

The holdup occurred about 2 p.m. when a short swarthy man carrying two automatics, his face covered by a green and white polka-dot handkerchief, entered with a taller companion, who also carried a gun. There were no customers in the bank at the time and they herded the five employees into a washroom, then took the currency from the cashier's cage.

Gypped on Rope

One lead which may assist police in their search was the report of a general storekeeper at Birr, nine miles south-east of here, that two men answering the description of the robbers, entered his store shortly before 2 p.m. He said they "gypped" him on purchase of a rope and that he could "recognize the tall one anywhere."

Bank manager R. J. Stevenson said his first indication of the hold-up was when two revolvers were stuck in his face. He told of the cage being rifled and the employees being herded in the vault.

"They didn't make us lie down, but they did insist we face the wall. They tried to lock the door but they didn't quite make it," he said.

The bandit's get-away was fast, witnesses said.

"All I saw was a puff of dust toward London," H. C. Ward, bank teller said, although he had rushed to the door when he heard their footsteps outside.

3 Escort Vessels Allotted by R.C.N. To Train Reservists

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)— Three escort vessels of the Algerine class have been allotted by the Royal Canadian Navy for training reservists this summer and will operate off the east coast, on the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes, naval service headquarters announced today.

Operating on the St. Lawrence, H.M.C.S. Portage will at first be concerned chiefly with training of reservists from the naval divisions of Quebec, Montreal and possibly Ottawa. H.M.C.S. Wallaceburg will operate on the Great Lakes and train personnel from Port Arthur to Kingston. Divisions in the latter area are located at Port Arthur, Windsor, Toronto, London, Hamilton and Kingston.

Both vessels will be brought from Halifax by their crews, who will assist in training new personnel. The vessels, largest naval ships which can use the Great Lakes canal system, will have complements of five officers and 36 men each, who will be assisted in their routine by the men undergoing training.

Two other navy ships — the Algerine H.M.C.S. New Liskeard, and the Frigate H.M.C.S. Charlottetown—are at present engaged in training cruises out of Halifax and Esquimalt, B.C., respectively. Both are training university naval training detachment personnel.

CHINESE FORCES CLAIM CAPTURE OF KUNGCHULING

Communists Counter By Closing in On Chaoyang in Kehol Province

Nanking, May 22 (AP)— Chinese government forces today claimed the capture of Kungchuling, halfway between Szepingkai and their goal, the Manchurian capital, Changchun. Communists countered by closing in on Chaoyang in southeastern Kehol Province and Tsinan, capital of Shantung.

Front-line dispatches relayed from Mukden reported elements of the government's new 1st army reached Kungchuling, 40 miles south of Changchun, last night and that advance units today pushed seven miles further north.

Although government dispatches said national troops had "entered" Kungchuling and that advance units had pushed on north, it was not clear whether they had captured or by-passed that strategic city.

With Changchun almost within artillery range, government Gen. Tu Li-Ming issued a press statement expressing hope that "the bandit force" (Communists) would "repent" and give up the capital to the Nationals to avoid extensive destruction.

Shell Changchun

The Communists shelled Changchun when they captured it in an intense, four-day battle five weeks ago.

Mukden dispatches said the government's 1st army was advancing along five routes through and around Kungchuling.

Units of the West route reached Chuchiatien and Liaoyuan, 65 miles west of Kungchuling. The north route force reached Shwangshan, 50 miles west and slightly north of Kungchuling.

The east group captured Yitung, 30 miles west. The southeastern route unit captured Hsian, 45 miles west of Szepingkai.

General Tu told the press that three armies and 13 brigades of "bandit troops" totalling 110,000 men originally stationed at Szepingkai were preparing to attack Kaiyuan and Changtu.

Communists Well Prepared

Creating doubt as to whether government troops had captured Kungchuling or only entered it was an earlier dispatch from Associated Press correspondent Tom Masterson in Peiping. He said reports from central Manchuria indicated the Communists were well prepared to defend the city.

They cleverly eluded a government trap 35 miles southwest of Kungchuling Sunday night by withdrawing from fortified Szepingkai under cover of an artillery barrage, he said.

Lt.-Gen. Sun Li-Jen, commander of the government's 1st army, reinforced by two divisions, had just begun a vigorous assault on Szepingkai, which had held firm for 32 days.

Gen. Marshall, special United States Envoy, tried to get both parties to sign a Manchurian truce, conferring for two hours yesterday with General Chou and will renew his efforts for peace today.

The Hague, May 22 — (Reuters) — Holland's weekly bread ration is to be reduced from 2,400 grams (four pounds eight ounces) to 2,200 grams (four pounds two ounces), the Dutch Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries, and Food announced today.

Seven American-Piloted Planes Said Shot Down Over Manchuria

Moscow, May 22 (AP)—Pravda, Communist Party organ, said today in a dispatch from its Vladivostock correspondent that American airmen flying United States planes were fighting in Manchuria on the side of the Kuomintang (central government) troops. The dispatch said seven American planes had been shot down after they had bombed the people's revolutionary (Chinese Communist) army.

(There has been no indication recently from China if any American-piloted planes operating over Manchuria except as transports for American observers or peace teams of American, Chinese government and Communist members. United States Generals in China have denied repeatedly that American pilots were flying anything but peaceful missions.)

"As has become known from authoritative sources," the Pravda article said, "the Kuomintang army is armed with American guns, part of which have been captured as trophies by the people's revolutionary army.

"Greater shock was caused in the ranks of the people's revolutionary army by the fact that the seven downed bombers which were bombing troops of the people's revolutionary army were found to be American. The fliers were also Americans."

The Soviet press and radio reported today without comment that all Soviet troops had evacuated Manchuria by May 3.

Doubts Reports

Shanghai (AP)—Lt.-Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., today termed "very questionable" a Russian Tass News Agency assertion that American-piloted planes had been shot down over Manchuria while bombing Chinese Communist forces.

Gen. Gillem, Commander of United States forces in China, said he had no information on the Tass report. He recalled that an order that no American planes should fly north of Mukden had been issued after earlier Communist assertions that American planes were active in Manchuria.

Prospects Slump For Settlement U.S. Rail Dispute

Union Demands for Working Rules Hinder Settlement

Washington, May 22 (AP) — Prospects slumped today for any settlement in the United States railroad labor dispute before the five-day strike truce runs out tomorrow afternoon.

President Truman's own mediator in the case, John R. Steelman, said the "situation doesn't look too good" and the disputing carriers and brotherhoods seemed to share that view, discarding their guarded optimism of 24 hours ago.

Negotiators said solution of the dispute would be relatively simple if only wages were at issue. One of the carrier spokesmen described brotherhood demands for changes in 4 working rules as "by far the most troublesome feature of the whole picture."

Working rules are the stipulated conditions under which railmen perform their duties. Among changes proposed by the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers and Trainmen are that the carriers pay for all uniforms and reimburse men for time lost during depot and switching delays and stopovers.

The carriers estimate the proposed rules changes would cost them $800,000,000 a year. They have agreed to pay the 16-cent hourly increase for all their 1,400,000 workers as recommended by fact-finding boards functioning under the railway labor law. They estimate this would cost them $619,000,000

The Brotherhoods, however, demand an 18-per-cent wage boost, with a $1.44 daily minimum increase. The carriers calculate this will amount to a 20-cent hourly increase per man and cost them about $775,000,000.

Young Mother Changes Opinion About Her Baby

Burlington, Ia., May 22—(AP) — A young Chicago mother who yesterday left her nine-day old son in a hospital and boarded a train for California after leaving a note to her husband indicating disappointment because her baby was not "a sweet and pretty little boy," has changed her opinion.

The mother, Mrs. Marjorie Ashe, 20, was reunited with her husband, James, 27, at the police station last night after he flew here following her telephone call.

"She's been sick," Mr. Ashe said as he embraced his wife. "But she's all right now. And we both think we've got the most beautiful baby in the world."

Mrs. Ashe, in the note left at the hospital for her husband, said she "couldn't bear to think of taking him home and showing him to everyone. I think it would have eaten my heart completely away. O, if Got had just made him cute, how happy we would have been".

Mazerall Case Goes to Jury On Ninth Day

Ottawa, May 22 —(CP)— The Mazerall conspiracy case went to the jury shortly after noon today after a charge of almost two hours by Chief Justice J. C. McRuer.

Before the 12 men filed from the courtroom to consider evidence in the trial of Edward Mazerall, 30, National Research engineer they were told by the Chief Justice that a conspiracy, such as the alleged Soviet spy ring constituted a threat to the security of government administration.

Today was the ninth day in the trial of the slight dark young engineer who also faces two charges of violating the Official Secrets Act.

Mazerall's case was the first to come before the Supreme Court. Five other cases are listed for the Supreme Court and three are pending in county court.

Chief Justice's Address.

"The matter before us is of such importance that it touches the very nerve centre of our national existence," the Chief Justice said today in his charge.

The type of conspiracy alleged would, if allowed to develop in the public service, create a condition of insecurity. The trustworthiness of civil servants was essential to the administration of government.

On the other hand an accused person was entitled to a fair trial and the jury should reach a decision solely on the evidence it had heard in the case, disregarding any previous impressions.

Turning to a consideration of the law of conspiracy he said the moment the accused person agreed to provide information there was an offence and the crime would be complete even though no information was actually communicated. It was not necessary for the Crown to prove an actual meeting with those concerned.

The indictment against Mazerall named as the persons he conspired with Durnford Smith, National Research Council employee; Gordon Lunan, Wartime Information Board official; Israel Halperin, Queen's University professor; Lt.-Col. V. O. Rogov and Col. Nicolai Zabotin of the Soviet embassy.

It was necessary for the jury to be satisfied, before finding guilt, that there was an unlawful design. But it was not necessary that Mazerall should be considered one of the originators.

He suggested the jury decide first whether there was an unlawful agreement and then whether Mazerall participated. A conviction should not be registered solely on the evidence of a person who was a party to the conspiracy and Igor Gouzenko, former Soviet embassy cipher clerk, while named in the indictment had participated.

The evidence had indicated there was a "large, widespread, evil conspiracy" on behalf of Soviet officials to gain information.

Chief Justice McRuer spent some time reviewing evidence given by Gouzenko and discussing documents he had taken from the embassy. He then turned to Mazerall's evidence before the royal commission and read sections, including that in which Mazerall said it was arranged his relations with Lunan, to whom he had given two reports, were to be secret.

Judge Criticizes Drinking Scenes In Bing's Films

Peterborough, May 22 (CP)—The films "Going My Way" and "The Bells of St. Mary's" were attacked Monday night by Judge Joseph Wearing of London, Ont., in an address at centennial celebrations of Murray Street Baptist Church.

"Religious movies are wonderful," the judge said. "I would show them every Sunday night if I thought they would attract our young people. But by religious movies I do not mean creations like "Going My Way" and "The Bells of St. Mary's" which depict only one church.

"They had Bing Crosby as a miner, rancher, comedian and singer, and then they thought he would go over big as a clergyman. Well, he did to many, but not to me. Neither did his fellow 'clergyman,' Barry Fitzgerald. I can still see the two of them, supposedly missionaries of God, drinking their whisky.

"Just think of the pernicious influence on our young, of two clergymen drinking whisky.

Most films today gave young people a false idea of life, he added. They depicted children well-dressed, living in beautiful homes and "that should not be allowed."

"When I think of the world today," he said. "I think of movies luring away our young; think of those two 'clergymen' drinking whisky."

In a breakdown of youths' attitude toward religion, he said 25 per cent had interest in the Church, another 25 per cent was "lukewarm," 25 per cent was disassociated completely, and the remaining 25 per cent was antagonistic.

Former German Ambassador To Italy Praises Pope

Nuernberg, May 22 — (AP) — Baron Ernst Von Weizsaecker, former German Ambassador to the Vatican declared today that history would list Pope Pius at the top of all those deserving praise for conduct during the war in Italy.

Next to the Pope in this regard, he told the international military tribunal under quesioning of counsel for the German high command, indicated as a criminal group, history would bestow its praise "on the German Wehrmacht under Field Marshal (Albert) Kesselring."

Weizsaecker was summoned to the witness stand yesterday by counsel for Rudolf Hess.

Weizsaecker said that during the Nazi occupation of the Eternal City "Kesselring told me half his days were taken up with the question of feeding Rome."

"Perhaps it is not known here," he continued, "that in the autumn of 1943 the Holy See published an official communique that the behavior of German soldiers in Rome was to be praised."

Weizsaecker obviously was discomfited when the British prosecution, during cross-examination, referred to the Ardentine Caves massacre by S. S. police in Rome in March, 1944.

Asked if it was true that 329 Italians and 57 Jews perished in that mass execution, the tall, gray-haired former Ambassador replied:

"I believe 320 persons were murdered in the cave."

He said he was not "consulted in the matter" and emphasized that it was the work of Nazi police and not of Kesselring's forces.

HOPES ARE SLIM

Toronto, May 22 — (CP) — Hopes for an early increase in the production of creamery butter in Ontario are slim, unless there is plenty of rain, C. E. Lackner, director of the dairy branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, said today.

A rain followed by reasonably warm weather would give sufficient grass growth to allow cattle to do well on pastures, he said.

There is a 20 per cent decrease in production of creamery butter compared with last year.

Rotary Benevolence Will Provide Treatment for Ex-Soldier's Child

It was 1943. Air raid sirens shrilled their crescendoing warning in the heart of London. Against the blue of sunny English skies were etched the black dots of the enemy bombers. Smoke plumes trailed out of the sun as the Spitfires swept down to meet them.

Londoners, on their way to lunch, nonchalantly glanced above—then hurried to the safety of air raid shelters, or the comparative security of cellars.

Death streamed out of the sky. Dull heavy thuds of detonations climaxed the whining high-pitched scream of the bombs. Clouds of smoke and rubble mushroomed into the air as the lethal messengers of Nazi hate exploded in shop, church, and residence.

Huddled in a building with her fellow Londoners was an attractive English girl. She was the wife of a Canadian soldier, then at the front, and was an expectant mother.

Bravely, patiently, she waited for the "All Clear" signal. She suffered through the hell of suspense, even as she had done many times before.

Child Paralysed.

Later, her baby was born. An innocent victim of Hitler's blitz, it paid a physical price for the horror of war which it and its mother had survived. It was paralyzed in one side.

But despite its handicap, the baby grew into a bright attractive child, the apple of the eyes of the Canadian soldier and his English bride.

Came 1945 — and the end of the war. The Canadian soldier was sent back to Canada, and Belleville. His wife and child had preceded him, to make their home in this city.

With the hell and horror of war behind them, they concentrated all their efforts on making their child well. They consulted doctors. The child was treated. Soon their money was gone. The child had showed some definite improvement. But it appeared destined to be a cripple all its life.

Today, however, life has taken on a brighter hue for the Canadian ex-soldier whose identity must remain anonymous for the present.

Mr. Charles Symons, chairman of the Rotary Club's Crippled Children Committee, heard of the case. He investigated it, and found it one worthy of assistance. He consulted his committee and his president. Now he has the "green light" of "go ahead."

Within a day or so, the little victim of Nazi hate will be on its way to Toronto and the Hospital for Sick Children, where perhaps will come the answer to the prayers of a heroic Canadian veteran and his brave British wife.

Home Country Looks Good to Local Girl After Trip to California

"There may be plenty of sunshine and oranges in California, but at the present it is a state of strikes; queues, inflation, food shortage, and its glamor centre, Hollywood, more or less infected with phonyism," said Miss Joy Putman, Herchimer Avenue, who with her mother recently returned from a holiday in the "Golden State" and Mexico.

Miss Putman is a member of the graduating class of nurses of the Belleville General Hospital which receives its "black band" next week.

"You can get some sort of food in Hollywood or any other city in California, or in the United States, for that matter, if you want to queue up and wait for hours," Miss Putman smiled.

"Or," she added, "In Hollywood, where the movie greats go unnoticed, if you are one of the wealthy class, you can get a snack in the Brown Derby by depositing an exorbitant cover charge."

The Hollywood hens, the barnyard type, strut around their rural habitats with snooty airs, and beaks held high. And why shouldn't they. Eggs are a mere eighty cents a dozen. About-town roosters, also the feathered type, practically demand a blue-blood lineage from potential Biddy girl-friends.

Bread Scarce

Bread was so scarce in the land of oranges and Florida fueds, that the appearance of a loaf was the signal for mass meetings. Butter—well—just mention it and the native sons and daughters will ask a tourist the definition of the word.

Labor wages are high. The average native son who depends on this sort of work gets a measly $2 an hour. Anything less, and he takes a holiday.

The strike virus has infiltrated the veins of many Californians, Miss Putman said. "Can you imagine," she commented, "the pilots of an airways company, during the time we were there, calmly sat down in their flying togs and refused to go to work, unless their monthly 'pittance' was raised from $1,000 to $1,400."

Miss Putman and her mother were present at a well known radio broadcast that features a breakfast program. Previous to the airing of the feature, the Canadians paid $1.20 each for a breakfast of a slab of cold fried potatoes approximately two inches in diameter, a piece of omelette of the same huge dimensions and a small brown muffin. No butter.

Skeptical Emcee

Just before the program was aired, the master of ceremonies visited various tables in the breakfast club, and inquired as to the homes of the patrons. Told that Miss Putman and her mother were from Belleville, Ontario, Eastern Canada, the emcee turned away, muttering something about "what some people will think of to get themselves on the air."

The Bellevillians visited parts of colorful Mexico after leaving Los Angeles, Hollywood and San Diego, where they saw the famous American aircraft carrier "Shangri-La" steam into port.

Here they obtained some handsome souvenirs including several shells. Hammered silver was fairly common as were other native souvenirs south of the Rio Grande.

On one occasion Miss Putman accosted a Mexican handsomely garbed in sombrero the size of a kitchen table, serape, with belt and trousers that tinkled to the silvery music of tiny hammered-silver embellishments. He stood lazily in the shade leaning against the corner of an old adobe shack.

Asked by Miss Putman if he would pose for a photograph, he opened a sleepy eye, yawned, and said, "How much you pay me?"

"It was a glorious sight-seeing trip," Miss Putman commented, "but this old Canada of ours is plenty good enough for me. We ought to be thankful we live in such a country."

David Niven's Wife Dies After Stairway Fall

Hollywood, May 22 —(AP)— Mrs. David Niven, attractive 28-year-old wife of the English film actor, died yesterday from a head injury suffered in a fall down a basement stairway at the home of Tyrone Power.

The accident occurred Sunday night during a party attended by a small group of film notables — friends of Power and his wife, Annabella. Among them were Gene Tierney and her husband, Oleg Cassini, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Greene, Caesar Romero and Mr. and Mrs. Rex Harrison, English film favorites.

A spokesman for Mr. Power said that blonde Mrs. Niven apparently mistook the basement door for one to a closet in which guests' wraps were hanging. She was participating in a game of hide-and-seek.

Mr. Niven, who returned recently to Hollywood to resume the movie career he interrupted nearly six years ago to join a British army commando outfit, was reported prostrate.

Mrs. Niven, Scottish-born daughter of William and Lady Rollo and christened Primula, joined her husband here two months ago. With her came their two children, David Jr. 3, godson of Noel Coward and Vivien Leigh, and James Graham, 6 months.

Mr. Power's studio said an inquest doubtless would be held, but no date has been set. Dr. Maynard Brandsma said the official cause of death was a "lacerated brain." Mrs. Niven was taken to hospital immediately after the accident and showed signs of improvement yesterday, then her condition suddenly failed, Dr. Brandsma said.

The couple married Aug. 15, 1940, after a whirlwind courtship that began when they met during an air raid at an airdrome outside London. Mr. Niven, a lieutenant, dived into a slit trench and found it occupied by a WAAF and her pet dog. Mr. Niven said the dog bit him, and after a few words with its comely owner, they became friends. Mr. Niven and the WAAF married 10 days later.

Butcher Admits Over-Ceiling Prices Paid

Toronto, May 22 (CP) — The inquiry of Commissioner J. D. McNish into the Toronto meat situation, entered its sixth day today with indications that yesterday's break in the wall of secrecy surrounding alleged black market activities, in the form of a signed admission by one dealer, would be widened by a perusal today of his invoices and records for 1945 and 1946 to date.

The dealer, Louis Edelist, was confronted with a signed statement in which he admitted having paid over-ceiling prices for meat but he claimed the statement was obtained under pressure and answered all questions with the steady reply "I don't remember."

The statement read at yesterday's hearing was obtained by two R.C.M.P. constables last June. They said Edelist talked freely of black market dealings and signed the statement he had given, after ordering one deletion. Edelist was equally emphatic in his denial that the statement was freely given.

The substance of Edelist's statement was that he had been forced to pay from 1½ to 2½ cents over the ceiling prices for meats he obtained from K. Greenspan and Canada Abattoir, after his regular shipments from Canada Packers were cut off. He said, in the statement, he was forced to buy at these prices or do without meat. Method of payment of the "over" price was described in the statement, which said the driver for the supplying company had a slip showing the extra amount to be paid.

Commissioner McNish suggested to Edelist that he could have a lawyer represent him if he wished and ordered him to appear today with complete records for inspection of the commission.

Other witnesses heard yesterday disclosed they had been able to obtain sufficient meat for their purposes from small packers when the large packing houses curtailed their output.

Leaders Arrested, Curfew Imposed

Srinagar, Kashmir State, India, May 22 (CP)—The Kashmir government yesterday put down an attempted insurrection by arresting the leaders of the Kashmir national conference and imposing a 15-day curfew.

The government, terming the incident officially as an attempted "coup d'etat," called out state troops Monday to aid police in quelling a riot in which one person was killed, preceding the political uprising.

An official communique reported the arrest of Sheikh Mohamed Abdullah, President of the Kashmir National Conference, and a number of his followers, for making speeches inciting the populace "to destroy the existing government, repudiate allegiance to His Highness (the Maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir) and force him to leave Kashmir."

(Kashmir, the northernmost Indian state, covers 84,471 square miles and has a population of 4,000,000).

On Saturday evening last a local citizen observed Walsh driving recklessly in an air force truck with two male companions. He swerved up on his lawn, breaking off several small bushes .The citizen notified police and gave them a description of the truck. While police were searching for the truck, they received a phone call that a truck answering the description of the wanted one, had become involved in an accident with a car at the corner of Princess and Byron Streets and four persons were injured. When police arrived at the scene of the accident, within a few minutes, the occupants of truck had disappeared. The driver of the car, J. Whitley, Marmora Street, told police that the truck approached him as he was crossing the intersection and struck his car on the left side. The truck had no lights. Trenton police notified R.C.A.F. Service police, who apprehended the driver as he was passing through gate at the Air Station by a cut on his hand. On both charges Walsh was remanded until May 28th.

The British Empire

Thursday will be Empire Day and many hundreds of thousands of school pupils will have their thoughts directed to what the British Empire has meant in the progress of civilization.

The Empire is one of the great developments of history. There have been other empires, but primarily and chiefly they were all based upon force. There has been no Empire just like the British Empire carrying progress and democratic enlightenment to the uttermost ends of the earth. There were the empires of early days in western Asia. In the course of time came the empire of Alexander the Great which though it carried to the western edge of India, yet soon disintegrated. This empire was built upon power and conquest. There followed soon after the greatest empire of the ancient world, the Roman Empire, influences of which are felt yet in many countries. Rome governed a great part of the ancient globe and left its mark upon civilization in Europe, but in the end it fell. A century and a half ago there was the empire of Napoleon which was founded on aggression but though it kept Europe and the Mediterranean in a state of war for many years, yet with Waterloo it passed.

But the growth of the British Empire has been steady down the centuries and the development of freedom by the people of the British Isles has been exerting its leavening influence in Europe, in America, and in the East and in Africa.

In the two Great Wars the world has seen the cohesion of the component parts of the British Empire, based not on coercion and exercise of power but by the gentle influence and love of freedom which Britain has inspired in these nations.

There has never been such an international authority for good of the world. The result has been that in the recent struggle she had the moral and the military and material support of the free nations whose number continued to grow. In the year 1940 Britain with the Empire stood alone against the aggressive might of Germany. She withstood the blows and nothing that Nazism's forces could do could shake her. Her great moral power helped her in the battle with the enemy and brought her the moral sympathy and the prayers and the help of other nations that loved freedom. Especially in that memorable period did her moral grandeur reach so great a height that it will stand as a lamp for all the ages to be and as long as men love freedom. Mr. Churchill spoke in those days of it as Britain's "finest hour." History of all recorded time never witnessed a more inspiring spectacle for the world of the present and the coming ages to admire.

Britain needs no one to trumpet her greatness. She with Dominions and Colonies has been a power for goodness and security. With her has stood in the Western World the United States, another vast authority for righteousness and peace among nations. Mankind knows the debt to British ideals of international justice and freedom.

Britain's empire is a sway that brings nations to their best for she "extends the bounds of freedom wider yet." It is she who has withstood in the path of the aggressor and her example has been followed by nations in Europe whose courage and fortitude in the late struggle have been of invaluable aid in upholding the principles of justice and the right of freedom.

Students and pupils of the schools are proud of having come into the heritage of freedom and greatness of British service to the world. They come of the peoples who have upheld the spirit of liberty. And not only those who attend school should dwell upon what Britain and the Empire have done in saving of the world, but their parents and elders will give thought to what that great development of freedom, known as the British Empire, has meant to the race of man across the earth.

Anniversary in Channel Islands

The Channel Islands, the only part of the British Isles occupied by the Germans, celebrated the anniversary of liberation on May 9th. The German occupation forces' surrender was signed on the destroyer Bulldog, but anniversary visitors to the Islands included the battleship King George The Fifth and the cruiser Bellona.

The Channel Islands were occupied at the end of June 1940, after the United Kingdom Government was reluctantly obliged to withdraw the garrison. Civilians were given the chance to leave, and twenty-eight percent. of the total population of a hundred thousand came to Britain. Then thousand joined the armed forces. The Emergency Governments in the Islands maintained formal relations with the Germans, but left them in no doubt that they were enemies. Individual heroism included aid to British secret service agents and allied airmen and listening to the B.B.C. despite the German ban. After liberation, honors conferred by the King for services during the occupation included knighthoods for three of the leading Islanders. One result of the occupation was that one quarter of the population was brought to starvation level.

After liberation "the awakening from a nightmare," proper food and clothing rationing was soon introduced, and coal and clothes brought from the United Kingdom. The evacuees returned and the Islands are resuming their normal tourist traffic far as the shortage of shipping and German destruction of buildings and furniture allow. Of the two principal crops, tomatoes will again come to the United Kingdom this year, but potatoes have suffered from the Colorado beetle, introduced during the German occupation.

The famous Jersey and Alderney cattle breeds are still intact, though depleted.

Alderney, converted by the Germans into a great fortress, has dealt in a revolutionary way with a special problem. The Germans removed centuries old field boundary stones for the fortifications, so now the farmers are running Alderney as a "collective farm" pooling their resources. The United Kingdom Government has offered the Islands seven and a half million pounds towards the total thirteen and a half million cost of reconstruction.

Thus the oldest possession of the British Crown, the only survival of the Dukedom of Normandy, which sent William the Conqueror to England, resumes its connections with Britain, to which it has been loyal through the centuries.

Food One of Many

The problem of famine is unique not only in its magnitude, but in the fact that it is the only one of many confronting the nations today which directly touches the individual.

The individual Canadian, for example, cannot do much concerning India's future, Chinese civil strife, or Generalissimo Franco. But he can do something about famine.

He can co-operate fully in the enforcement of food rationing regulations, further curtail his own consumption, keep an eye open for preventable food waste. And if even a few feet of soil are available, he can become a food producer.

—Montreal Herald.

Take Facts Off Rations

How about an increase in the facts ration? Take facts off the ration altogether. The value of Britain's gesture in diverting 200,000 tons of wheat to the impoverished lands would be all the greater if the world knew how much was left in British larder. If the amount is now dangerously low, then there is no sense in hiding the fact from anybody. If British stocks are still ample — as Mr. Herbert Hoover asserts —then there is still less reason for secrecy. Britain has no greater interest than the pursuit of truth — whithersoever it may lead.

—London Daily Express.

THE MOTE AND THE BEAM

So easy to say what another should do;
The faults of another so plain!
I think when the blunders I've made I review
I shall never play critic again.

So easy to sneer and to say "What a fool!"
When tempted my neighbor proves weak;
But I think when I've carelessly broken a rule
No censure of others I'll speak.

I can see very quickly the mote in the eye
Of stranger or friend when we meet,
But remembering how subject to folly am I
No phrases of scorn I'll repeat.

PRICE CONTROL

Defends Canada Bill.

In the Senate, Senator Gustave Lacasse (L-Ontario) defended the "Canada Day" bill and said those against the measure seemed to be only "half-hearted" in their opposition, indicating they did not know "which leg to stand on."

The Commons gave third reading to private members' bills incorporating the Canadian Acceptance Company and making certain changes in the administrative set-up of the Rupert's Land Trading Company.

Mr. Argue criticized the government's action in authorizing a 12½-per-cent increase in the price of farm implements and said the Progressive Conservative opposition had not opposed the price adjustment because they were supporting "big business" all across Canada.

Mr. MacDonnell called for a government statement on the principle and policy in the removal of price control.

Mr. Rowe said the only way to increase farm production was to provide better returns for the farmers. Price should be secondary when it came to providing food for the hungry peoples of the world.

Control in War Essential.

It was true that national control was essential in time of war but it also was true that individual freedom was just as necessary in peacetime. Better times for the farmers would promote employment in other spheres of activity.

Mr. Rowe suggested the government institute a system of compulsory savings if it was worried about inflationary tendencies resulting from heavy purchasing power in the hands of the people.

Mr. White contended the cost of living in Canada had advanced as much as 50 to 100 per cent despite what was indicated by the official cost-of-living index of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Mr. Brown said the lifting of price controls, leading to a general increase in prices, would be disastrous for persons with fixed incomes, such as those living on old-age pensions and superannuation payments.

POLICE STATION LOCKED

Laurel, Mont., May 22 (AP) — The police station has been locked and bolted, Police Chief James Bare took the action to keep thieves out. He reported three pencils and two dime-store notebooks missing.

MURDER SUSPECT

This sorry-looking specimen of humanity is Captain Bakos, former member of the Hungarian S.S., who is shown as he awaited trial in Salzburg, Austria, for alleged responsibility in the shooting of five captured American airmen during the war. Bakos has been stripped of necktie and shoelaces to prevent a possible attempt at suicide.

Seamen's Union Will Call Strike At Noon June 3

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Amid a cross-fire of argument as to responsibility for the move, the Canadian Seamen's Union last night called a strike of seamen on Great Lakes and Coastal Shipping to start at noon June 3. The union is seeking an eight-hour day compared with the present 12-hour shift.

Representatives of the ship operators and of the union had been conferring here for the past few days over the union's long-standing demand for shorter hours. The union had threatened to call the strike June 7 if the demand was not achieved. The negotiations broke off yesterday and the strike call was issued by J. A. (Pat) Sullivan, President of the Canadian Seamen's Union.

About 8,000 seamen are affected on lake and coastal vessels. Federal Labor Minister Mitchell had no comment last night, but Trade Minister MacKinnon at Ottawa pointed out the strike threatened to create "serious bottle-neck" in movement of grain to eastern ports for shipment to food-starved Britain and Europe.

Statement Issued

A statement issued by George R. Donovan, Secretary of the Dominion Marine Association, on behalf of the ship operators was timed at 5 p.m. yesterday and said the negotiations had "broken down." It said "there now is imminent threat of strike action by the union. Owners feel they have done everything in their power and if a strike ensues the blame must be laid wholly at the door of the union."

This was directly contradicted by Sullivan who told the Canadian Press at 8.15 p.m.: "If the negotiations have 'broken down' the responsibility lies on the shoulders of the owners." He said it was the operators, not the union, who broke down the negotiations, who issued a statement that the negotiations had broken down, and who must be held responsible for the strike. Sullivan declared the union leaders still thought negotiations were in progress when they heard of the ship owners' statement that they had "broken down."

Cannot Accommodate More

Here's what the ship operators' statement said: The proposals put forward by the operators provided for an increase in the number of the crew and a reduction of working hours to an eight-hour basis. Owing to the limited accommodation aboard the vessels re-classification of crew members was provided for resulting in an increase of pay for the deck hands who were the lowest paid of the crew, and readjustment of other pay on a basis which would result in practically all the members receiving the same take-home pay for lesser working hours.

Stalin Says Truman's Request Three Months Late

London, May 22 — (AP)—Moscow radio announced today that Prime Minister Stalin has regretfully informed President Truman his request that Russia assign grain to help the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration to meet the world food crisis came just three months too late.

The president's request, Stalin said, came after the Soviet Union had "assigned a certain quantity of foodstuffs to France and other countries" and at a time when Russia's own resources were seriously depleted.

Stalin, the broadcast added, 'expressed his regret that Mr. Truman did not address the Soviet Union on the above question three months ago when the Soviet Union could have done something in this respect."

The Soviet prime minister also advised the president that the Moscow government would have to give "special study" to his proposal that Russia co-ordinate her grain exports with those of other wheat-producing nations to make better use of grain reserves needed by a hungry world.

No Objection to Principle

Stalin added that the Soviet government has "no objection in principle" to the proposal.

Rumors that Russia had turned down the president's appeal came from Washington last Saturday, but there had been no official word prior to the Moscow broadcast last night. Unofficial Washington reports last weekend said Mr. Truman apparently still had hopes of getting Russia to reconsider her position on the world food problem.

A Moscow broadcast last Saturday said Russia had pledged to deliver more than 1,100,000 tons of grain to Finland, France, Poland and Romania during the first year of peace.

Eleven American ships loaded with Russian wheat were reported to have reached Marseilles last month as the first instalment on a total of 500,000 tons of wheat which the Soviet Union promises to deliver to France in April, May and June.

Russia also agreed to sell Poland 200,000 tons of grain for sowing this year's harvest and has promised another 100,000 tons to Finland. In addition, Moscow announced, Russia last September agreed to deliver 150,000 tons of wheat and 150,000 tons of corn to Romania, and is making an additional grant of 20,000 carloads of wheat this year.

THE ACETANILIDE HABIT

It would be absurd to speak of aspirin addiction or habit, I suppose, yet a good many people resort to aspirin (acetylsalicylic acid) for every little ache, pain or discomfort—with disdain for the harmful properties of the drug or in ignorance of the dangers involved.

There are a good many acetanilide addicts, persons who develop an actual craving for the drug, and to satisfy the craving they may take enormous quantities of it daily, usually in the form of a popular headache or pain-relieving nostrum. Most of these victims of the acetanilide habit acquire their craving for the drug by taking it for some ache or pain at first.

Characteristic of acetanilidism are weakness, palpitation, poor appetite, nausea, dizziness, sometimes complaint of numbness of arms or legs. The addict appears pale, ashen gray and usually bluish in the nails, lips, tongue, sometimes over the general surface. Heart action is too rapid, weak and moderate exercise or effort produces marked shortness of breath or breathlessness.

The addict's blood is bluish-brown instead of red in color, and there is usually anemia, for acetanilide is destructive to red blood corpuscles as well as to hemoglobin—the oxygen-carrying substance in the blood.

When an acetanilide addict gives up the drug he or she may expect to suffer some irritability, restlessness, headache and insomnia for a few days and nights, but none of the extreme distress the morphine or laudanum (laudanum is tincture of opium) or opium or heroin (diacetyl morphine) or paregoric (camphorated tincture of opium) habitue suffers when the drug is withdrawn.

I hope I have not painted the picture of acetanilide habit or poisoning worse than it is. Perhaps the tragic death of a friend some six hours after he had taken several doses of a popular pain-relieving nostrum shortly after his evening meal for what he called "acid indigestion"—he was extremely cyanosed and dead when I arrived in his house about midnight—prynoticed me. A single dose of the nostrum he took contains more than twice the average medicinal dose of acetanilide, so he probably took, in an hour or less seven times the "safe" dose.

Remember this: Acetanilide benumbs sense of ache, pain or other discomfort or distress. It never cures anything. Aspirin is far less dangerous if you must take a pain-killer.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How do common and preferred stock differ?

Capital stock is the capital of a company or corporation in the form of transferable shares, each of a certain amount.

The capital stock of a firm may consist of what is known as common and preferred stock.

Common stock represents the ownership of the business and entitles the holders to participate in the direction of the concern.

Preferred stock takes dividends before common or other capital stock does, and in case of a distribution of the assets of the firm the holders of preferred stock participate ahead of the common stock holders.

Sometimes stock that takes priority over common stock in either of these respects is considered preferred stock.

Common stock is capital stock that does not share in either of the privileges of preferred stock.

Common stock holders, as owners of the company, generally receive no dividends until the obligations to preferred stock and mortgage bond holders have been met.

American preferred stock is essentially the same as British "preference" stock.

Home Economics and Arts And Craft Courses at Two City Schools Approved

Establishment of Additional Class Rooms Had to be Approved by Dept. of Education in Toronto

Official approval of temporary quarters for home economics in the Queen Victoria public school has been received from the Department of Education by the local board of education, it was learned by members at their last regular meeting.

Establishment of additional class rooms in the above schools for the extra subjects had been recommended by the board but approval of the department had to be secured before the courses could be instituted.

A committee composed of W. H. Finkle, chairman of the board, Mr. Ed. Shortt, chairman of the public school management committee, and Inspector Lawrence Kells was named to select a teacher for industrial arts and crafts.

Heating Cut Off

In accordance with the mandatory order of the Federal government that the use of soft coal for heating of public buildings be discontinued, Mr. Kells announced that heating of city public schools by soft coal had been cut off.

The announcement did not pass without a verbal shaft being fired by one of the board members who asked are we going to be a bunch of sissies while Toronto, London and other cities defy the order of the government?" The question brought no answer.

Attendance at the four local public schools during April had been 92.46 per cent according to Inspector Kells' report. This was considered as satisfactory for the season. Several class rooms achieved over 95 per cent attendance with King George and Queen Mary schools each having four class rooms attaining this mark, while Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra schools had two class rooms each attaining 95 per cent attendance.

Referred to Committee

The public school staff requested the same salary considerations as had been accorded the collegiate-vocational school staff and the matter was referred to the finance committee for consideration and report.

Miss Phyllis May, supervisor of music for the public schools was granted permission to attend a music festival in Toronto, and also on behalf of the schools asked that a quantity of music books be printed. It was recommended that 2,000 books be printed. The matter was referred to the committee chairman and to the Inspector Administrator for consideration.

Use of the Queen Alexandra school grounds by employees of the Stephens Adamson Co. was granted by the board while permission was granted the Inspector Administrator to attempt to have suitable repairs made to equipment on the playgrounds donated by the Kiwanis Club. Approval was given for the purchase of a piano for King George School, and on the report of the Inspector that pianos were also needed in the other schools, instruction was given to secure other pianos as required.

Gives Health Report

In her report to the school board, Mrs. Watt, the public school health nurse, outlined the program at a recent meeting of the O.E.A. which she attended. Numerous speakers giving addresses on various phases of public health work had been heard at the convention, including Dr. MacKenracher of the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital.

Mrs. Watt reported briefly the speaker's talk on mental health quoting him as saying that although 15,000 patients are at present in institutions, it would be much more economical to now look after people with minor mental disturbances in order to prevent their condition becoming bad enough to necessitate the patient's admission to a mental hospital.

Can Do Much in Schools.

He stated that a great deal could be done in schools but the teachers must not function alone. Observation of the child's immediate family and conference with the doctor and nurse are necessary. The child should have a physical examination and with the background known special hazards could thus be avoided. The teacher has the child eight hours each day and has the opportunity for close observation.

Referring to her work in Belleville schools Mrs. Watt reported that pre-school inspection is being carried on with King George and Queen Mary schools completed, where 30 and 34 pupils were registered. Several cases of chicken pox, measles and mumps were reported in all schools and one case of whooping cough in two schools.

Efforts Made To Release Man From Penitentiary

London, Ont., May 22 — (CP) — A little man serving a life term at Kingston penitentiary for manslaughter may not know it, but efforts are under way to obtain his release.

The prisoner is James Crawford, sentenced at London in October, 1940, to 75 years imprisonment after conviction of manslaughter in the shot-gun slaying of Amber Carter, Blanchard township farmer.

Last night Joseph Rodgers, Stratford business executive who was foreman of the jury that convicted Crawford, said in an interview that he and other members of that jury will petition the Federal Justice Department to release Crawford on the grounds the sentence was too severe.

The campaign to restore freedom to the 47-year-old prisoner was touched off when Crawford appealed to friends "on the outside." Crawford said the penitentiary warden had promised to secure a job for him if he could get released. Crawford has been a trusty almost since he entered the grim gray prison, accompanied by a letter in which he was described as "a model prisoner" never previously tangled up with the law.

WEDDINGS

THRALL—TULK

Qualicum Beach, B.C.— At St. Mark's Anglican Church, on April 27, Rev. H. Jones officiated at the marriage of Jessie Hazel, daughter of Mr. F. Tulk, of Belleville, Ont., and Francis Walter, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Thrall of Qualicum Beach. The church was prettily decorated with baskets of spring flowers.

The charming bride, who was given away by Mr. H. Reid, made a pretty picture in a floor length gown of white net, with a torso bodice of satin, finished at the neck line with a pleated frill of net. The sleeves were short and she wore long white mittens. Her embroidered veil, which was full length, fell gracefully from a coronet. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations, with white ribbons.

The bride's only attendant was Mrs. H. Reid, wearing a floor-length dress of cream net, a wreath of pink flowers in her hair and a cream chapel veil, dotted with pink bows. She wore pink gloves and carried a bouquet of pink carnations, white tulips and blue Irises, with pink ribbons.

The best man was Mr. Ellis Domay of Port Alberni.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Miss H. Jarvis, where a large number of friends were entertained. Mr. Craig Reid proposed the toast to the bride and bridegroom suitably replied.

Later the happy couple left for a honeymoon in Vancouver.

Given in marriage by her brother, Jerry Helferty, the bride made a pretty picture in a floor-length dress of white net over satin. Her long veil was held by orange blossoms and she carried pink carnations and fern.

Miss Loretta Ryan, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. Her long gown was of blue sheer, with blue and pink flower hat. She carried red carnations and fern.

Dan Ryan attended his brother.

Rev. Sister Mary Leoni was at the organ and Miss Joan Hensman, Notre Dame Convent, Kingston, was soloist. During the signing of the register, the choir sang.

At the reception following at the home of the bride, the bride's mother wore a black and white checked suit, while the groom's mother was in black triple sheer. Their corsages were of white carnations. Assistants were Mrs. A. W. Hensman, Misses Dorothy and Doris Ryan, Helen Shannon, Bernice McAlpine and Joan Hensman.

For travelling to Rochester and Montreal, the bride donned a brown dress, pale blue wool coat and brown accessories. They will reside in Picton.

Deny Reports German Officers in Red Army Helping in Training

London, May 22 — (Reuters)—The Moscow radio last night broadcast a denial of reports that the Soviet authorities had accepted former officers of the German army into the Red army and that German generals were helping to train the Red army. "Tass is authorized to state that these communications are untrue from beginning to end and can be explained only as an attempt to divert public attention from recently voiced criticism of the fact that German troops are being retained in the British occupation zone of Germany," the broadcast stated.

ALLAN MILLS

Honor Roll Is Unveiled At Rylestone Ch.

Allan Mills.—At a special service at Rylestone United Church on Sunday afternoon, a large congregation witnessed the unveiling of an honor roll bearing the names of the young men of the church, who had enlisted in the armed forces.

Mrs. Lillie Anderson, mother of three sons who had served overseas, took part in the unveiling ceremony. The congregation stood while Rev. J. R. Holden dedicated the roll and read out the names inscribed upon it.

An eloquent sermon was preached for the occasion by Rev. E. M. Cadigan, of Marmora, who served as a chaplain in Alaska and the Aleutians, and who is an American naval veteran of the First World War. Speaking of the storied past of Britain's famous regiments and the great traditions of the Royal Navy, he declared that Canada's soldiers, sailors and airmen had upheld these noble traditions and had made a record of which the nation may be forever proud.

An anthem given by an augmented choir under the direction of Mr. Bruce Barnum, and a solo by Miss Muriel Barnum, added much to the service.

The following names appear upon the honor roll, Raymond Anderson, Clarence B. Anderson, James A. Barnett, Donald Anderson, Earl Mumby, Grant A. Meiklejohn, Lorne F. Anderson, Laird Meiklejohn, Donald W. McKeown.

The roll was designed by Mr. Murphy, of Stirling, and the lettering was done by Rev. A. M. Laverty, of Stirling.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Won't Marry Her Unless She Changes Her Faith For His

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 17 and go with a boy 18. We love each other very much.

He wants to marry me, but there is one thing wrong. We belong to different churches. He says unless I change, he won't marry me. We get along very well. We don't fight or argue, but agree on everything. We have gone together for two years.

What I want to know is, would it be a mistake to change churches, or must I lose the boy I want?

Worried

This is a very difficult question, and one on which it is impossible to give a yes or no answer.

There have been many cases where a man or a girl have changed churches for the sake of marrying someone belonging to a different faith and it has worked out very happily. And on the other hand, there have been just as many where it has not worked at all. Sometimes each one has kept to his or her own faith, and because they were tolerant people, and very much in love, they were able to work out a satisfactory adjustment on this basis.

But you are both very young; and it seems to me you should not be in a hurry to make a decision that may have very important consequences for your entire life. Why not wait awhile and see how you both feel later on? In the meantime, you might go and consult your minister or priest about the matter.

He Talks Awful About Her, But She Wants Him Just the Same

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a man of 23.

He used to take me out, and he seemed to like me. Now he does not ask me out, and to one person he talks awful about me, but to my Dad he says how nice I am.

He just went away, and it seems as if the bottom of the world has dropped out for me. Please tell me what I should do. I want him back, but I don't know how to get him back, or if he is worth breaking my heart over.

Puzzled Girl.

You know perfectly well he's not worth breaking your heart over, or you wouldn't have brought up that point at all. If you were really in love with him, and thought he was the kind of man who could make you happy, it would never enter your head to wonder if he was worth bothering about.

Why in world would you want anyone who says mean things about you behind your back? And who makes it still worse by being so two-faced that he says pleasant things about you on other occasions? You're not the kind of girl who likes to be treated rough, are you? That's certainly no happiness in that.

Better be thankful you found out what a cheap type he is before things went so far that he really broke your heart.

Party to Introduce Her Son's Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Will you please tell me how to go about giving a reception or tea (which word should I use?) for my son and his bride, who were married in the west and who are coming to visit us here in the East next month when he is discharged from the Navy? My husband and I have met his bride, and now we very much want to have our friends meet her.

2. At the reception or tea, would it be correct for her to wear her wedding gown without the veil?

T. R.

1. For this intimate and friendly party you are planning to give to welcome your son's bride, I suggest you use "tea" rather than the more serious word "reception". Since you will be inviting both men and women guests, plan to have your party on either Saturday or Sunday afternoon, for the convenience of the majority of guests, and either from four-to-six or four-to-seven o'clock.

Your invitations may be written on your visiting-cards or on the inside of Informals, like this:

To meet
Mrs. John Roberts
Mrs. Henry Roberts
Five Home Place

Tea
Saturday, June 22
4 to 7

Or you may write notes of invitation, or for most informality, the invitations may be telephoned. (You may, if you wish to have your guests arrive at approximately the same time, state a definite hour for your party; for example, either four o'clock or five.)

Your and your son's wife should stand together, opposite the entrance to the living-room, you first to greet the guests and to introduce them to "Mary, John's wife". Your son may stand with you and his bride, or you will be free to receive your guests and make introductions, ask some of your women relatives or intimate friends (two for each hour of the party) to preside at the tea table.

2. If her wedding dress isn't too formal and elaborate, if it's floor-length and of dinner-dress type, it would be permissible for her to wear it. . . and I'm sure the relatives and friends of your family, who because of distance were not able to go to the wedding, will be delighted to see the bride in her wedding dress.

Guest to Wear White Evening Gown to Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to a formal wedding next month, and I would like to know if it is proper for me to wear a white evening dress. Please let me know as soon as possible as I am planning to make my own dress.

T.

Yes, it is proper for you, as guest at a very formal evening wedding, to wear a white evening dress . . . but your dress should not be of bride-y material or design, to rival the bride's dress! However, if you are making a dress especially to wear to this wedding, my suggestion is that you make a dress of a color other than white, either of a pastel shade or in a shade of your most becoming color.

Fingernails, a Mechanism That Guards the Fingertips

Use an orange stick daily to push back cuticles

By HELEN FOLLETT

LOOK AT your fingernails and marvel. Note how perfectly they serve as guards to the fingertips, the bases set under the flesh, the point ends free. A perfect piece of mechanism. Day by day, the little overlapping scales push outward from the matrix.

It won't do to disturb the surrounding cuticle to any extent; that its why one must be careful when lifting it with the orange wood stick or when removing hangnails.

An open wound will invite infection, offer lodgings to bacteria. Pressure at the base of the nail will injure the matrix. The new nail may be ridged or spotted.

Soak in Hot Water

If you have been treating the cuticle carelessly and caused a wound, find that the flesh is sensitive and that pus is forming, soak the finger in water as hot as you can comfortably bear. Dissolve a teaspoonful of boric acid in a cup of boiling water, let the solution cool somewhat, dip in some gauze, apply as a compress.

By keeping the wound warm and moist it will not close and the pus will drain out. If this treatment doesn't clear up the trouble or if the surrounding flesh is red and inflamed, hie yourself to old family doc. Infections are not to be taken lightly.

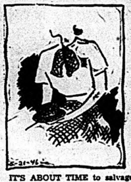
Orange Stick

By daily use of the orange wood stick after washing the hand, by lifting the cuticle away from the nail, hangnails can be avoided.

Patronize beauty shops that are fussy about sterilizing manicuring instruments. Note if the towels used are spotlessly clean.

Our pulchritude parlors usually conform to laws of health and sanitation, but sometime operators will be careless or neglectful. If you suspect that everything is not as it should be, get your prettifying done elsewhere. Take no chances of picking up infections of one kind or another or of having the cuticle around your talons clipped too close.

It's About Time



IT'S ABOUT TIME to salvage that checked, dotted or flowered dress with the badly worn top. Keep the skirt and make a new top of plain material the color of background of print. With material from discarded bodice, make a bow for new bodice and cover a hat frame.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Color Fear is a Handicap

Women who love smart distinguished clothes, who know how to dress well, never go wrong on selecting colors. They are not afraid to experiment, try out new combinations. Compare them with the dismal dressers who have fixed ideas from which they cannot escape. Maybe they fancy that dowdy, ugly clothes stand for respectability. Time was when short hair signified the speedy life. You couldn't be a real lady unless your locks were of pigtail length. Different days, different ways. And rouge no longer makes a girl look like sin unless she uses too much of it.

Few women consider the effect of color on the spirits. There's many an orphan frock hanging in the clothes closet because of the color is depressing. That would never happen if a woman would make an earnest endeavor to cultivate the dress sense, learn about colors, select those that excite her, make her light-hearted.

Red is stimulating and invigorating. A smart red hat on a white-haired woman makes a lovely picture. Nearly all men love red, for some strange reason. It is gay and youthful, the color of the rose. It puts sparkles in the eyes, enlivens the spirits, is one of the most compelling of the rainbow hues. Women who are cursed with color fear shun it as they would shun the plague.

Blue, the color of the heavens, makes for tranquillity. There is no color lovelier than French blue. It is flattering to blonde and brunette, the redhead and the lady with frosted tresses. It seems to create a quiet, serene state of mind. It is restful. Whether it has a slight, pinkish cast or a golden one, it is rich and lovely. And good old navy is reliable as your fondest friend. You can always depend upon it.

Black is depressing, should never be worn by elderly women because it gives accent to wrinkles, is too great a contrast to delicate skin and white hair. Only the young and beautiful should wear it. Age needs a little touch of gayety in dress. There are women of striking appearance to whom black is becoming. But unless a black frock has beautiful lines, a certain flair, it is usually a disappointment.

Yellow is sunny and spring-like, isn't worn as much as it should be. Pale green is one of the coolest colors one can select. Purple is so royal that nobody but a queen should wear it, and we doubt if it would up her beauty rating. Orange should be taken in small doses; a little goes a long way, though burnt orange, especially in velvet, is one of the richest colors one can find.

Bright colors in house furnishings make the home cheerful. The wise woman will have gaily-colored chintz covers on her chairs, will never select upholstery of dull, characterless taupe or dingy browns.

There's many an orphan frock hanging in the clothes closet.

Loot May Exceed $150,000 In Minden Robbery

Minden, Ont., May 22 — (CP) — The loot in the robbery of 30 safety deposit boxes from the Bank of Commerce Branch in this Haliburton county community some 150 miles from Toronto now is known to be more than $115,000 and may reach $150,000, police said Tuesday.

About $100,000 in non-negotiable bonds was recovered near Toronto Sunday, first disclosure of the robbery, largest of its kind in Ontario in years. Bank officials worked most of last night and again today in an effort to determine exactly how much was stolen by the thieves who broke into the small frame building Saturday night. They are having some difficulty as some of the box holders are uncertain of the exact amount of bonds, jewelry and stocks they had.

Just now this summer resort centre has no police protection. Lawrence Pritchard, who served as part-time constable at $100 a year for 18 years during which there were no robberies, resigned last March 1. As a member of the town council he is to have a voice shortly in the appointment of a full-time successor who will have a $1,500 salary.

Inspector Wilford J. Franks of the Provincial Police and Constable Arthur Kellog of Haliburton are in charge of the investigation. They have made plaster casts of footprints found at the rear of the building and are also checking fingerprints.

London Letter

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 22 (CP)—Death of four children under the wheels of a careening fire engine has given impetus to London's war against false alarm addicts, whose pranks cost the taxpayers thousands of pounds a year in addition to the risk to life.

The children were killed as they stood with their mothers outside a store in the Kentish town district and the speeding engine mounted the curb. Its speed was unnecessary, for the alarm proved to be false.

It was just one of 21 "malicious calls" received by London fire brigade that day, and one of more than 20,000 expected before the year is over. Year by year the total has mounted and last year, of 17,923 alarms in London, 48 per cent were false.

"Sometimes it's a child, sometimes a young man showing off, sometimes a drunk," said commander Alfred Wooder, 22 years a fireman.

"I remember once it was a man who said he did it because his girl had jilted him. We're a public service. We can hose a riot for the police, rescue a cat for an old lady, lift a bus off someone who has been run over, but we could not help that young man."

Persons convicted of turning in false alarms may be fined up to £100 ($455) or sentenced to three months in jail, but the culprits seldom are caught. If they are children, a scolding and an admonition to their parents is the usual procedure.

Hundreds of persons wrote letters to their newspapers recommending harsh action against offenders, and suggesting devices that would prevent false alarms. Already in some districts noisy gongs are being attached to fire alarm boxes, making it impossible for a prankster to turn in an alarm and slip away unnoticed.

Suggestions reaching the fire department included one for an alarm box equipped with a trap which would hold by the arm any person calling out the engines. Official objections to this included the prohibitive cost of making mechanical changes in London's widespread alarm system.

Drew Refused Application For CBC Broadcasts

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario said in a statement Tuesday the CBC recently refused an application from the Ontario government for three half-hour national broadcasts and charged "it is denying to provincial governments the right to use this power medium of communication and understanding at a time when that is essential to the future welfare of the nation."

The Premier's statement said an application was made May 6 on behalf of the Ontario government for three weekly half-hour broadcasts starting May 10, to be paid for at regular rates.

He added:-

"After an exchange of telephone calls, telegrams and letters, I have been informed by Mr. A. D. Dunton, the chairman of the board, that it is a basic and I believe well-understood principle that National networks in Canada may not be bought for broadcasts in which opinions are to be expressed.

"I had earlier been referred to the white paper of political, controversial broadcasting and in reply to my question as to how this application for time came within those regulations I was given the following interesting explanation by Mr. Dunton: In any speech on public matters there is bound to be at least something with which every member of the public will not agree.

"With that explanation, I am told that while the Ontario government will not be permitted to pay for the services requested I am offered one free half-hour network across Canada to present the position of the Ontario government.

"The Ontario government will accept no sop of this kind in exchange for its rights over a vitally important public system of communication The white paper on political and controversial broadcasting has no reference whatever to an application for time by a provincial government. The restrictions in that white paper on individual rights are inexcusable in any event but at least they must be imposed within the limits they impose on the corporation itself or any pretence of free speech over the radio is completely destroyed."

The Premier's statement did not mention what subject was to be discussed in the broadcasts but a government source said it was Ontario's position in the Dominion-Provincial conference.

15-Year Boy Appears on Charge In Rocket Death

Toronto, May 21 (CP)—A 15-year-old boy appeared in Juvenile Court today on a charge of criminal negligence, arising from the death May 12 of Walter Zenuk, 19, of injuries received when struck by a skyrocket said to have been fired by a group of boys.

The case was the first of its kind to be heard in the court. Judge Hawley S. Mott set bail at $1,000 and remanded the boy in custody while bail is arranged.

Four other boys appeared on charges of violating a Toronto by-law which forbids setting off fireworks without permission from the Chief of Police. These charges also arose from the Zenuk death. All five are to appear again next Monday afternoon when police said another will also appear on the by-law charge. It carries a fine up to $50.

The charges were laid after nine days of investigation by police who said they found that the rocket which was set off in street car tracks veered off, struck a window of a restaurant and then hit Zenuk's head. The stick penetrated five inches.

Because charges have been laid, police said an inquest is unlikely.

N.R.M.A. Men Not Allowed To Join Legion

By DOUG HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, May 22 — (CP) — Big, bustling and occasionally belligerent, the first post-war convention of the Canadian Legion rolls into the third of its four days today with the prospect of selecting a leader to take over from the ex-sergeant who led it through 6 years of war.

Square-set Alex Walker of Calgary, a non-commissioned officer in the First Great War, is expected to step down from the presidency of an organization that has swollen to a strength of 250,000 through a rapid influx of new veterans.

The man who emerges in his place will be the choice of more than 725 accredited delegates from commands in all provinces and numerous states of the United States. Intensive lobbying has been going on since delegates began to gather Saturday, an additional 300-500 of them men and women who came along without any vote in proceedings.

J. C. G. Herwig, general secretary, said yesterday the convention was double the size of those in the past.

Three thorny issues aroused hectic debate yesterday.

Delegates accepted the recommendations of its rehabilitation committee on housing, student-veterans' allowances and numerous other points. Rejecting a Quebec amendment, they approved a policy of urging unification of government department efforts in housing, a national housing plan for families living on $100 a month and a veterans housing act to provide urban homes.

The third major issue arose over a recommendation by the constitution committee that N. R. M. A. men who served in a theatre of war should be granted Legion membership. It was rejected after a turbulent debate which saw the sharpest diversity of opinion on any issue to date.

New Dairy Subsidy Denounced By Woodstock Producers

Woodstock, Ont., May 22 (CP) —Dissatisfaction with the new subsidy increases announced yesterday by Finance Minister Ilsley was expressed today by concentrated milk and cheese producers.

This looks like bait to head us off," said Harry Scott, president of the Ontario Concentrated Milk Producers I think it is rotten. We will go ahead with our plans for sending a delegation to Ottawa."

Edwin Taylor, secretary of the Woodstock local of the Concentrated Milk Producers through the government would have been wiser not to have made the offer of an eight cent increase.

Wes Osmond, president of the Oxford Cheese Producers, said the offer was an insult to the dairy farmer.

By unanimous vote last night members of Woodstock District Producers empowered their provincial executive to have full control of their milk to do whatever they wished in pressing demands for increased subsidies.

Threaten to Strike

Brockville—More than 1,200 milk producers from Eastern Ontario voted at a meeting last night to demand a $3 price per hundred pounds for milk by June 15, retroactive to May 1. They threatened to strike and, if necessary, to dump their milk to bring about what they termed a parity of prices received with costs of production.

Inquest Jury Probes Owen Sound Death

Owen Sound, May 22 — (CP)— Death of Charles Schlorff, who succumbed during an argument after a series of domestic troubles early on May 17, was due to a heart attack "accelerated by the happenings of the previous day and night," a coroner's jury decided yesterday. The 33-year-old Owen Sound resident died on a country road.

The jury heard Dr. C. Y. Hauch say that an autopsy revealed a heart condition in which "any excitement, exertion or undue stress, with or without a blow, might have caused this man's death at any time."

Dr. Hauch said there were no marks of violence on Schlorff's body.

Evidence at the inquest indicated several incidents May 16 which might have caused "undue stress."

Schlorff's son suffered minor injuries when hit by a car. Schlorff blamed his wife and ordered her to get out. She left, getting a neighbor to take her to the doctor's where she got her son. Schlorff, after drinking beer and crying about his son's accident, started out to hunt for his wife and son at 4 a.m. Sunday.

Finding them in a parked car with a neighbor, Elgin Jenks, he hit Jenks twice, once with his fist, once with a bottle according to Jenks and Mrs. Schlorff. Then he knocked his wife down.

Jenks told the inquest that he pushed Schlorff over and drove away. Schlorff died before his companions could get him to the hospital here.

Canada's Labor Horizon Darkens After Conference

Ottawa, May 22 —(CP)—Storm clouds on Canada's labor horizon darkened noticeably today with announcement by the Canadian Seamen's Union (T.L.C.) that it would call a strike June 3 and with an apparent clash between Labor Minister Mitchell and larger Canadian Congress of Labor unions.

The government-union clash came at a closed-door conference held at the suggestion of the union leaders to discuss the C.C.L. program for increased wages and a 40-hour week.

Silby Barrett, acting chairman of the C.C.L. wage committee, said bluntly the union leaders were "disappointed."

The union brief made it clear that formal notice had been served on the government officials of the possibility of strike action in such varied industries as steel, rubber, automobile, electrical, hard-rock mining, chemical and packinghouses unless there was action on the Congress demands for higher wages and a shorter work week.

Mr. Mitchell had declared "a measure of wage control" to be essential to price control and told the union men that if the declared intention of some of their leaders to ignore wage control regulations was carried out there would be "chaos" and their labor organizations would be "endangered."

The unions had listed rubber as the No. 1 problem coming up and said unless "suitable progress" was made in negotiations that industry would be tied up by a strike May 27.

Provisions Asked.

The unions asked provision for industry-wide bargaining; easing of the wage control order; establishment of boards which could deal with wages, labor relations and prices and assumption by the federal government of responsibility for re-establishing negotiations in strikes already underway.

The brief said acceptance of the demands being made by the unions in various industries would not have an inflationary tendency.

Mr. Mitchell, on the other hand, took the position that wages and prices were so closely related that general wage increases could not be granted without affecting prices. Adequate provision was made for granting justifiable wage increases through the labor boards which some labor leaders had said they proposed by-passing.

"Nothing can be accomplished by approaching settlement of disputes in an illegal manner," Mr. Mitchell said, "on the contrary, such a course leads to delay, confusion and chaos and puts your organizations in a position where neither the labor department nor the government can render assistance."

Joe Coleman Wins Fourth Game With One Loss Chalked Against Him

By The Associated Press

Herb Karpel, stocky southpaw of Newark Bears, is making a determined bid to regain a berth with New York Yankees.

Karpel knocked Syracuse Chiefs out of first place in the International League last night with a 3-1, five-hit, 10-inning victory, his third straight.

The 180-pound lefthander pitched hitless ball for the first five innings and had a 1-0 shutout going into the ninth. The junior Yanks won the contest when relief pitcher Len Bobeck passed Jack Phillips with the bases loaded and none out.

The defeat dropped the Chiefs to second place, a half-game behind Montreal Royals, whose contest with Rochester Red Wings was rained out.

Big Joe Coleman, property of Philadelphia Athletics, hurled Toronto Maple Leafs to a 6-3 triumph over Buffalo Bisons.

The Leafs piled up 3-1 lead in six innings and added three more runs in the eighth when Buffalo's Les Mueller walked two batters with the bases loaded and Hank Biasetti drove out a long fly. It was Coleman's fourth conquest of the year.

In the only other conflict, Baltimore Orioles defeated Jersey City Giants, 4-2. The defeat was Jersey City's eighth straight.

Baltimore scored all its runs in the fifth inning after shortstop Russ Wein allowed a double play ball to go through his legs.

We are going to change the thing around a bit this week and show you the semi-finalists at the wrestling show in the Hume Arena on Friday. The two gents above, after all, rate main billing, so the actual fact is that the faithful will be seeing two main bouts instead of one. In the second main bout, Brother Jonathan, terror of the Mormon wrestlers, but after all, a nice quiet gent, and lone exponent of the Mormon crusher, will tangle with the Nebraska Tornado, Pat Fraley, himself a gent who is wise, very wise in matdom. In the headline go, however, the Whippah Billy Watson will be here in person after taking on a North Hastings tan gained while fishing this week with Phil Lawson. He is ready to do or die for deah old Massah Tunney when he clinches with that he-man of the squared circle Lee Henning, 250 pounds of ring dynamite who has had many topnotchers taking out extra accident insurance. Lee is a tough hombre, who will furnish plenty of opposition to the dashing champion. It should be a nice little wrestlefest. In the preliminary, those two action buddies, Dean Detton and Leo Numa, who thrilled the faithful here a couple of weeks ago with an outstanding exhibition, will again try to settle their differences. Tickets are on sale at Cook's Tobacco Store. The doors open at 8 p.m.

Vancouver, May 22 — (CP) — Contrary folk, these skiers — or could it be they have the right idea about how to keep cool in the good ole summer time.

A few days ago Vancouver experienced its hottest May Day since 1939. The mercury was up around 80 and about 50,000 persons are estimated to have invaded the beaches, soaking up the sun and developing into superior objects for that low type of practical joker, the sunburn backslapper.

But while the bulk of sweltering humanity crowded into those narrow strips of sand along the ocean, the skiers — they never seem to lose enthusiasm — were up in them thar hills of North Vancouver.

The event was billed as the final race of the season — which season, they didn't say.

However, the stump jumpers, as they're called this time of the year, chalked up fast times in the Mount Seymour Ski Club's annual downhill race. Perfect skiing conditions were reported and Ray Crompton was the winner with a time of 1.51.

After it was over, sure enough, the strange sight to behold was a mixture of street car riders, some dressed in ski livery lugging a pair of barrel staves, and others carrying a soggy towel with a bathing suit wrapped up in it. Such is democracy.

While on the subject, a matter of high finance came up in Vancouver city council a couple of days back regarding the ambulance used for conveying injured skiers to hospital.

Since few trips take the ambulance into Vancouver proper, the operators wanted to forego the need for having to pass the city car testing bureau.

The mayor and aldermen said "nothing doing." The testing fee is only a dollar, they said, and surely the ambulance operators could meet this amount. "Why, it costs three cents to send this letter," commented the mayor.

Monarchs Given Civic Dinner At Winnipeg

(By The Canadian Press)

Winnipeg Monarchs, 1946 Canadian junior hockey champions, and five Canadian or North American speed skating champions from Winnipeg were honored last night at a civic dinner and presentation.

Each member of the Monarchs received a civic ring from the city, a medal from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and a wrist watch from the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association.

The five skating champions presented with rings or compacts were Frank Stack, senior Canadian titlist, Eileen Whalley, senior North American champion, Eileen Payne and Dennis Beeby, Canadian junior champion; and May Waite, Canadian juvenile champion.

There are 1,165 entries for the first post-war United States Open Golf tournament, to be played on the Canterbury course in Cleveland June 13-15. Forty-one players have been exempted from qualifying rounds, but some of golfdom's greats, including Jimmy Demaret and five of the seven Turnesa brothers, will take their practice cuts with the rank and file.

President Clark Griffith of Washington Senators thinks his team will win the American League pennant. Griffith says his club's balanced hitting and pitching strength will beat out the front-running Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees.

Stan Musial, pounding the ball at a .388 clip, has no illusions about his chances of finishing the season with a .400 batting average, a feat last accomplished in the National League in 1930 by Bill Terry of New York Giants. The St. Louis Cardinal outfielder thinks improved pitching will keep his average down.

An auxiliary rocket-powered racing car was tried out on the Indianapolis motor speedway yesterday and driver Duke Nalon of Beverly Hills, Calif., says the test was a success. Nalon says release of a four-second JATO rocket upped the car's speed from 100 miles an hour to 130 and possibly 140.

Saddest man in Miami Beach, Fla., yesterday was Tom Ferris, the publicist, as Tom Ferris, the horse, won his first race at Belmont Park, N.Y., paying $24.40 for $2. Ferris (the publicist) had previously bet as much as $500 on the horse, just because it was named after him, but got disgusted one race too soon.

Ron Northey, Phillies: Touched off three-run uprising in sixth inning with third homer of year as Phils dumped Cards, 4-3.

Joe Grace, Browns: Hammered Philadelphia pitching for four hits, including one double, in four times at bat, scoring twice as St. Louis shaded Philadelphia 4-3.

THIEVES RANSACK HOME

Toronto, May 21 — (CP) — Thieves who ransacked a home on Castle Knock Road here last night will probably not want to appear before Judge Ambrose Shea if they are subsequently caught. It was his home and they took a diamond engagement ring, given to his wife 30 years ago by the judge.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

LAZY DAY COLUMN

Dink Carroll, Montreal sports writer, digging up data in search of the answer to a question of a baseball fan, "How fast can Bob Feller throw a baseball?" brought some interesting facts to light anent the speed of the human and animal kingdoms.

• • •

"Our correspondent," writes Dink, "had the notion that Feller's fast ball travelled at a speed in excess of 100 miles per hour, and he was right. Feller himself never made the test. But Mark Koenig, the old Yankee infielder journeyed up to West Point some years ago, and cut loose with a few pitches in the advancement of science. An ingenious machine had been rigged up which clocked the speed of Koenig's pitch, thrown from the regulation pitching distance of 60 feet 6 inches, at two-fifths of a second."

• • •

• • •

Sports writers who witnessed the test pointed out that Koenig, an infielder, was not a hard thrower. They concluded that a fast ball pitcher like Lefty Grove or Dizzy Dean could fire the ball the regulation distance in one-third of a second, which works out to something like 127 miles per hour. Feller can certainly be bracketed with Grove and Dean.

• • •

THE AGE OF SPEED

There were other interesting items, considering this is the age of speed and all are interested in comparing performances. Can a man run faster than a horse? Can a horse outrun a whippet? Can a whippet beat a cheetah? Can a cheetah beat a falcon? Can a falcon beat an airplane?

• • •

Frenchy Bordagaray, the old Brooklyn outfielder who is now managing the Three Rivers club in the revived Can-Am League, once raced a horse on a beach in Florida. No one knows or cares how the race came out since it was strictly a publicity gag. But Jesse Owens, the great colored sprinter who cleaned up in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin, bested a horse once in a 100-yard race in Cuba.

• • •

There is no case on record of a man running against a whippet. But the best time ever made by man for 100 yards is 9.4 seconds, and at least one whippet has negotiated the same distance in a little over five seconds. Jerry Nason, the Boston sports writer who clocked the whippet, says a good whippet could beat Assault, Hoop, Jr., Count Fleet, Whirlaway or any other good horse over a stretch of 100 yards, but if the race were to go a quarter of a mile, the dog would trail the horse. Reason for this, he says, is that a dog is essentially a sprinter; a horse would be going at top speed by the time the dog was out of run.

• • •

The two fastest animals alive are supposed to be the Mongolian antelope and the cheetah. The latter has been timed at 103 feet per second, or 70 miles per hour, and he can pick up speed at the rate of 45 miles per hour in two seconds. Only a bullet shot from a gun can compare with a cheetah's acceleration.

• • •

Man, the Slow Poke

Coronet magazine printed an article several years ago in which the writer flatly declared that all ages of nature have been faster than man.

We're really slow pokes compared with a sailfish, for instance, which knifes through the water at a moderate 65 miles per hour. That's even faster than a destroyer, which zips through the waves at a speed of 40 miles per hour, and a destroyer is the fastest ship afloat if you except the torpedo boat. The sailfish's fastest time for short distances, incidentally is estimated at 80 miles per hour.

• • •

Only in the sky has man wrested the honors from nature, though the margin is not as great as you may think, not even in these days of jet propulsion planes. The famous peregrine falcon makes a power dive at 200 miles per hour—so fast that the bird shutters its eyes against the air-stream by closing transparent lids. A dive bomber doesn't zoom towards earth must faster than that.

But the fastest living creature in the air is the frigate bird which has been timed at 246 miles per hour—still a respectable speed for aircraft. This makes the frigate bird just about twice as fast as a hurricane, which checks in around 125 miles per hour. A typhoon, though, whips up winds of 350 miles per hour, which makes the hurricane seem like a baby's breath.

• • •

Miscellaneous Facts

Besides the top speeds of the animal kingdom, we are practically in shackles.

Our best swimmers cover about four miles per hour compared with the sailfish's 68 for the same distance. Our best sprinters run 100 yards in 9.4 which is fast enough to beat a horse over a similar distance but not nearly fast enough to beat a whippet. Our best milers are still striving for a four-minute mile, but Man o' War ran the same distance in a fraction of a second under one minute and 35 seconds.

• • •

Jess Owens and other top sprinters can travel a short distance at 25 miles per hour. But think of the quick speed of the cheetah, which can acquire a speed of 45 miles per hour within a couple of seconds.

• • •

More miscellaneous facts on the speed of man: Don Budge can hit a forehand drive with sufficient force to make it travel at the rate of 150 miles per hour; Jimmy Thomson, Sam Snead and other power-hitters can swat a golf ball off a tee so that it rips through the air at the rate of 190 miles per hour.

• • •

Personally our fastest speed comes with a good healthy sneeze...when we spray droplets at the rate of 120 miles per hour.

HENNING ON WHIPPER'S TRAIL

"So, he went fishin' did he," growled ferocious Lee Henning, referring to the dapper Whipper Billy Watson whose Empire title will be at stake here at the Hume Arena Friday night. "Well, I hope he has hauled some big ones out of the lake to get the exercise, because it won't be any small fish he'll be foolin' with on Friday," he went on. And M'Sieu Henning wasn't fooling He is one of those boys who have been around in wrestlin' circles and he knows pulenty about the game. He struts his 250 pounds about the ring satisfied that nothing short of a champion can dispose of him—and even that is in doubt in Mr. Henning's mind. However the dapper Whipper is taking no chances—and twill be interesting to see if he can dispose of the Henning threat. Brother Jonathan, the Beard, will be here with fiery Pat Fraley and Leo Numa, the crafty one will tangle with tenacious Dean Detton.

Tonight at six o'clock at the Fair Grounds, weather and grounds permitting, Point Anne and Stephens Adamson softball squads will pry the lid off the Belleville Softball Association official schedule. The two squads battled to a four-all tie the other night, and appear to be evenly matched so the curtain raiser tonight should give the first-nighter fans a tasty softball tidbit.

• • •

On Monday night all six teams of the league will go into action with Point Anne playing at home to the Army and Navy Flashes; Mountain View meeting Sixardee on the latter's diamond and Goodman's Juniors taking on Sacos at the Fair Grounds.

BURTON, NELSON HEAD FIELD IN GOODALL TOURNEY

Every Player in Contest Plays Each Opponent at Least Once

New York, May 22 — (CP) — Dick Burton and Byron Nelson—top British and American golf pros — will highlight the $10,000 Goodall round-robin golf championship at the Winged Foot Golf Club, Mamoroneck, N.Y., May 30.

The event is the second of the post-war era's big links events and follows the Masters' Tournament — which saw the comparatively unknown Herman Keiser come through with a victory.

Burton, British Open champion, and Nelson, professional Golfers' Association titlist, will be fighting it out in the final 18 of their 36-hole match. Keiser will also participate in the Goodall but he is overshadowed by the international stars.

Inaugurated in Cincinnati in 1938, where Sam Snead defeated Gene Sarazen in a play-off, the Goodall tournament was moved east to Fresh Meadow the following year and was a regular fixture until war forced its curtailment.

The event was moved to the Winged Foot course this year because Fresh Meadow had been cut into house lots.

In addition to Snead, other Goodall winners were Lighthorse Harry Cooper in 1939 and Ben Hogan in 1940. Hogan won the recent Fort Worth, Tex., open when he finished with a blazing 65 and is the U.S. Open favorite.

The Goodall round-robin is one of golfing's most unique tests. No player of the 15 top stars invited is ever eliminated and every player meets the other 14 competitors at least once. The scoring is on a basis of plus and minus points for holes won and lost.

The players are sent out in threesomes, playing two opponents simultaneously. It's a real helter-skelter form of competition and might easily be called the battle royal of the links.

Besides Jimmy Demaret, Herman Barrow, Bob Hamilton, Vic Ghezzi, Sam Byrd, the former Yankee ballplayer, Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Lloyd Mangrum, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, Jimmy Hines and Lawson Little.

J. Batchelor Wins Title In "Y" Athletics

Awards were presented at an after gym class session to the boys who won the various events in the classes, as well as to the all-round winners, for the athletic meet held in the Y gymnasium during the Easter vacation.

John Batchelor won the all round championship with a total of 137.51 points in ten events. Doug Soule finished second, Jack Doig third, Doug Parsons fourth, and George Bongard 5th.

The events were run off under the direction of Physical Director Ed Shortt with the assistance of Jim Airth, Tom Buchanan and Donald Dolan who acted as officials. The scoring was done according to the tables in general use throughout North America, the boys being divided into classes according to combined age, height and weight, the more advanced the boy's quotient being, the better mark he had to achieve to get the same point score.

Good Marks Made

Some good marks for boys of under 14 were made. 11 year old Doug Parsons jumping 6' 6¼" in the standing broad, and John Batchelor 7' 0¼", Bob Taylor 7' 1¾". John Batchelor cleared an even 4' in the running high jump. Doug Soule led the pack in the 60 yards with the fine time of 8 7/10 secs. with Parsons leading the younger group with 9 2/10 secs. Bob Taylor made the fastest time in the 100 with 14 secs. flat, good time for a 13 year old on a 50 yard indoor track. Soule had 14 1/10 and Parsons again led the younger boys with 14 9/10. Taylor turned in a nice 32 1/10 secs. for the 225.

The average of the 25 boys who took part was 7.996 points per event, an improvement of 1/3 of a point over the average of the same events at Christmas vacation..an evidence of the value of the constant work done with these boys at the Y in their general program of health education and physical development.

A special crest was presented to John Batchelor, with ribbons to all other winners, both, the first five, class champions and first, second, and third in each event in each of three groupings.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 993

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Some day some other nut will go me one better. He will tell us where to get a different set of brains. Just now we must be content to develop what we have up there.

Before you do any fancy card reading, learn the plain kind. Your best way is to lay out the cards of one suit in four hands. Lead the fourth best from a hand that has four or more of them.

Subtract the led card from 11. The answer tells you how many higher cards are in the other three hands. Don't lead away from an ace or a king. See what you discover.

Against a four spade contract, west leads the club four. When the north dummy spreads, from the east seat you see these clubs:

NORTH
♣ 10 7 5 3 2

WEST
EAST
♣ A J 8

Four from 11 leaves seven. There must be seven clubs higher than a four in north, east, south. Three of them are revealed in dummy. Three more are in your east hand. South has only one.

Partner does not lead away from a king or ace. You have the ace. So, the king is the card higher than a five held by south. The trey and deuce are in dummy. So, south must have the king all alone.

So, no matter what card dummy plays on that trick, you go up with the ace. You are confident that the south king will fall on it.

In a bridge game, you may fear that partner's lead of the four is not a fourth best. In that case, what else could it be? Only a highest of a short suit.

Trey and deuce are in dummy. If partner's four is not a fourth best, it must be a singleton. South will have K Q 9 6. His king will not drop on the ace you play to that trick.

Is that bad? No. You can confidently return one of your clubs at once. You know that your partner will trump the second round.

This is simply canned card sense.

Tecate, Lower California, May 22 — (AP) — You should know the pains to which motion picture companies go to put realism on the theatre screen.

For example, take that daddy of all screen titles, "The Short Happy Life of Francis Macomber," which Benedict Bogeaus is filming. Ernest Hemingway's story is laid in Nairobi, Africa, and experts found the nearest approximation to that area in this hapless valley of Lower California.

This penchant for realism is costing Bogeaus $25 every minute of the working day. The company may be here a month or more.

The cast and crew are put up at the Rosarito Beach Hotel, whose comforts include a native band of a limited repertoire, which can be heard in most of the rooms throughout the night. Rooms such as Joan Bennett, Gregory Peck and Robert Preston occupy are $50 a day.

The location is situteast

The location is situated 40 miles from the hotel, a two-hour trip over unimproved roads. The journey cannot be made in studio cars. A dozen local taxis and two buses are used, at a rental of $40 a day. These are constantly meeting with mishaps. When I went to the location, one of the buses was struck by a railroad handcar.

Travelling over a route which the tank corps would have condemned, we arrived at the shooting site. It was transformed into an African scene, complete with Hollywood - manufactured ant hills. There were ants galore here, but not the home-building kind. Also present were three tired lions, who looked docile enough to keep around the house.

More animated were the stars who appeared gay and happy.

Their tramping through the African jungle appeared extremely realistic here in the wilds of Baja California.

Earl Johnson, Battle of Bulge Veteran, Rates as Cronin's Relief Ace With Three Wins

Awarded Bronze Star for Bravery and Commissioned Lieutenant on Field

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Earl Johnson, a Battle of the Bulge veteran who naturally finds no terror in enemy baseball bats, rates as Joe Cronin's relief ace with three straight "fireman" decision for the soaring Boston Red Sox.

Every pennant club needs one dependable reliefer with ice-water in his veins who can step into the midst of a batting rally and quiet the opposition. Cronin appears to have that man in Johnson, native of Redmond, Wash., who was awarded the bronze star for bravery in action before he was commissioned a first lieutenant on the field of battle.

Detroit found out about Johnson yesterday when he came into save a game that Joe Dobson almost lost, hurling five hitless innings and driving home the winning runs of a 6-4 triumph. Two doubles by the 27-year-old bullpen star set the pace for Boston's 26th victory in 33 games. His second two-bagger in the eigthth scored the two runs that broke a 4-4 tie, sending Al Benton down to his fourth setback. In his last 12 innings on relief, Johnson has allowed only two hits.

The Sox' first place margin was increased to six full games when New York Yankees fell before Cleveland's Bobby Feller 7-2. Rapid Robert, facing the Yanks for the first time since his no-hitter, yielded only five blows and ran his strikeout total to 93 in 80 innings by fanning eight men. Feller retired the first 14 men in succession until Bill Dickey singled with two out in the fifth.

Weatherly Injured

Once again Floyd (Bill) Bevens, who seems to draw the Fellers and Newhousers as opponents, was nicked for a defeat, his third against two wins. The Yankees also lost the services of outfielder Roy Weatherly who injured his leg when he stumbled at second base in the eighth inning.

In the only other scheduled tilt in the American, Jack Kramer hurled St. Louis Browns into sole possession of fifth place on a 4-3 edge over Philadelphia. Joe Grace connected for four hits but Walt Judnich's two-run single in the sixth was the big blow of the night tilt. It was Kramer's third straight victory and a second loss for winless Bob Savage.

In the National League, the pesky Phillies knocked over St. Louis Cardinals, 4-3, dumping the Red Birds into first-place tie with Brooklyn Dodgers who were rained out of their game with Cincinnati after playing one inning.

Revenge was the motive for starter Al Jurisich, who was sold down the river to the Phils by St. Louis. Although he needed help from Andy Karl and Ken Raffensberger, Jurisich was credited with his third success to one setback. Rookie Fred Martin, who replaced Ted Wilks in the sixth, was charged with his first big league defeat.

Wet grounds forced postponement of the Pittsburgh-New York game. Chicago Cubs and Boston were not scheduled.

Two Main Bouts At Hume Arena

Two main bouts. That's the feature tonight at Hume Arena when promoter George Polmanter trots out the fourth boxing card of the current season. The two main 'efforts' will be over the five-round route and, from all reports, should be good "go's".

"Tony" Acerra, the local heavyweight sensation will tangle with Jack Kelley of Toronto's Diamond A. C. in one of the features while the Trenton hero, Bill Westfall will trade punches with Charlie Pyle of Montreal.

The Montrealer comes here with lots of experience and quite a reputation so "Willie, the left-hander" will have quite a task on his hands. If the Trenton lad takes the measure of the highly-touted Montrealer, the promoters will have to search far and wide for a suitable opponent for Trenton Bill. Westfall however, will cross that bridge when he comes to it.

Trenton holds the limelight on tonight's card as "Jiber" Ellis meets Toronto's "Ronnie" Nash in the semi-final.

Six other good bouts round out the card.

CHICKENS "FLEW THE COOP"

North Bay, May 20 (P)—Residents of the Callander Highway region south of North Bay are organizing to track down a bear which smashed its way into a hen coop, destroyed 19 out of 35 chickens and has been roaming the district, frightening women and leaving tremendous footprints in its wake. Many of the chickens "flew the coop" to escape.

LAWN BOWLING SEASON TO OPEN ON THE HOLIDAY

Weather permitting, activities will start at the local Lawn Bowling Club with the traditional May 24th games. Two afternoon games will be played, starting at 1.30 p.m. and all members of both the Ladies' and Men's Clubs are invited to be on hand.

For a two-week period, starting May 27, an evening program for novices is planned, to provide instruction to the considerable number of new members who will try the game this year. Each new player will be individually assigned to a senior bowler for this period before taking his place on the regular roster.

Following this novice program, regular Club activities will begin, with some changes evident this year, designed to offer much more organized bowling than usual. Club games will be in order on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, with the popular 'Jitneys' every Friday evening and most Wednesdays and Saturdays, both afternoon and evening. A new system of Team arrangement will eliminate the necessity of substitutions during the vacation season, and will provide individual ratings for all players, regardless of positions played.

With the recently remodelled clubhouse available, and the greens in splendid condition, members can look forward to banner season at their favorite sport.

Grady Hatton Got Big Break In the Army

Brooklyn, N.Y., May 22 (AP)—Grady Hatton, who jumped into the big leagues in his first season of organized baseball, says "I got my big break in baseball" in the army.

Grady had most of the scouts hounding him after he went with the Greensboro, N.C., army air base team to the Wichita, Kas., semi-pro tournament and banged out 12 hits for a .500 average.

Other clubs offered more, but Grady took a $25,000 bonus to sign with Cincinnati Reds because he liked the club and the "position."

"You play third," manager Bill McKechnie said to him on the third day of spring training down in Florida. Grady's been playing third ever since. He's hitting nearly .300, has four homers to his credit and has knocked in 19 runs.

AT THE BELLE — Ray Milland and Jane Wyman in a dramatic scene from the picturization of the Charles Jackson book, "The Lost Weekend," Paramount's four Academy-Award winning hit, closing at the Belle Theatre tonight.

AT THE CAPITOL—Wm. Haade, Bud Geary and Wild Bill Elliott in a scene from Republic's exciting, action packed film "Sheriff of Las Vegas," next at the Capitol Theatre. The added hit stars Leo Gorcey and the Bowery Boys, first of a new series. Matinee at Friday, 2.15 p.m.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, May 22. (AP)—During the last few days entries for the United States Open Golf championship were "coming in like Phillies' Pitchers", according to U.S.G.A. Secretary Joe Dey, and the amazing thing to Joe was that most of the names were familiar. . . Dey joined the Navy about the time the U.S.G.A. abandoned its tourneys so he was surprised to find the top names on the entry list were the same fellows who were tops in 1941. . . Whether there's a new crop of golfers coming along probably won't be seen until the amateur championship is played. . . A few, like Frank Stranahan and Cary Middlecoff, turned up during and after the war but it may turn out that tournament golf lost five years of development when there was no serious competition.

Today's Guest Star

Nixson Denton, Cincinnati Times-Star: "So far as Cincinnati is concerned, a reader points out, Grady Hatton has become Grade-A Hatton."

One Minute Sports Page

The word is going around that Washington and Jefferson College may turn up one of the great footballers in Van Towlers, a big fast freshman. He picked W. and J. instead of a bigger school because he is studying for the ministry. . . Bandleader Fred Waring, who now owns the Shawnee (Pa.) Country Club, has cooked up a new golf handicapping system based on giving distance instead of strokes

MOONHOLLOW

CHAPTER 6

She had locked it too, he found out later when he knocked. Then came that chill suggestion. "Go away!"

He sat in the darkness of his room, hot. He ripped off his necktie, doused his head with cold water; his temples beat numbly like wood beating on wood. He stared out the dark windows to the silvery world below him. A bird called sleepily. To the east, he heard the breakers on the sand calling, not "forever and ever," but a Come away."

He leaned over his typewriter, inserted a page, rapped at the keys—folded the note, stuck it in the mirror, pulled on his hat and coat and slipped silently into the night, hurried across the garden paths to Mike's quarters, roused the sleeping stable-hand and drove with him to the station.

When the Long Island train ground to a halt at Pennsylvania Station, New York, Track eleven, he was still gazing fixedly out the window— unblinking. A conductor tapped him on the shoulder. "We're at the station, sir."

Gordon rose slowly, wove his way out of the car. The conductor turned to a companion. "That fellow looks like he was knocked out and is walking around in his sleep."

He taxied to Ed Boden's London Arms apartment, and awoke that bald individual.

"Hell's bells," grumbled the heavy-set author's agent, blinking at Gordon. "A fine blasted hour to blow into town. On a tear with the boys? What are you so mad about?"

Boden led him into the tiled kitchen, placed a bottle of Scotch on the table, poured himself a hooker into a half-glass of water and said, "Get some of that fuel oil into you. You look like you need it."

• • •

At Moonhollow a silver finger of light touched Audrey's forehead. She whispered, undistinguishable words in her sleep .. turned and twisted, called a name and awoke at the sound of it. Her rich hair gleamed above her pink negligee as she walked slowly to the door of Gordon's suite.

She entered when she received no answer—saw the empty bed—turned on the light—saw the note—tore it open nervously, read it twice.

"Gordon is gone!" Audrey spoke loudly as though she were speaking to someone in the room. "I drove him away because of you. And I knew I would do it. Yes, I wanted him to go! Oh I did. I really did!"

Was it because some wisp of fog had come between her and the sun or was it because there is no cure for a heart wounded with the sword of separation? Audrey flung herself on Gordon's bed and wept as though her body was wracked with pain.

While Audrey was reading his note, Gordon was staring glumly at his fourth drink. Ed Boden in purple bathrobe was at the gas range. The zestful tang of food made Gordon turn to the amateur chef. He was glad for the soft scrambled eggs and healthful whole wheat toast they ate.

Ed Boden knew what had happened. He didn't tell Gordon — just leaned on his left elbow, and focussed his grey eyes on Gordon's. He probed with little questions here and there—seemingly unimportant. When they had finished their second glass of before-bed milk, Boden knew about Morley and his Colorado gold mine, and Cora Leroy.

"Gordon, my bucko," he said, "I think you need some work. It'll get your mind fresh. Bunk inside on the couch. I'll get you a blanket. Sleep on your troubles, and tomorrow we can find an angle."

Gordon slept late—less troubled than on previous nights. He felt better after a stinging shower and a shave, and joined Boden over morning coffee.

"Man, you slept like a City Hall watchman. I've been up two hours. I got a job for you. The 'Review' is building up on Americanism and patriotism— local color in towns and industries—what they feel about the next war—about Congress—about Pan Americanism. They'll take a few samples from you. There's a drawing account until they're sure. You can start this afternoon. There's a four o'clock plane."

"Okay," said Gordon, "Where do I go?"

Boden stared into Gordon's eyes and answered stiffly: "To Denver. But for anyone else who asks I'm going to say—London! And while you are studying Americanism find this guy Clifford Morley, tell me what he has that you haven't got. Let me have the low down on 'he-man, sex appeal; next time I meet a girl, I might get somewhere with her."

Gordon spilled his coffee — sat back, studied Boden's chubby face, a face that broke into a slow, wise smile. Gordon reached his hand across the checkered cloth, palm up. Boden placed his hand in Gordon's, winced at the pressure.

"You're on," said Gordon, "and I'll bring back the whole dope —I'd like to get a good look at the kind of man a girl like Audrey can't forget."

"Don't miss any of the angles, Gordon. Now c'mon, I'll lend you a bag and razor and my other necktie."

Gordon packed, stopping occasionally to enjoy a full smile all to himself.

He left at three—stood at the door getting a final goodbye from Boden. "I forgot to ask you, why are you sending me to Denver? Boden slipped a folded paper into his hand.

"Here's this week's 'Variety.' I looked up Denver for you. There's a name listed there — a name you mentioned in your sorrows last night." Gordon glanced at the list of entertainers and their cities for programs. Under Denver he saw "Gold Nugget Room, 2 weeks, dancer Cora Leroy."

"Thanks, Ed. That makes everything swell. All the missing characters."

Boden laughed. "Get going now. If you strike it rich and need help, call me—I'll run right out, and dig too!"

• • •

La Guardia Field grew vague below him as the airliner climbed the unsteady air, pointed her blunt silvery nose westward.

The steady drone of her motors was soothing, even hypnotic as Gordon lolled in his comfortable seat, thinking of Audrey and himself, doodling with a pencil on a magazine cover, drawing her face, printing underneath it "Girl Lost" and changing that to "Girl Sick at Heart, Dr. Gordon Blake to operate."

"Break up her infatuation for her first husband? I've got to know what he's like first. Yes, Boden sent me on the right assignment." His face hardened with the thought of the bitter irony of his own situation. "I must cure her of him or cure myself of her."

He hoped that his disappearance would not be accepted as a final break, hoped that her faith in him would stay strong; hoped that she in some mysterious fashion would know that he had set out to do something for love of her.

The plane nosed downward toward the white hillocks of mountains that were like mounds of ice cream. The plane circled, bumped gently, rolled to a stop.

Gordon was first down the portable steps. "Denver here I come. Morley and Leroy—watch out."

As he rolled along in a cab to the Denver House he was glad—glad to be there. No more groans and sighs. Here was a face-to-face job, with action. Gordon clenched his teeth.

"I wonder what the end will be," he thought to himself, "I wonder if what she thinks about him is true!"

The doorman of the Denver House interrupted that train of thought. Gordon registered as "Brad Lewis," and the bell-boy carried his bag to room 512, Gordon's headquarters for Denver.

Two hours later Gordon was shaking hands with Hob Cresswell, city editor of the Denver Telegram, and Cresswell's big voice was booming a welcome. Cresswell wore high-heeled dress boots, with a red star design and eagles on them. His long hair hung over his collar at the back; his mustached face was tanned.

After drinking beer in a tavern they went to Cresswell's office. Cresswell handed him a reporter's card—made out to Brad Lewis—Gordon's assumed name—and went to the files under "M". He pulled out the long green metal drawer and began thumbing through for the name Gordon had mentioned — Morley.

There were three Morleys—all permanent residents of Denver. The most recent Morley had made the newspapers when he had heaved a platter of ham and eggs at his wife.

Cresswell went to the mat and cut index, then gave up, and let Gordon look through the papier-mache forms from which photographs had been made. Copies of the photos, on newsprint, had been pasted to the back of each paper composition cut.

It was an odd assortment of men, women and children. Then Gordon quickly plucked one from the row. It was a yellowing clipping, showing a thin face with long beard, and a drooping mustache. Gordon brought the clipping to Cresswell and questioned him about it.

"Can't tell, Brad. That picture's more'n five-six years old. We don't have no story on it. Man looks like a local guy tuh me. Let's see; sure, see thet number down in the cornah—only identifyin' mark there is—C. I'll try round up some more news about him maybe when you come round again."

"I wish you would," said Gordon. "Those eyes look mighty familiar."

• • •

Gordon's next try was at the grey City and County building. He walked past the Voorhies Memorial, the Public Library and the Greek Theater and mounted the broad stone steps set in the semi-circular facade of the four-storey building.

But his trip was profitless. There were no court records of a Clifford Morley. Gordon's last try was Police Headquarters. He left that building disgruntled. He had come to a dead end. He had missed the trail. His sole hope now of discovering anything was through Cora Leroy.

But the manager of the showy "Gold Nugget Room" told him that Miss Leroy wouldn't arrive for another week, some mistake in the booking. Gordon returned to his hotel.

He wrote Boden that he had a week solid in which to work on Americanism, that he had miffed on Morley and Leroy so far, and that all he could do was write news copy until Leroy showed on the scene. And write he did.

It was his first trip to the mountain capital, and he thrilled to its mild and bracing air and the sight of the Snowy Range — Those majestic sentinels of the Colorado Rockies visible in the distance from Long's Peak on the north to Pike's Peak on the south. He explored the fifteen miles of land that separated the city from the foothills. He rode the 60 miles scenic route; broiled a venison steak over an open fire at Estes Park, cast his voice against the flat sheer face of Long's Peak.

He wrote of that. Then he wrote of increased production of the mines; coal, silver, lead, copper, zinc and gold and only by a chance did he find his clue. It was near the end of the week. He was deep in figures for the gold mining output for the last three years; he had been reading how the Double Jackpot Gold Mine had petered out several years ago and sunk into debt — and the name of the owner of the Double Jackpot was listed — Clifford Morley.

BACKACHE
The Plague of Outdoor Men

The outdoor man, whether he be farmer, truck driver, or railway operator, is often subject to backache. This may be the result of exposure to cold and dampness or the result of strain from the jolting and bumping of the vehicle he rides.

To many people, women as well as men, it would be great to be free of backache—one of the most common and annoying of ailments. And here is how you may be relieved of backache and other symptoms of poisons in the blood.

The treatment suggested is Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. By reason of their stimulating action on both the liver and kidneys, you have two-chances to one of getting relief from your backache by using Dr. Chase's Pills. The torpid liver is aroused to action, the kidneys are stimulated and consequently these organs help to purify the blood of the poisonous impurities which bring pains and aches and tired feelings.

Keep regular and keep well by using Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. 35cts. a box.

Sentenced Youth Dashes Out of Court, Caught

Welland, May 22 — (CP) — A few seconds after he had been sentenced to three years in Kingston penitentiary for armed robbery, Edward Winters, 20, of nearby Crowland, Monday made an unsuccessful bid for freedom. He dashed for the courtroom, eluded a guard and started down the courthouse stairway. He ran into the arms of Cpl. Harry Peel of the Ontario Provincial Police, who was coming up the sairs. Cpl. Peel grabbed Winters and held him until other officers came to take him to the cells.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reeding his paper and ma was reeding hers, saying, William, do you still feel the same way about going somewhere for a trip this summer?

If you mean do I still feel that it would be more expensive than it's werth, not only do I still feel that way, but the feeling is solidifying into a conviction, pop said, and ma said, I thought as much, but I just wanted to be sure before allowing myself the luxury of really injoying this article in the paper I mean it says here that it's impossible to get a reservation in a single summer resort for love or money, or at least for money, because every place you care to mention is booked to capacity, even though some of the hotels are asking as much as 30 dollers a day for a room, ma said.

Wowie, pop said. Oh, well, they probably give you a change of towels once in a while, he said, and ma said, It's pitifill. Imagine all those rich people with more money than they can bern, practically begging to be taken in for the summer. Well, I cant say I feel very sorry for them, although I wouldn't like to say I was gloating, she said.

It's a well ballanced werld, there are certain experiences of the rich that are injoyed only by the poor, pop said, and ma said, Do you know what I think I've got a good half a mind to do, William? I'm going to write to the most exclusive hotels at Lake Sundown and Magenta Beach, and I'm going to airily ask them to reserve us their best exposed sweet of rooms for their most crowded season. It'll be quite a thrill when they write back and refuse, she said.

The very idea makes me slitely nervis, pop said, and ma said, Well, I'm not sure that I'll do it, but I'm not sure that I wont.

Meening she probably will.

Eight Carloads Of P.E. Cattle Shipped to U.S.

American buyers still continue to show a keen interest in Quinte district milking herds with 8 cars of livestock having been shipped from Prince Edward county last week. One load of cattle from free-listed herds was shipped to Pennsylvania and two loads to New Jersey.

Practically all the young cattle have now been turned out to pasture, but are in a slightly thinner condition than normally at this time of year. Many milking herds are also on grass, but the milk flow continues to be below the average for this time of the year.

Spring grain and canning peas look very promising while last week's rain was welcomed for grass growth and setting of tomato plants.

The Pink spray has been applied to apple and cherry orchards in the earlier sections of the district.

Eastern Ontario Farmers Threaten Milk Strike

Brockville, Ont., May 22 (CP) —More than 2,000 farmers representing nearly 40,000 farmers in 15 Eastern Ontario counties from Peterborough to the Quebec border, last night voted to go on strike June 15 if by June 1 they have not been given government assurance that they will receive $3 a hundredweight for milk.

They said they wanted that price regardless of whether the milk was sent to cheese factories, creameries or concentrating plants.

By automobile, chartered bus and horse and buggy, farmers converged on this city in the heart of Eastern Ontario's rich dairy farmland. Chartered buses brought 85 farmers from Peterborough county and another 125 from Belleville. More than 100 farmers who had gathered for a protest meeting at Delta, 30 miles north of here, adjourned the meeting and came to the Brockville gathering.

Shouts of "insult" and boos greeted announcement that the federal government had passed a bill authorizing subsidies of 30 cents a hundredweight on milk for concentration and 20 cents for milk delivered to cheese factories.

Delegates agreed to circulate pledges by which farmers could indicate their support of the meeting's decision.

Premier Drew Cannot Buy Time on CBC

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)—A. Davidson Dunton, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the CBC, said last night in a statement, that a request by Premier Drew of Ontario to purchase periods for him to speak on a national network of the CBC could not be filled.

"Sale of national network facilities for such a purpose would be contrary to basic principles of Canadian radio, based on parliamentary decisions," said the statement. "One of those principles is that national radio facilities cannot be bought for broadcasts influencing opinions. They can only be used free under policies providing for fair representation of different points of view."

Mr. Dunton's statement was issued in reply to one in which the Ontario Premier said the CBC had refused an application from the Ontario government for three half-hour national broadcasts. The Premier's statement said an application was made May 6 for the broadcasts, to be paid for at regular rates.

Mr. Dunton's statement added: "Premier Drew has not been denied the use of the national radio system. He has been offered free time on a national network to present the position of the Ontario government to people all across Canada. It has also been pointed out to Premier Drew that as on previous occasions an Ontario network would be provided for him free to report to the people of his province....

"It is the duty of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to maintain true freedom of speech on the air. It must do its best to assure that national radio provides for the free, full and fair communication and discussion of public matters. It must oppose any attempt through money or position to obtain special privilege on a national possession of the Canadian public. Under its mandate from parliament it must resist any such attempts from whatever quarter they come.

U.S. Officer Identifies SS Trooper as Starter Of Malmedy Massacre

Dachau, Germany, May 22 — (AP) — Lieut. Virgil P. Lary of Kentucky pointed at a Nazi S. S. trooper yesterday and accused him of starting the Malmedy massacre of 71 unarmed American prisoners of war by wantonly firing at them with his pistol.

Lieut. Lary, testifying in the trial of 74 S. S. veterans in the Dachau war crimes court, was one of six Americans who survived the butchery at the Belgian town of Malmedy during the winter battles of the Ardennes Bulge 17 months ago. That was Germany's last offensive.

Lieut. Lary climaxed his dramatic story by identifying Georg Fleps, 23, as the killer.

The prosecution charged that the Germans slaughtered nearly 800 American prisoners of war during the Ardennes offensive, allowing the first Panzer regiment to hunt human beings for sport and issued "no-prisoner" orders.

Mr. McTrowell knows his onions!

(A SIMPLE TALE TO SHOW HOW BANK CREDIT WORKS)

THAT first green shoot in the spring is a Big Event in McTrowell's life because he makes his living growing vegetables. And the earlier he gets them to market the higher the price he'll receive.

So in early spring you'll see him hard at it, getting his seeds in. But all the time his onions and other crops are sprouting, no money is coming in . . . and plenty is going out. In the meantime he needs ready cash for fertilizer, fuel, cold frames and wages for the hired help.

Mr. McTrowell knows the answer to that one too. He borrows the money from the Royal Bank. He has learned that bank credit is a useful "tool" in his business : : : just as much as a spade or hoe. He could hardly operate without it.

Chinese Nationals Retake Changchun From Communists

Resistance Soon Overcome After Sporadic Fighting

Nanking, May 23 — (AP)—The government announced that National troops formally recaptured Changchun at 11 a.m. today after having engaged "Communist remnants remaining in the city in sporadic fighting."

"The resistance soon was overcome," said the communique, from the headquarters of Gen. Tu Li-Ming, government commander for Northeast China (Manchuria).

It reported that advance elements of Gen. Cheng Tung-Kuo's new First Army entered Changchun, capital of Manchuria, at 7 a.m.

Earlier government dispatches said Communists were seen withdrawing from Changchun yesterday, presumably headed for Yungki (Kirin) 60 miles to the east.

In contrast to the mild skirmishing which preceded Cheng's entry into Changchun today, the Communists were forced to wage a stubborn, four-day battle to seize the city in mid-April from a far inferior government force, chiefly ill-equipped volunteers.

Although Gen. Tu on Tuesday had appealed to the Communists, through Gen. Marshall's truce commission at Nanking, to evacuate Chungchun to prevent further destruction of the city, there was no immediate indication why the Communists had left.

Easily Recaptured

Previously, the Communists had reported they were prepared to defend both Kungchuling, 35 miles to the south, and Changchun. But government forces easily took both places — Kungchuling fell Tuesday — after having overcome Communist forces at Szepingkai, 70 miles south of Changchun, in a 32-day battle.

Gen. Tu's communique today reported that despite the fighting in the city, the people of Changchun lined the streets to welcome Gen. Cheng's troops.

It further reported that an order of Gen. Lin Piao, commander of the Communists' northeast democratic Union Army, found on captured Red soldiers, demanded that the Reds hold both Kuochitatien, 20 miles north of Szepingkai, and Kungchuling at any cost. The order said it was vital that those cities be held to prevent government troops from reaching Changchun.

Premier Yoshida Takes Office

Tokyo, May 23 —(AP)— Emperor Hirohito today invested Japan's third post-war cabinet, and Premier Shigeru Yoshida pleaded for co-operation between the Japanese government and people "to save the nation by our own united efforts."

Yoshida said the new government is determined to dispose of a variety of critical problems facing the nation and "will boldly proceed with the execution of policies which are already thorough-going in character and scope."

The task may not proceed smoothly, the Premier acknowledged in a statement and explained "unfortunately, so far I have not been able to obtain positive support of other parties." Left Wing factions stubbornly have opposed both Yoshida and his cabinet appointees.

Yoshida said the "multitude of problems" facing Japan include revitalization of industry, unemployment and adjustment of economic and industrial affairs.

Earl Wager's Body Recovered From Moira River

Believed to have drowned in the Moira River near Corbyville some time Tuesday evening, the body of Earl Wager, age 29, Trent Road, was recovered Wednesday afternoon approximately one half mile below the pump house at Corbyville.

Wager, a night watchman at the Canadian Industrial Alcohol, is believed to have been fishing near the pump house and in some manner fell into the swift current. Some importance is attached to a fishing line which was caught in a high tension wire near the point where Wager is believed to have fallen into the water. The body was recovered by Jack Moon, Frank Goodfellow and Lyle Skinner, all employees at Corbyville.

The preliminary inquest was held at the Belleville General Hospital before Coroner Dr. J. Russell Scott with Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson acting for the Crown. The inquest was adjourned until Tuesday evening, May 28.

A veteran of the last Great War, Wager had been employed at Corbyville only since last November. While overseas he married an English girl who flew to Canada to be with her husband.

Imperial Hotel Again Functions

Tokyo, May 23 —(AP)— One year ago today B-29's made one of the war's great incendiary raids on Tokyo.

One string of bombs landed squarely on the famous Imperial Hotel, crashing into its great banquet hall and 150-room south wing.

Today, as he watched reconstruction, manager T. Inumaru observed with a fatalistic cheerfulness "everything burned, except the basement" in the central section and south wing.

Meantime, the Imperial again is headquarters for "Vips" (very important persons) visiting Tokyo. And the Vips, as in the past, are more impressed with the elegance of the hostelry than the Imperial is with them.

Registration cards carry this occidental notation:

"Guests without luggage, please pay in advance."

Homestead Birthplace of Dionne Quintuplets May Become Museum

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Callander, Ont., May 23 (CP)—Repainted and reshingled, the humble homestead in which the Dionne quintuplets were born almost 12 years ago, may soon be established as a museum.

Oliva Dionne who will help his five famous daughters celebrate their 12th birthday May 28, relaxed in an expensively upholstered chair in his present mansion-like home across the road as he told me of plans which may open the homestead for sight-seers.

"There's practically everything there just the same as the day the girls were born," said Oliva, who looks after the interests of his daughters since the estate had dispensed with a full-time manager.

"Just how it might operate I don't know yet but tourists might like to see the simple wooden bed in which Elzire gave birth to the quints," said Oliva. "Then there's all their original clothes and tiny playthings—even the incubator which kept them alive when few people had hope."

Once a thriving enterprise down the road from the homestead Oliva's souvenir stand at which he once autographed pictures has been idle during war

MAZERALL GUILTY ON SPY CHARGE, SENTENCE MAY 31

Chief Justice McRuer Rules Evidence Given Before Commission Admissible in Trial

Ottawa, May 23 (CP) — The fourth of 12 espionage cases to come before Ottawa courts was all but settled today with Edward Mazerall, Research Council engineer, convicted by an Ontario Supreme Court jury of conspiracy in a Soviet espionage ring. Chief Justice J. C. McRuer deferred his sentence until May 31.

The jury's decision came yesterday after 3 1-4 hours of deliberation and marked conclusion of the first Supreme Court case in the espionage investigation.

Interest in the case, which began May 13, had centred particularly on whether or not evidence Mazerall gave before the Royal Commission should be admitted before the jury. After hearing argument on this point while the jury was excluded, Chief Justice McRuer ruled in favor of admission, and his ruling was expected to set a precedent for remaining cases.

Mazerall was the third person to be convicted in Ottawa. Previously, Mrs. Emma Wolkin, cipher clerk in the External Affairs Department, was sentenced to 2 1-2 years and Miss Kathleen Willsher, of the United Kingdom High Commissioner's office, to three years. Dr. David Shugar, former naval officer employed in the Pensions Department, was acquitted.

Three others with whom Mazerall was convicted of conspiring Prof. Israel Halperin, Durnford Smith and Gordon Lunan—have elected speedy trial. Hearing for Smith has been set for June 12 and for Halperin June 17.

Moscow Radio Claim Denied By London Source

London, May 23 (CP)—Moscow radio said today the Iranian minister of posts and telegraph has confirmed reports that the British have not yet evacuated a wartime radio station near the Iranian port of Bushire on the Persian Gulf.

The broadcast said the minister had informed the Iranian newspaper Rasbar that negotiations were under way with the British with respect to the station.

Moscow quoted Rasbar as saying the British were violating the three-power treaty for evacuation of Tehran and that the matter should be referred to the United Nations Security Council.

An authoritative source in London, commenting on the Moscow broadcast, declared that there are no British military personnel at Bushire "or anywhere else in Iran" and added that the Bushire radio station was not being operated as a military installaton.

It was the second time in recent days that the Moscow radio had quoted the Iranian press as protesting against Britain's alleged failure to turn the station over to the Iranian government.

The Russian broadcast also quoted Rasbar as re-emphasizing the Iranian claim to Bahrein Island in the Persian Gulf, which is under British protection and demanding that telegraph tariffs between Bahrien and Bushire be returned to pre-war domestic rates.

The paper was quoted as saying that during the war the British had set these tariffs at differing international tolls.

Thousands in Toronto Greet Governor-General On First Visit to City

Toronto, May 23 —(CP)— Past flag-flying downtown office buildings and thousands of cheering persons lining the route, Canada's Governor-General and his Viscountess drove to city hall square for a civic reception today, immediately after alighting from the vice-regal train at the Union Station near the waterfront. It was their first visit to this city and they will remain until Sunday.

Viscount Alexander and his party arrived here shortly after 11 a.m. after an overnight trip from Montreal. The party was accompanied by a military escort and mounted police to the city hall where he inspected a guard of honor, placed a wreath on the cenotaph honoring the dead of two wars, and met city council members in their chambers.

It was an impressive ceremony as Viscount Alexander, visiting a city which sent thousands of men to fight under his command, received greetings of Mayor Robert Saunders under bright, warm skies on the city hall steps, then inspected a guard of honor. Traffic in the vicinity was blocked by the tumultous thousands.

Later Their Excellencies were guests-of-honor at a luncheon tendered by the board of governors of the University of Toronto.

This afternoon, in a special convocation at Convocation Hall at the university, the Viscount will receive the honorary Degree of Laws.

Tonight, the Governor-General will meet officers of the Governor-General's Horse Guards at their armories and will be guest of Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews of Ontario and Mrs. Matthews.

Tomorrow, on the Queen Victoria holiday celebrated in Canada but not in Britain, the Viscount will preside at an investiture at which some 185 members of the armed forces will receive their decorations from his hands.

A highlight of the visit will come Saturday when Viscount and Viscountess Alexander will occupy the royal box at Woodbine race track for the 87th renewal of the King's Plate, with the King's 50 guineas to be awarded the winner.

Before leaving for Ottawa late Sunday, the vice-regal party will attend services at St. James Cathedral where the Viscount will read the lesson.

ART MacDONALD, 15, OF TRENTON DROWNS IN BAY

Playing With Chum on Improvised Raft, Companion is Rescued

Trenton, (Special) — Youthful victim of a tragic drowning fatality, the body of 15-year-old Arthur MacDonald, son of Mrs. E. A. MacDonald, 179 Victoria Avenue, was recovered from that part of the bay 200 yards offshore from the Trenton Cooperage plant here early Wednesday evening.

Young MacDonald had drowned about two hours earlier, after he had jumped from an improvised raft with a chum, Billy Long also of this town. Long was rescued from his watery predicament, but MacDonald failed to come to the surface.

The boys had climbed aboard the raft and were last seen drifting on the bay around four o'clock. Shortly afterwards James Moon, Trenton Cooperage foreman, heard shrill cries for help, and saw the boys struggling in the water about 200 yards from shore.

Moon raced to a boat and desperately rowed to the scene of the accident. He managed to reach Long in time, and hauled him to safety. There was no sign of the MacDonald boy, and after a futile search, Moon turned to shore.

He turned in an alarm to the police and a number of town residents headed by the Rev. Father Carley assisted in the search for the missing youth. Dragging operations were brought into use and the body was finally located by Alex. Frost, in six feet of water at 6.45 in the evening.

The body was rushed to the Trenton Air Station Hospital where artificial respiration methods administered by Flight Lieutenant Les Truman, failed to resuscitate the youth. Later Dr. E. A. McQuade pronounced MacDonald dead.

The father of the dead boy, the late E. A. MacDonald, a prominent hardware merchant here, died about seven months ago.

CABINET TO DEAL WITH SUBSIDIES

Ottawa, May 23 (CP) — The cabinet, rather than any single department, would deal with milk subsidy questions, Finance Minister Ilsley said yesterday in commenting on the strike decision last night by eastern Ontario milk farmers. At a meeting in Brockville, delegates representing 40,000 farmers decided to strike June 15, if government assurance was not given by June 1 that the subsidy would be raised to $3 a hundredweight for milk.

Children Wheeled Babies Away

London, May 23 (Reuters) — An eight-hour kidnap scare in which search was made for two babies who disappeared simultaneously from their West London homes yesterday ended last night when a London transport official discovered the children at a tube station three miles from where they lived. The babies had been wheeled off in their prams by a nine-year-old girl and her seven-year-old brother.

POLICE PROBING BRUTAL SLAYING OF AGED WIDOW

Mrs. Ella Hannigan, Operator of Service Station, Either Smothered or Strangled

Fruitland, Ont., May 23.—(CP)—Strangled or smothered to death in what police said looked like a meaningless killing, the body of 70-year-old Mrs. Ella Hannigan, a widow, was found yesterday afternoon in the little service station and roadside stand she had operated alone on the edge of the busy highway ten miles from Hamilton.

While traffic roared along the main artery within 50 feet of the little dwelling, someone killed the well-respected and well-liked woman between 11 a.m., and 3 p.m., when the body was discovered by her son-in-law, Frank Stewart, who farms nearby. Stewart was alarmed when his young son, who had been sent to the service station, told him Mrs. Hannigan was not in sight and the door was locked.

Stewart found the front door of the store and the door to the living quarters locked but the back door was open. He entered and found Mrs. Hannigan's body stretched on the floor of her bedroom. A piece of cloth was knotted tightly around her throat and her hands were bound. The body was covered with bureau drawers and their contents strewn around in disorder after a hurried search.

The woman apparently had died before the slayer—or slayers—ransacked the place in a search for money. But money was left in a little cigar box under the counter and there was some money in other parts of the building.

Altogether Graham collected about $900 from women in Hamilton, Preston, Woodstock and Chatham, Detective George Wright said this morning.

Among the stronger industrial groups were the foods, papers, steels and utilities.

Conservatives Call For Lifting of Price Ceilings On All Agricultural Products

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 23 — (CP)—Retention of price controls was urged in the Commons yesterday by C.C.F. speakers while a Progressive Conservative called for the lifting of ceilings on agricultural products in an effort to stimulate farm production.

The suggestions were made during continued debate on Progressive Conservative and C.C.F. motions of want-of-confidence in the government as a result of its handling of price stabilization.

C.C.F. speakers were William Bryce (CCF-Selkirk) and Frank Zaplitny (CCF — Dauphin) while the Progressive Conservative was John Diefenbaker (PC — Lake Centre). The only other speaker, Norman Jaques (SC — Wetaskiwin), said the government should 'finance' consumption rather than production.

Shortly after opening the House voted 95-79 against a motion by Alan Cockeram (PC — York South) for production of a copy of the report of the court of inquiry held by Lt.-Gen. Price Montague into administration of the Canadian army in Holland.

The vote was called after Hughes Lapointe (L — Lotbiniere), parliamentary assistant to Defence Minister Abbott, opposed the motion on the ground the report was a "privileged document."

Acting Prime Minister Ilsley announced the House will sit Friday despite the Victoria Day holiday.

Second Reading Given

In the Senate, second reading was given the Canadian citizenship bill and debate was resumed on the "Canada Day" bill, with Senator J. H. Lacasse (L-Ontario) supporting the measure and Senator Arthur Marcotte (PC-Saskatchewan) opposing it.

In the Commons price control debate, Mr. Diefenbaker said the Progressive Conservative Party advocated the removal of price ceilings on farm products as a means of providing the incentive necessary to encourage increased food production.

Six Ottawans Injured in Crash

Ottawa, May 23 —(CP)— Six Ottawans were injured, two seriously, when an automobile crammed with 10 passengers crashed head-on into a street car on downtown Wellington Street last night.

The automobile was driven backwards 25 feet by the impact and completely wrecked. None of the passengers of the street car was hurt.

Injured were Mrs. Iris Wallace, 30, with serious eye and head injuries; Lucien Robillard, 17, severe neck lacerations and chest injuries; Mrs. Frances McSwan, leg lacerations and severe shock; Orland McEwan, cuts and shock; Stuart Smith of Wrightville, Que., former hockey player with Ottawa Senators of the Quebec senior hockey league, jaw and nose fractures, and Olive Rutherford, head lacerations.

All were in hospital today. Four others, James Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Early Dougherty and Arthur Duffy, all of Ottawa escaped with minor injuries and were allowed to return home after treatment.

War Cabinet Favored Intervention Late in '41 if Japs Struck S. Asia

—Stimson

Washington, May 23 — (AP)—The Congressional Pearl Harbor investigation ended today with a statement by Henry Stimson, former Secretary of War, that President Roosevelt "was undoubtedly considering" an attack on Japanese forces threatening South Asia late in 1941.

But to his recollection, Mr. Stimson advised the Senate-House of Representatives inquiry committee in written responses to a series of questions submitted by Senator Homer Ferguson (Rep.-Mich.), the late president did not formally announce any such decision to top military advisers. Nor would be have acted without the consent of Congress, the former cabinet member added.

Mr. Stimson's answers went into the committee's record along with replies by Cordell Hull, former Secretary of State, to 169 additional questions, mostly about reputed agreements with the British for parallel action before the Dec. 7, 1941, attack. Mr. Hull denied knowledge of any such agreements.

Also included in the record, now closed to further evidence, was a copy of the memoirs of Prince Konoye, Japanese premier whose cabinet fell October, 1941.

Three Gunmen Take $1,000 From Carlisle, Ont., Bank

Open Monday and Thursday To Accommodate Residents

Carlisle, Ont., May 23—(CP)—Three roughly-dressed men, each carrying a revolver, held up the Bank of Toronto branch in this Wentworth County village shortly before noon today and escaped with an estimated $1,000 in cash.

There were no customers in the bank at the time and the two bank employees said the bandits warned them not to spread an alarm or "you'll be shot." The bandits then fled in an old model automobile.

The employees were accountant J. M. Dick and cashier Theresa Hunt. Dick told reporters little more than the fact the three entered the bank together and demanded that the money be handed over.

Provincial Police said the robbery apparently had been planned in detail. The branch is open only Monday and Thursday of each week to accomodate district residents of this farming community.

Police said they believed the gunmen headed towards Hamilton or Toronto and warned that they might be using a stolen automobile. A wide search is being instituted.

Children Capture Bandit

Montreal, May 23 — (CP) — School children on holiday today were responsible for the capture of a 60-year-old alleged gunman shortly after he reportedly held up an east-end St. Catherine St. branch of the Banque Canadienne Nationale and snatched $1,800 in cash.

Police said the money was found on the man and that he carried a gun.

Roman Catholic school children were given a holiday today in observance of the 100th anniversary of the Montreal Catholic School Commission and a number of them, hearing a commotion in the bank, chased the alleged hold-up man for 10 or 12 city blocks, police added.

At that point, they said, officers in a cruising police car observed the chase and picked up the man.

Six Babies Die Following Trip On Brideships

New York, May 23.—(AP)—The death toll of babies stricken ill aboard American brideships mounted to six today when a five-month-old girl, in the United States only four days, died in Pittsburgh.

The child, Vivian Smith, arrived here with her mother, Mrs. Howard Smith on the S. S. Brazil last Sunday.

The death, which physicians diagnosed temporarily as acute diarrhoea and malnutrition, was the first reported among the Brazil's passengers.

Five infants who travelled on the brideship Zebulon Vance have died from a mysterious ailment which struck them as they crossed the Atlantic.

A federal investigation was begun after mothers complained of overcrowding and unsanitary conditions aboard the vessel.

The ship docked here Monday after a 13-day voyage from Le Havre. Four deaths occurred in hospital — where 15 other babies originally were taken — and one at Paris, Ill. Several ailing infants since have been transferred to other hospitals or their homes for private treatment.

Latest reported death was that of Robert Ball, nine-week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ball, who died Tuesday night at Paris of what the attending physician diagnosed as "malnutrition developing into pneumonia."

The child's mother said he had refused a food formula prescribed shortly before sailing and took no nourishment after the ship left Le Havre May 7.

One of the soldiers' wives, Mrs. John Aliberti, formerly of Keerbergen, Belgium, said cabins aboard the Vance were so crowded that "in the cabin in which I came over there were 18 women and 10 babies."

The federal investigation was launched by Dr. Roy E. Bodet, chief quarantine officer for the New York port of embarkation.

While the port said it would await the outcome of autopsies before committing itself on the cause of deaths, Dr. Israel Weinstein, acting New York City health commissioner, said the outbreak resembled "summer diarrhoea."

Quints Entertain Archbishop Vachon

Corbeil, May 23 —(CP)— Archbishop Alexandre Vachon of Ottawa, one of the oldest friends of the Dionne family, was entertained by the Quintuplets at their home Sunday.

After dinner with the family, the Quintuplets and their sisters and brothers entertained him with a program of songs and playlets, at the conclusion of which the Archbishop joined with them in singing "O Canada."

Pauline, the Quints' 13-year-old sister, gave an informal speech of welcome and presented the Archbishop with a bouquet of flowers.

He conducted a mass Monday in their private chapel before leaving for Hearst, Ont.

Possible Paralysis Of U.S. Railroads Hinges on Reply

Washington, May 23 (AP)—A possible paralysis of United States railroads before nightfall hinged today on the reply trainmen and engineers give President Truman on a compromise wage proposal.

Leaders of the brotherhoods said the 18 1-2-cent-an-hour increase suggested by Mr. Truman in an attempt to stave off the strike set for 5 p.m. E.D.T. was "unfavorable" because it would rule out any changes in present working agreements.

They decline to say immediately what their final decision would be.

Meanwhile the government, already running the railroads under a White House seizure order, braced itself to make the best of things if the strike materializes after the five-day truce arranged by Mr. Truman last Saturday.

The office of defence transportation had plans already drawn to mobilize other forms of transportation—air, water and highway—to insure movement of essential products, principally food. But O.D.T. said it intended to hold back its orders until the strike appeared inevitable.

Brotherhoods' Attitude

The two brotherhoods made it plain that their strike order issued last April 29—well before the seizure—still stands for the 250,000 trainmen and engineers.

A. F. Whitney head of the trainmen, described the President's compromise offer as "less favorable than the recommendation of the fact-finding board" previously rejected by the two brotherhoods. This provided for a 16-cent-an-hour increase but with some changes in working rules.

Chinese Nationals Retake Changchun From Communists

Resistance Soon Overcome After Sporadic Fighting

Nanking, May 23 — (AP)—The government announced that National troops formally recaptured Changchun at 11 a.m. today after having engaged "Communist remnants remaining in the city in sporadic fighting."

"The resistance soon was overcome," said the communique, from the headquarters of Gen. Tu Li-Ming, government commander for Northeast China (Manchuria).

It reported that advance elements of Gen. Cheng Tung-Kuo's new First Army entered Changchun, capital of Manchuria, at 7 a.m.

Earlier government dispatches said Communists were seen withdrawing from Changchun yesterday, presumably headed for Yungki (Kirin) 60 miles to the east.

In contrast to the mild skirmishing which preceded Cheng's entry into Changchun today, the Communists were forced to wage a stubborn, four-day battle to seize the city in mid-April from a far inferior government force, chiefly ill-equipped volunteers.

Although Gen. Tu on Tuesday had appealed to the Communists, through Gen. Marshall's truce commission at Nanking, to evacuate Chungchun to prevent further destruction of the city, there was no immediate indication why the Communists had left.

Easily Recaptured

Previously, the Communists had reported they were prepared to defend both Kungchuling, 35 miles to the south, and Changchun. But government forces easily took both places — Kungchuling fell Tuesday — after having overcome Communist forces at Szepingkai, 70 miles south of Changchun, in a 32-day battle.

Gen. Tu's communique today reported that despite the fighting in the city, the people of Changchun lined the streets to welcome Gen. Cheng's troops.

It further reported that an order of Gen. Lin Piao, commander of the Communists' northeast democratic Union Army, found on captured Red soldiers, demanded that the Reds hold both Knochiatien, 20 miles north of Szepingkai, and Kungchuling at any cost. The order said it was vital that those cities be held to prevent government troops from reaching Changchun.

Earl Wager's Body Recovered From Moira River

Believed to have drowned in the Moira River near Corbyville some time Tuesday evening, the body of Earl Wager, age 29, Trent Road, was recovered Wednesday afternoon approximately one half mile below the pump house at Corbyville.

Wager, a night watchman at the Canadian Industrial Alcohol, is believed to have been fishing near the pump house and in some manner fell into the swift current. Some importance is attached to a fishing line which was caught in a high tension wire near the point where Wager is believed to have fallen into the water. The body was recovered by Jack Moon, Frank Goodfellow and Lyle Skinner, all employees at Corbyville.

The preliminary inquest was held at the Belleville General Hospital before Coroner Dr. J. Russell Scott with Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson acting for the Crown. The inquest was adjourned until Tuesday evening, May 28.

A veteran of the last Great War, Wager had been employed at Corbyville only since last November. While overseas he married an English girl who flew to Canada to be with her husband.

Imperial Hotel Again Functions

Tokyo, May 23 —(AP)— One year ago today B-29's made one of the war's great incendiary raids on Tokyo.

One string of bombs landed squarely on the famous Imperial Hotel, crashing into its great banquet hall and 150-room south wing.

Today, as he watched reconstruction, manager T. Inumaru observed with a fatalistic cheerfulness "everything burned, except the basement" in the central section and south wing.

Meantime, the Imperial again is headquarters for "Vips" (very important persons) visiting Tokyo. And the Vips, as in the past, are more impressed with the elegance of the hostelry than the Imperial is with them.

Registration cards carry this occidental notation:

"Guests without luggage, please pay in advance."

Premier Yoshida Takes Office

Tokyo, May 23 —(AP)— Emperor Hirohito today invested Japan's third post-war cabinet, and Premier Shigeru Yoshida pleaded for co-operation between the Japanese government and people "to save the nation by our own united efforts."

Yoshida said the new government is determined to dispose of a variety of critical problems facing the nation and "will boldly proceed with the execution of policies which are already thorough-going in character and scope."

The task may not proceed smoothly, the Premier acknowledged in a statement and explained "unfortunately, so far I have not been able to obtain positive support of other parties." Left Wing factions stubbornly have opposed both Yoshida and his cabinet appointees.

Yoshida said the "multitude of problems" facing Japan include revitalization of industry, unemployment and adjustment of economic and industrial affairs.

Homestead Birthplace of Dionne Quintuplets May Become Museum

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Callander, Ont., May 23 (CP)—Repainted and reshingled, the humble homestead in which the Dionne quintuplets were born almost 12 years ago, may soon be established as a museum.

Oliva Dionne who will help his five famous daughters celebrate their 12th birthday May 28, relaxed in an expensively upholstered chair in his present mansion-like home across the road as he told me of plans which may open the homestead for sight-seers.

"There's practically everything there just the same as the day the girls were born," said Oliva, who looks after the interests of his daughters since the estate had dispensed with a full-time manager.

"Just how it might operate I don't know yet but tourists might like to see the simple wooden bed in which Elzire gave birth to the quints," said Oliva. "Then there's all their original clothes and tiny playthings—even the incubator which kept them alive when few people had hope."

Once a thriving enterprise down the road from the homestead Oliva's souvenir stand at which he once autographed pictures has been idle during war

MAZERALL GUILTY ON SPY CHARGE. SENTENCE MAY 31

Chief Justice McRuer Rules Evidence Given Before Commission Admissible in Trial

Ottawa, May 23 (CP) — The fourth of 12 espionage cases to come before Ottawa courts was all but settled today with Edward Mazerall, Research Council engineer, convicted by an Ontario Supreme Court jury of conspiracy in a Soviet espionage ring. Chief Justice J. C. McRuer deferred his sentence until May 31.

The jury's decision came yesterday after 3 1-4 hours of deliberation and marked conclusion of the first Supreme Court case in the espionage investigation.

Interest in the case, which began May 13, had centred particularly on whether or not evidence Mazerall gave before the Royal Commission should be admitted before the jury. After hearing argument on this point while the jury was excluded, Chief Justice McRuer ruled in favor of admission, and his ruling was expected to set a precedent for remaining cases.

Mazerall was the third person to be convicted in Ottawa. Previously, Mrs. Emma Wolkin, cipher clerk in the External Affairs Department, was sentenced to 2 1-2 years and Miss Kathleen Willsher, of the United Kingdom High Commissioner's office, to three years. Dr. David Shugar, former naval officer employed in the Pensions Department, was acquitted.

Three others with whom Mazerall was convicted of conspiring Prof. Israel Halperin, Durnford Smith and Gordon Lunan—have elected speedy trial. Hearing for Smith has been set for June 12 and for Halperin June 17.

Moscow Radio Claim Denied By London Source

London, May 23 (CP)—Moscow radio said today the Iranian minister of posts and telegraph has confirmed reports that the British have not yet evacuated a wartime radio station near the Iranian port of Bushire on the Persian Gulf.

The broadcast said the minister had informed the Iranian newspaper Rasbar that negotiations were under way with the British with respect to the station.

Moscow quoted Rasbar as saying the British were violating the three-power treaty for evacuation of Tehran and that the matter should be referred to the United Nations Security Council.

An authoritative source in London, commenting on the Moscow broadcast, declared that there are no British military personnel at Bushire "or anywhere else in Iran" and added that the Bushire radio station was not being operated as a military installaton.

It was the second time in recent days that the Moscow radio had quoted the Iranian press as protesting against Britain's alleged failure to turn the station over to the Iranian government.

The Russian broadcast also quoted Rasbar as re-emphasizing the Iranian claim to Bahrein Island in the Persian Gulf, which is under British protection and demanding that telegraph tariffs between Bahrien and Bushire be returned to pre-war domestic rates.

The paper was quoted as saying that during the war the British had set these tariffs at differing international tolls.

Thousands in Toronto Greet Governor-General On First Visit to City

Toronto, May 23 —(CP)— Past flag-flying downtown office buildings and thousands of cheering persons lining the route, Canada's Governor-General and his Viscountess drove to city hall square for a civic reception today, immediately after alighting from the vice-regal train at the Union Station near the waterfront. It was their first visit to this city and they will remain until Sunday.

Viscount Alexander and his party arrived here shortly after 11 a.m. after an overnight trip from Montreal. The party was accompanied by a military escort and mounted police to the city hall where he inspected a guard of honor, placed a wreath on the cenotaph honoring the dead of two wars, and met city council members in their chambers.

It was an impressive ceremony as Viscount Alexander, visiting a city which sent thousands of men to fight under his command, received greetings of Mayor Robert Saunders under bright, warm skies on the city hall steps, then inspected a guard of honor. Traffic in the vicinity was blocked by the tumultous thousands.

Later Their Excellencies were guests-of-honor at a luncheon tendered by the board of governors of the University of Toronto.

This afternoon, in a special convocation at Convocation Hall at the university, the Viscount will receive the honorary Degree of Laws.

Tonight, the Governor-General will meet officers of the Governor-General's Horse Guards at their armories and will be guest of Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews of Ontario and Mrs. Matthews.

Tomorrow, on the Queen Victoria holiday celebrated in Canada but not in Britain, the Viscount will preside at an investiture at which some 185 members of the armed forces will receive their decorations from his hands.

A highlight of the visit will come Saturday when Viscount and Viscountess Alexander will occupy the royal box at Woodbine race track for the 87th renewal of the King's Plate, with the King's 50 guineas to be awarded the winner.

Before leaving for Ottawa late Sunday, the vice-regal party will attend services at St. James Cathedral where the Viscount will read the lesson.

ART MacDONALD, 15, OF TRENTON DROWNS IN BAY

Playing With Chum on Improvised Raft, Companion is Rescued

Trenton, (Special) — Youthful victim of a tragic drowning fatality, the body of 15-year-old Arthur MacDonald, son of Mrs. E. A. MacDonald, 179 Victoria Avenue, was recovered from that part of the bay 200 yards offshore from the Trenton Cooperage plant here early Wednesday evening.

Young MacDonald had drowned about two hours earlier, after he had jumped from an improvised raft with a chum, Billy Long also of this town. Long was rescued from his watery predicament, but MacDonald failed to come to the surface.

The boys had climbed aboard the raft and were last seen drifting on the bay around four o'clock. Shortly afterwards James Moon, Trenton Cooperage foreman, heard shrill cries for help, and saw the boys struggling in the water about 200 yards from shore.

Moon raced to a boat and desperately rowed to the scene of the accident. He managed to reach Long in time, and hauled him to safety. There was no sign of the MacDonald boy, and after a futile search, Moon turned to shore.

He turned in an alarm to the police and a number of town residents headed by the Rev. Father Carley assisted in the search for the missing youth. Dragging operations were brought into use and the body was finally located by Alex. Frost, in six feet of water at 6.45 in the evening.

The body was rushed to the Trenton Air Station Hospital where artificial respiration methods administered by Flight Lieutenant Les Truman, failed to resuscitate the youth. Later Dr. E. A. McQuade pronounced MacDonald dead.

The father of the dead boy, the late E. A. MacDonald, a prominent hardware merchant here, died about seven months ago.

Washington, May 23 — (AP)— The Congressional Pearl Harbor investigation ended today with a statement by Henry Stimson, former Secretary of War, that President Roosevelt "was undoubtedly considering" an attack on Japanese forces threatening South Asia late in 1941.

But to his recollection, Mr. Stimson advised the Senate-House of Representatives inquiry committee in written responses to a series of questions submitted by Senator Homer Ferguson (Rep.-Mich.), the late president did not formally announce any such decision to top military advisers. Nor would be have acted without the consent of Congress, the former cabinet member added.

Mr. Stimson's answers went into the committee's record along with replies by Cordell Hull, former Secretary of State, to 169 additional questions, mostly about reputed agreements with the British for parallel action before the Dec. 7, 1941, attack. Mr. Hull denied knowledge of any such agreements.

Also included in the record, now closed to further evidence, was a copy of the memoirs of Prince Konoye, Japanese premier whose cabinet fell October, 1941.

Three Gunmen Take $1,000 From Carlisle, Ont., Bank

Open Monday and Thursday To Accommodate Residents

Carlisle, Ont., May 23—(CP)—Three roughly-dressed men, each carrying a revolver, held up the Bank of Toronto branch in this Wentworth County village shortly before noon today and escaped with an estimated $1,000 in cash.

There were no customers in the bank at the time and the two bank employees said the bandits warned them not to spread an alarm or "you'll be shot." The bandits then fled in an old model automobile.

The employees were accountant J. M. Dick and cashier Theresa Hunt. Dick told reporters little more than the fact the three entered the bank together and demanded that the money be handed over.

Provincial Police said the robbery apparently had been planned in detail. The branch is open only Monday and Thursday of each week to accomodate district residents of this farming community.

Police said they believed the gunmen headed towards Hamilton or Toronto and warned that they might be using a stolen automobile. A wide search is being instituted.

Children Capture Bandit

Montreal, May 23 — (CP) — School children on holiday today were responsible for the capture of a 60-year-old alleged gunman shortly after he reportedly held up an east-end St. Catherine St. branch of the Banque Canadienne Nationale and snatched $1,800 in cash.

Police said the money was found on the man and that he carried a gun.

Roman Catholic school children were given a holiday today in observance of the 100th anniversary of the Montreal Catholic School Commission and a number of them, hearing a commotion in the bank, chased the alleged hold-up man for 10 or 12 city blocks, police added.

At that point, they said, officers in a cruising police car observed the chase and picked up the man.

Six Babies Die Following Trip On Brideships

New York, May 23 —(AP)— The death toll of babies stricken ill aboard American brideships mounted to six today when a five-month-old girl, in the United States only four days, died in Pittsburgh.

The child, Vivian Smith, arrived here with her mother, Mrs. Howard Smith on the S. S. Brazil last Sunday.

The death, which physicians diagnosed temporarily as acute diarrhoea and malnutrition, was the first reported among the Brazil's passengers.

Five infants who travelled on the brideship Zebulon Vance have died from a mysterious ailment which struck them as they crossed the Atlantic.

A federal investigation was begun after mothers complained of overcrowding and unsanitary conditions aboard the vessel.

The ship docked here Monday after a 13-day voyage from Le Havre. Four deaths occurred in hospital — where 15 other babies originally were taken — and one at Paris, Ill. Several ailing infants since have been transferred to other hospitals or their homes for private treatment.

Latest reported death was that of Robert Ball, nine-week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ball, who died Tuesday night at Paris of what the attending physician diagnosed as "malnutrition developing into pneumonia."

The child's mother said he had refused a food formula prescribed shortly before sailing and took no nourishment after the ship left Le Havre May 7.

One of the soldiers' wives, Mrs. John Aliberti, formerly of Keerbergen, Belgium, said cabins aboard the Vance were so crowded that "in the cabin in which I came over there were 18 women and 10 babies."

The federal investigation was launched by Dr. Roy E. Bodet, chief quarantine officer for the New York port of embarkation.

While the port said it would await the outcome of autopsies before committing itself on the cause of deaths, Dr. Israel Weinstein, acting New York City health commissioner, said the outbreak resembled "summer diarrhoea."

Quints Entertain Archbishop Vachon

Corbeil, May 23 —(CP)— Archbishop Alexandre Vachon of Ottawa, one of the oldest friends of the Dionne family, was entertained by the Quintuplets at their home Sunday.

After dinner with the family, the Quintuplets and their sisters and brothers entertained him with a program of songs and playlets, at the conclusion of which the Archbishop joined with them in singing "O Canada."

Pauline, the Quints' 13-year-old sister, gave an informal speech of welcome and presented the Archbishop with a bouquet of flowers.

He conducted a mass Monday in their private chapel before leaving for Hearst, Ont.

Possible Paralysis Of U.S. Railroads Hinges on Reply

Washington, May 23 (AP)—A possible paralysis of United States railroads before nightfall hinged today on the reply trainmen and engineers give President Truman on a compromise wage proposal.

Leaders of the brotherhoods said the 18 1-2-cent-an-hour increase suggested by Mr. Truman in an attempt to stave off the strike set for 5 p.m. E.D.T. was "unfavorable" because it would rule out any changes in present working agreements.

They decline to say immediately what their final decision would be.

Meanwhile the government, already running the railroads under a White House seizure order, braced itself to make the best of things if the strike materializes after the five-day truce arranged by Mr. Truman last Saturday.

The office of defence transportation had plans already drawn to mobilize other forms of transportation—air, water and highway—to insure movement of essential products, principally food. But O.D.T. said it intended to hold back its orders until the strike appeared inevitable.

Brotherhoods' Attitude

The two brotherhoods made it plain that their strike order issued last April 29—well before the seizure—still stands for the 250,000 trainmen and engineers.

A. F. Whitney head of the trainmen, described the President's compromise offer as "less favorable than the recommendation of the fact-finding board" previously rejected by the two brotherhoods. This provided for a 16-cent-an-hour increase but with some changes in working rules.

Former Padre Tells Of His Experiences With Army Overseas

The members of the Twenty-Second Club heard a very interesting address last evening by Rev. J. W. Houston on his experiences overseas as army chaplain.

The speaker paid tribute to the outstanding service rendered by the Canadians on the Continent and in particular lauded the splendid work performed by the stretcher bearers on the field of battle, many of whom died while going to the assistance of their wounded comrades. The meeting was held at the home of the club president, Irving Hefkey.

County Police Court

Cross-examination by defence counsel during taking of evidence on a careless driving charge against Johnston Hillier, Front Street, took up most of the time during the Thursday morning Magistrate's Court session with several of the cases having to be laid over until the afternoon.

The charge against Hillier resulted following a motor accident on No. 2 Highway on May 10th, when an auto driven by the accused was in a sideswipe collision with another driven by Thomas Gin of this city. Robt. McCulloch acted as counsel for the defence, while Provincial Constable Harry Caldwell gave evidence for the Crown.

Several pleas of guilty in writing were presented to the court, the charges involving infractions of the H.T.A. while Douglas Rosebush and James Keegan pleaded guilty out of court to illegal fishing, the charges being laid by Game Inspector Ernest Brown.

Mrs. G. Spencer, non-Indian resident of the Mohawk Reservation, was given one week to leave the Reservation, and was assessed court costs amounting to $4.50.

Attention of Cheese Salesmen, Buyers Directed to Ruling on Shipping Cheese

The following circular has been issued by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and sent to all the cheddar cheese manufacturers in the district. As the subject matter is important to factory salesmen and cheese buyers the text of the circular is presented here in full.

To Cheddar Cheese Manufacturers

Dear Sir:

Reports have reached us that some cheese factories are not complying with Order No. A-1891, with respect to Section 4(d) which defines "factory shipping point".

The purpose and intent of this section is clear and, as the Order has been in effect for over a year, its meaning should be well known.

Section 4(d) sets forth the various shipping points at which, in accordance with established practice, the factory must deliver cheese free to the buyer i.e., the factory may not make any charge to the buyer nor may the buyer pay to the factory, either directly or indirectly, any consideration or money to cover cost of transporting cheese from factory to "factory shipping point."

In order further to clarify the position, and in any question of doubt, it is hereby ruled that the "factory shipping point" for cheese sold for domestic trade shall be the "factory shipping point" established by the Dairy Products Board for cheese for export.

Yours very truly,
K. H. Olive,
Administrator.

Spreading Waves Of Shutdowns Hit Coal Mines

By HAROLD W. WARD

Washington, May 23 — (AP) — A spreading wave of shutdowns hit United States soft coal mines today despite Federal seizure, as the government strove for an agreement with John L. Lewis to prevent another complete close-down by the weekend.

The picture was not rosy. The best that interior secretary Krug could offer as government mine boss was a guarded "hope" that the end of the current two-week truce Saturday would not plunge all the pits back into idleness.

The first 24 hours of government seizure produced discouraging results from the administration point of view. Thousands of miners, who had gone back to work under the truce, quit their pits.

This mass return to idleness closed an additional 243 mines, increasing the number immobilized by the bituminous dispute to more than 2,100 out of 4,500 total. The latest Federal estimates are that more than a third of the 400,000 soft coal miners are now staying away from work.

With the truce's end rapidly approaching, Mr. Krug and Ben Moreell, who are charged with running the seized mines, weighed the newly-stated terms which Mr. Lewis submitted to the government for settlement of the 2½-month-old dispute.

They asked for time to study all its particulars, after a full day of conferences with Lewis and his negotiating committee yesterday. Representatives of the solid fuels administration and Federal Social Security Board also participate in the preliminary discussions.

Mr. Lewis' chief demand is for a seven-per-cent levy on the operators' payroll for a union health and welfare fund, controlled exclusively by his United Mine Workers (A.F.L.).

Rubber Dinghies Declared Surplus

Montreal, May 23—Approximately 1,700 one-man rubber dinghies designed for emergency use by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. aircrews have been distributed to branch offices of War Assets Corporation and will be sold through regular wholesale outlets, it was announced here today. An additional 100 have been retained by the Corporation for sale for air use in Canada.

These dinghies, similar to those which saved the lives of thousands of airmen who were forced to "ditch" at sea during the war, are ideal for use as floats at swimming beaches, or for use of sportsmen in the wilds. They are carried in a canvas bag no larger than a brief case and can be inflated in a matter of seconds by a bottle of compressed air attached to the dinghy. A small hand "Topping Up" pump is used to keep the dinghy inflated. A small sail set on an aluminum mast provides motive power and a "sea drogue" acts as anchor.

The Corporaton expects a quantity of two and four-man dinghies of similar material and construction, will soon be declared surplus and become available for national distribution in the same manner.

Kingston City Wins Appeal

Toronto, May 31 (CP)—Appeal by the City of Kingston from a judgment of Mr. Justice Urquhart who had issued a mandatory order to the municipality to grant a building permit to the Crown Dairy allowing them to alter their premises on Frontenac Street, was allowed in a judgment issued at Osgoode Hall today.

Applicants, W. L. Wilmot and Kenneth Wilmot, owners of the dairy, had been refused a permit because of restrictive by-law 184, which prohibited industrial enterprises in the district. Having been established before the passing of the by-law the Wilmots applied for the mandatory order. They wished to "alter and enlarge."

The court of appeal thought that could not be granted but it was recognized that "land used before the by-law for purposes prohibited by the by-law may continue but if that use ceases the by-law becomes applicable."

While allowing the appeal the judgment suggested that a permit might be issued "allowing them to alter such of the buildings as were in use before the passing of the by-law" and continuing said "it is possible that a new application for such a permit would be necessary."

Court Not Interested In How Von Schirach Became Anti-Semitic

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, May 23 — (AP) — Baldur Von Schirach, 39-year-old former Fuehrer of Hitler youth, informed the international military tribunal today that a book he said had been written by Henry Ford was influential in converting him to anti-Semitism.

He said the book was entitled "The International Jews."

(On Jan. 6, 1937, the non-sectarian anti-Nazi League to champion human rights announced in New York that it had received a letter authorized by Henry Ford stating that steps would be taken to "prevent the continued misuse of Mr. Ford's name" on the book, "The International Jew.")

Sir Geoffrey Lawrence, the presiding justice, interrupted the witness with the observation that he was not interested in how Schirach became anti-Semitic.

Schirach, natty in a tan gabardine suit and a blue tie, talked out of the side of his mouth as he told the tribunal he was the father of four children and described his 21 years in the Nazi party and his rise from prodigy to gauleiter of Vienna. He credited his love of military discipline for youth to the fact he was the son of a professional officer.

Merchant City Of Leipzig Is Mere Shadow

By GODFREY ANDERSON

Leipzig, Germany, May 23 — (AP)—The rich merchant city of Leipzig is but a shadow of its former self.

The 100-year-old fur trade virtually is dead; the extensive book-publishing and printing trade which employed a third of the city's population is just starting to revive.

Leipzig's 68 millionaires—there were more millionaires here before the war than in Berlin — have scattered far and wide. Some are dead, some have emigrated, some have moved to the western zones to escape the Russians, some have lost everything and are millionaires no more.

Once millions of marks used to change hands in Leipzig. Furs were imported from Canada, Russia, Poland, Alaska, Norway, Czechoslovakia, even far-off Persia and Afghanistan. Leipzig prepared them for the markets of the world. Thirty-thousand men worked in 4,500 firms. Few of these firms remain. Bombs hit Bruehl, the fur trade section, especially hard.

The only murs coming to Leipzig now are rabbit furs from local breeders. There may be sheepskins from Russia soon. But it will take more than that to make Leipzig centre of the European fur trade again.

Publishing Trade

The publishing trade is in slightly better shape. Thirty per cent of it survived the war, but so far only 12 firms have been licensed to operate where hundreds worked before. These are now doing between 60 and 70 per cent of all printing in the Soviet zone.

Volk Und Buch, a new co-operative firm printing novels and popular science books, claimed to have taken orders for 100,000 books on the first day of Leipzig Fair, many of the orders being from buyers in the western occupation zones.

Most firms now working have Russian orders. Three million schoolbooks and 100,000 technical books in Russian have been turned out in three months. As most of the German printers do not understand Russian, they set type by following the cyrillic characters of the copy without knowing the meaning of the words.

Great numbers of a history of the Russian Communist Party also have been printed in German, mainly for sale to Germans living in Russia though some are available in the Soviet zone of Germany.

CONDEMNS CBC TOTALITARIANISM

Toronto, May 23—(CP)—Richard G. Lewis, editor and publisher of the Canadian Broadcaster said in an address Tuesday night to the Couples Club of Toronto that "the totalitarian sway of the CBC is not confined to their network monopoly, and recent high-handed tactics are beginning to raise public indignation at last." Lewis said he hoped that the people of Canada would make their voices heard "so that this continued vandalism against the 4th freedom — freedom of speech—will be brought to an end."

Kiwanis Greet Lieut.-Governor On Official Visit

A capacity membership greeted Walter J. Stewart, Lieutenant-Governor of the Quebec-Maritime district of the Kiwanis Club at the weekly luncheon of the local club held at Hotel Quinte on Tuesday afternoon. Two new candidates were initiated into Kiwanis, Dave Price and Stafford McKenna by the Lieutenant-Governor and a certificate of appreciation was given Lorne McDougall for his work as president of the club last year.

There was also presented pins for perfect attendance, Lorne McDougall getting one for one year perfect attendance, Dorland Houston three years, Bruce Lattimer four years, Gordon Barclay four years, Jack White three years, Ernie Finkle four years, Cliff Baragar eight years and Ross Stiver ten years. A number of the members were mentioned for having perfect attendance since the first of the year. Dave Price, one of the new members, was introduced by Bruce Lattimer and Stafford McKenna by Jack White. President Mark Vanner welcomed the new members to the club and notified them they had to work and would soon be assigned to a committee.

Jack White reported on the recent show "Pack Up Your Troubles" and showed that $2,030 net profit was realized from the endeavor of the club. Again, all those who in any way participated in the show, were thanked by the chairman. The club voted $200 for the junior baseball club and they will play under the Kiwanis banner in the Belleville baseball league this summer. The speaker was introduced by Lorne McDougall and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Gordon Barclay. Mr. Stewart after praising the club for their activities in the past year and their projects for the coming one, told the members the club was only as big as each individual and each individual must demonstrate and use their God-given qualities. The Lieutenant-Governor met the directors after the meeting.

India Demobs Army Animals

New Delhi —(CP)— After six years of active service in various theatres of war, more than 70,000 Indian army animals are being "demobilized." Only about 13,000 horses and mules will be retained in the service.

Those animals certified fit by remount and veterinary officers are being sold to provincial governments, local bodies and also to private individuals at auctions. The agricultural department and certain government services are proving to be the army's best customers.

Even in these days of mechanized warfare, animals have an important part to play. They were of immense value to the 14th Army during the Burma campaign, when pack mules, pack ponies and even pack bullocks were used to maintain forward troops. During the enemy onslaught on Imphal, 5,000 mules were flown in from the Arakan and helped roll back the Japanese invasion.

In the Arakan, mules shared the dangers and discomforts of the troops. They suffered many casualties, which were dealt with by the mobile hospitals of the Indian Army Veterinary Corps.

Boost Birth Rate Australians Told

Canberra—(CP)—Unless Australia boosts its birth rate, its population will fall from 7,000,000 to 2,000,000 in the next 100 years, according to B. T. Mayes, professor of obstetrics at Sydney University. He said in an address here that unless changes were made the decline of population would be barely detectable in the next two decades but after 1960 it would plunge.

"The parental instinct is satisfied now when the average family is insufficient for the purpose of replacement," he said. "For replacement, a family of three is necessary."

Maoris Are Seeking Recognition of King

Hamilton, New Zealand, May (CP)— The survival of a Maori king in New Zealand although the Maoris for more than a century have loyally supported British sovereignty, is one of the strangest of the many constitutional contradictions in the British Commonwealth. A section of the Maoris is now demanding official recognition of the king, although most of the leaders of the race are opposed to the move.

The present holder of the title, King Koroki, is a retiring young man who traces his descent back to the legendary captains of the war canoes which brought the Maoris to New Zealand from a land called Hawaiki centuries ago. He is, however, only the fifth in the line of Maori kings which was created about 90 years ago.

Before white settlement there was no Maori king. The tribes lived in a state of constant warfare with each other and no chief over exerted kingship over the whole race. It was only after the arrival of Europeans that the more thoughtful Maori leaders realized the advantages of unify to prevent inter-tribal warfare and to present a united front to the encroachments of the Europeans.

This led to the election of the first king, Potatau, who was acknowledged leader by the tribes in the most closely settled and richest area, the centre of the North Island. The movement has never been hostile to European sovereignty, but claims that the Maoris should be ruled by Maoris under the British.

This view is not held by other tribes, however, who have never acknowledged the king's leadership. The natives elect four Maori members to parliament, which gives them a larger proportional representation than Europeans enjoy.

The Maori king has never been officially recognized as such, but has been acknowledged by the government as one of the leaders of the race in preserving tribal organization and native culture. It is unlikely that the government will recognize the claim.

Convicted of Break-in; Theft of Articles

Hamilton, May 23 —(CP)— Magistrate H. A. Burbidge Wednesday convicted Anthony Eslpu, 23-year-old shoemaker of Windsor, Ont., on a charge of breaking into the Young Men's Christian Association building May 3 and stealing a motion picture projector, a pair of roller skates and other articles.

Eslpu told the court a week ago that he was in the reformatory at Guelph, Ont., the day the offence was committed, but Grant Ingle, an official at the reformatory, said Eslpu received his discharge from the institution April 20.

Eslpu is to appear Monday on a charge of perjury. He will be sentenced May 29 for the shopbreaking and theft.

ASKED TO VOLUNTEER

London, May 23 — (Reuters) — British University students will soon be asked to volunteer as human guinea pigs in research into the cause and methods of prevention of the common cold, an average of 4,000,000 cases of which occur in Britain each year.

Bonds, Land Deeds And Certificates Found in Woods

Whitby, Ont., May 23 —(CP)— Farmer James Manderson, walking through woods on his farm last night, stumbled on a litter of papers, took some home and discovered they included bonds, land deeds and savings certificates.

He called police who identified them as part of loot of some $200,000 in bonds and other securities taken last weekend when a Bank of Commerce branch at Minden, in Haliburton county north of here, was burgled.

The discovery followed hard on a similar find by two Toronto persons during a drive along a road in North York township, suburban Toronto, last Sunday. In each instance the find was valued at $100,000 and since total loot was estimated in that region, the burglars apparently kept little more than a small amount of silver taken in the break-in.

Manderson made the find in a secluded spot off a grassy track on his farm approximately one mile east of the main district highway between Whitby and Sunderland. Returning to the scene, police and the farmer also discovered several safety deposit boxes, locks from vaults and part of a door from a safe, as well as batches of bonds and other papers.

Exact amount of bonds taken from the bank in the North Haliburton county town has not yet been determined.

Luxury Fittings In Cheap Houses

London —(CP)— Ten housewives who rented government experimental homes at Lee Green southeast London, are able to regulate the temperature by pressing a switch.

Rented at £1 ($4.50) a week, the two-storey houses are prefabricated dwellings but have all the fittings normally found only in luxury flats in Britain.

The front hall opens into a lounge-dining room with windows at either end and a big dining alcove serves directly from the kitchen through an opening in the wall. The cutlery drawer opens in either kitchen or dining room.

In the kitchen a neat, enamel coal boiler provides constant hot water and central heating in winter. In summer an electric water heater serves instead.

The boiler is raked twice daily and one bucket of anthracite keeps it going 24 hours.

Mrs. J. L. Kingsley who, with her husband and two daughters, moved into one of the new "prefabs" last March, said it costs them 12s ($2.75) a week less than the inconvenient smaller home they left in south London.

The new houses cost £850 ($3,825) to build and take 600 hours to erect with semi-skilled and skilled labor. The government has 2,400 on order.

RACEHORSE TRAINER DIES

Women Seek Jobs As Air Hostesses

Capetown —(CP)— While the scarcity of nurses in South Africa grows daily more acute, hundreds of young women are flocking to become South Africa's air hostesses. More than 250 applications have been made by unmarried girls to fill 12 posts on the South African Airways.

Personality, poise, intelligence and appearance, complete bilingualism and a knowledge of first-aid are among the main qualifications required. Although their work will be primarily on passenger aircraft in South Africa, service may be required on special trains on ceremonial occasions, and those chosen will be known officially as "travel hostesses."

Uniforms are being designed for the travel hostess who will undergo a fortnight's training course before the final selection is made.

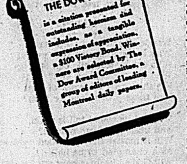
The DOW AWARD

PRESENTED TO

Robert Fairhead

WHOSE COOL BRAVERY SAVED TWO YOUNG LIVES



THE DOW AWARD

is a citation presented for outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Victory Bond. Winners are selected by The Dow Award Committee, a group of editors of leading Montreal daily papers.

A violent storm was raging on Lake Muskoka, Ontario. Robert Fairhead, noticing an upturned canoe, sensed that someone's life was in danger and sped to the rescue in a launch.

Two people were clinging to the canoe . . . a young girl and her brother. Just as the launch came alongside, the girl lost her hold and sank. Diving in immediately, Fairhead brought her to the surface . . . but the launch had drifted away . . . and he had to swim a considerable distance with the unconscious girl before he finally managed to get her on board. He was then able to rescue her brother, who was still clinging to the canoe.

Robert Fairhead has already received a testimonial from the Royal Canadian Humane Association.

We are proud to pay him further tribute through the presentation of The Dow Award.

Victoria Day

Canadians never forget Victoria Day May 24th., which has long since taken its place among the holidays they observe. The 127th anniversary of the birth of Queen Victoria, great-grandmother of His Majesty King George Sixth, has come round for the first full-dress observance since it was removed from the list of statutory holidays in the year 1942. The familiar bursts of multi-colored fireworks which were absent during the war years return to illuminate the night sky on Friday. Older citizens recall the days of Victoria and recollect that May 24th. was then known as "the Queen's Birthday," the "Twenty-Fourth of May" and that celebrations back in the nineteenth century were occasions of much letting off of firecrackers and other means of celebration, roman candles, rockets and so on. The custom lingers.

The Turkish ambassador at Queen Victoria's coronation in 1838 who is said to have stood amazed, muttering "all this for a woman!" would have marvelled even more had he lived to see the birthday of the "Good Queen" marked as a national holiday more than 100 years later in a Dominion thousands of miles away.

The birthday was observed for the first time in Canada in 1838 under inauspicious circumstances as some militia units paraded in their drill grounds while others patrolled the United States border to guard against raids from New York state by sympathizers of the Rebellion of 1837 which had been crushed six months before.

Canada alone in the British Empire honors the day as a separate public holiday in honor of Victoria. In other Dominions and Colonies and in Britain itself it is merged with Empire Day, which also originated in Canada and is celebrated here on the school day immediately preceding the 24th.

It was just 75 years ago Friday in Beaverton that a neatly-dressed school choir, gathered to celebrate the Queen's 52nd. birthday. The song, "The Maple Leaf Forever," by Alexander Muir has been sung in thousands of schools since and has won recognition as a Canadian national song second only to "O Canada."

Victoria Day was not recognized as an official holiday until after the Queen's death in 1901, when parliament passed a motion by Sir Wilfrid Laurier that May 24th. be designated as an annual holiday to commemorate the late Queen. In 1906 it appeared in the Revised Statutes of Canada under the official designation of Victoria Day.

This holiday has the lovely setting of the latter part of the merry month of May as it has been known, a season which has ever been the favorite of the people because spring is at this time in its most benign mood, the trees are in leaf, there are flowers and the weather conditions are usually mild, far from the rigor of winter, the coolness of the first weeks of spring and the warmth of midsummer. It makes a very pleasant holiday for Canadians to enjoy their country's blessings in nature. It also serves as a pleasing interlude between the great observance of Good Friday and the Easter Festival and the First of July, the anniversary of Confederation when Canadians observe their own national birthday.

The celebration of this anniversary is also a tribute to Canada's place in the Empire as one of the great Dominions in the Commonwealth of Nations. From the point of historic interest and for nature's appeal, Victoria Day will long hold the affections of the people of Canada.

Having with the peoples of other United Nations emerged victors over the forces of evil which from 1939 to 1945 struggled to dominate the souls and bodies of mankind, Canadians can enjoy this holiday with more than usual interest. Many scores of thousands of Canadians who served in the wars against Germany and Japan will celebrate with their family friends at home this holiday.

Classifying Films

Ontario's Board of Censors of Motion Pictures will hereafter classify all pictures submitted to its members so as to enable the theatre owner to provide appropriate entertainment for children of impressionable age. This will also provide direction for parents and guardians who seek suitable entertainment for their children or charges, says the report for the year ending March 31st, 1946, of the Motion Picture Censorship and Theatre Inspection Branch of the Ontario Treasury Department issued this week. This measure will start with the first of June of this year.

In keeping with its decision the board will request theatre owners to indicate in their advertising matter such classification as may be decided upon. For example the board may decide that a particular film should be seen only by adult audiences and the theatre owner schould then indicate that fact on billboards, in newspaper and other advertising media. "This measure is in effect for one year and the board will further judge if the 'grading' is being displayed in a way that serves the purpose intended. At the end of the period specified, the results will be examined and their effect on the question of suitable entertainment for juveniles discussed with the board's senior officer and those community groups interested.

The board's opinion is that about 15 per cent of all films produced each year belong to the type of "murder mystery, "horror" and "crime" form of drama and the report says that "since the life of a film in Canada is longer than a year it is logical to assume that circulation of such entertainment in great volume is fraught with dangerous consequences to some." It adds that "it is only fair to observe that cases of juvenile delinquency in the Toronto court during 1945 were the fewest recorded in 25 years. This reduction took place at the time of the greatest agitation against the motion picture industry which was accused of contributing to juvenile delinquency. However the board realizes its responsibility and will see to it that the youth of the province be protected from the harmful influences to be found in certain forms of entertainment."

In the matter of classification of films the board has not requested power to enforce its policy. The report says: "It should be regarded only as direction to the parent and theatre owner, the marketing agent of the motion picture industry."

The board views with satisfaction that "at no time within the last decade has life in Canada been depicted so adequately as during the year under review."

Love Story

In a world of turmoil, fear and clanking greed, the lasting verities of human life sometimes becomes obscured. We know that they abide. Sometimes, though, it takes a dramatic demonstration of this truth to bring it back into clear focus.

Such a demonstration is the story of Maj. Hans George Hornbostel, sixty-five-year-old survivor of the Bataan death march, who has asked permission to live out his remaining years with his leprosy-stricken wife, in the leprosarium at Carville, La.

Here is fidelity to touch the heart-strings. Here is a shining love which, having endured the hell of war, now prepares indominitably to out-last the ravages of one of the most dreaded of all diseases. The Hornbostel story is one to shame the petty and give courage to the down-hearted.

Surely, the surgeon general will not hesitate to grant the request of the principals in such an exalted, though tragic, love story.

Newspaper Facts

Typical of newspaper support to worthwhile causes was the raising, through public subscription, of over $17,000 to buy and furnish a home for a blind veteran and his family in Canton, Ohio.

Color lighting which can be adjusted by turning a dial to suit moods and conditions in homes, hotels, offices and factories is expected to have high export value. The new technique (now being tried out for the first time at King's Theatre, Glasgow) is an entirely British invention, U. K. Information Office Says.

True piety hath in it nothing weak, nothing sad, nothing constrained. It enlarges the heart; it is simple, free and attractive. —Fenelon.

Wonder if the good Lord cares
Who the champion's title wears;
Who the fastest mile can run,
Who the surest fire a gun?
Finished with the work of men
Will these greatly matter then?

What of us whose toil is plain,
And unnoticed here remain?
Will it matter that we failed
As a champion to be hailed?
Will God's blessings only fall
To the greatest of us all?

Did the Master say aright:
Greater was the widow's mite
Than the gifts the rich bestowed
By the greater love it showed?
Done with earth, the humblest then

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why do cats always land on their feet?

The ability of cats to land on their feet is one of the marvels of animal life.

"Throw a cat over a house and it will land on its feet," has been an English proverb since the 17th century at least. A person who comes out of a difficult situation unscathed and ready to start over is compared to a falling cat and said "to land on his feet."

Perhaps the old saying that a cat has nine lives was suggested by the animal's facility in protecting itself by landing right side up and breaking a fall with its well padded feet.

What boy has not at some time turned a cat upside down and dropped it to see the animal right itself while falling and land on all fours!

Cats don't seem to mind the experiment much if it's not overdone. A six-weeks-old kitten, accidentally knocked from a window ledge in Reading, Pa., in 1940, fell 75 feet to the hard pavement below without any apparent bad effects. In 1880, while the Washington Monument was being built, a cat fell from the top of the unfinished shaft to the ground 160 feet below without serious injury.

Cats apparently are conscious of their remarkable ability to turn their bodies while falling and consequently take many chances. The ability of the cat to light on its feet is due to a reflex action that it performs as unconsciously and automatically as a person closes his eyes when somebody suddenly makes a pass at him.

A Dutch scientist proved this by performing an operation on a cat's brain and depriving the animal of the ability of doing any conscious act whatever. When the cat was tossed in the air it fell on its feet with the same unerring accuracy that it did before the operation.

Motion pictures show how a cat manages to right itself during a fall. It first extends both hind legs perpendicular to the axis of its body and simultaneously draws the fore legs close in toward the body. A twisting motion through the body then causes the closely held forequarters to rotate nearly 90 degrees in advance of the hindquarters, that is, the thorax turns while the rear part of the body remains almost immobile. Next the front legs are quickly extended and the hind legs drawn in while the rear part of the body is turned by another body action. The cat's body is so muscular and supple that this entire operation requires only an instant and the animal is ready to land on its feet when it reaches the ground even though it may fall only a short distance. Movies show that the cat can usually right itself in the air in less than two feet of fall.

From the standpoint of physics, the secret of the cat's action is that its muscles enable it to modify the moment of inertia of certain parts of the body, causing one part to turn a little further than the other and in the desired direction.

MACKENZIE'S COLUMN

Big Three Find Security Problem Hard to Define

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

If you would like succinct and clear guidance as to the basis of the serious differences between Russia on the one hand and the United States and Britain on the other, you should study the following two paragraphs from State Secretary Byrnes' report on the Paris meeting of the Big Four foreign.

"Security is the concern of every nation. But the effort of one nation to increase its security may threaten the security of other nations and cause them in turn to try to increase their own security. The quest for security may lead to less rather than more security in the world.

"It is in truth extremely difficult to know to what extent the action of any nation may be ascribed to its quest for security or its desire to expand. But some so-called security moves on the diplomatic checker-board have not contributed to a general sense of security."

Secretary Byrnes leaves it to us to dot the I's and cross the T's. Still, without trying to read his mind, one finds plenty of light in this brief statement and the situation looks to me about like this:

As the war drew to a close it was obvious that there would have to be many readjustments—some territorial and others in the zones of influence — to provide security for all nations. Naturally many of these readjustments were aimed at security against any possible rebirth of German military power, and there was general agreement among the United Nations that such precautions were legitimate. Also because Soviet Russia was emerging as the colossus of the Eastern Hemisphere it was tacitly conceded that her new status called for widespread changes.

However, the realignments expected by the world at large were achieved for the most part some time ago. Russia pushed her zones of influence far westward into Central Europe and down into the Balkans. Her desire for entrance into the Mediterranean from the Black Sea also was freely acknowledged as legitimate.

But Moscow has continued to push and reach, thus inevitably creating the question in the minds of the Western Allies whether the Soviet Union was bent on expansion beyond the needs of security. On the other hand, Russia has made it clear that she thinks Britain and the United States are trying to prevent her from achieving her legitimate ambitions.

South Australia Has Civic Hotels

Adelaide, Australia —(CP)— A number of South Australian towns have gone into the hotel business and citizens are proud of their project, profits of which go toward civic benefits.

Five hotels, ranging from a club to a three-storey residential hotel, have been set up in towns along the River Murray in the northern part of the state. All are owned and controlled by the community, which annually elects a committee of seven to administer hotel affairs. The committee appoints a hotel manager.

The hotels are each in a separate town, and serve the rich fruit-growing and irrigation areas just off the border between South Australia and Victoria. The biggest is at Renmark, and its supporters claim it has been a success in every way.

Accounts show that it has distributed more than $400,000 in community benefits and makes an annual profit of about $40,000 from bar and guest trade.

Profits are devoted to hotel maintenance and improvement, civic funds and amenities in the town. Annual donations are made to local hospitals, schools, the Returned Soldiers' League and sports and other bodies.

Flower gardens surround the building and there are tennis courts, a bowling green, and a pleasure launch for the use of guests.

The experiment has gained countrywide publicity because it is the only one of its type in Australia which is now showing tremendous interest in reform of liquor and licence laws.

A bill liberalizing the liquor laws of New South Wales, which has just been passed by the state parliament, provides for the establishment of community hotels by local government bodies. And there are suggestions that similar provisions be included in the liquor laws of other states.

PUBLIC EATING AND DRINKING PLACES

Bacterial counts from plates, spoons, forks, glasses made by United States Public Health Service bacteriologists from these utensils as they were ready to serve customers revealed that restaurant glasses had an average of 45,000 bacteria; soda fountain glasses an average of 72,000 bacteria; cafe bar and bar room glasses from 211,000 to 13,000,000 bacteria.

I told you . . . . well, draw your own conclusion as to the safest place to eat or drink away from home.

So far as spread of disease via eating and drinking utensils is concerned the actual risk is by no means as serious as these figures might suggest.

Indeed, with a little more care in such eating and drinking places in respect to the reasonable sanitary regulations, the danger might easily be removed. Where these public eating and drinking establishments offend most frequently and flagrantly is in the facilities they have and the technique they use for washing glasses, knives, forks, spoons and dishes.

Plain and fancy bars and cocktail rooms particularly get away with murder in the dimmed lighting and by reason of the dulled perception of customers. Soda fountains in the rush hours comply with the sanitary regulations if not with the requirements of decency by swishing the dirty glass through a concealed tub or receptable of dirtier water and setting it up as ready for the next victim.

The indispensable minimum equipment for sanitary service in any eating or drinking establishment, as the health authorities everywhere well know, is a double sink or two sinks, one for washing utensils, the other for rinsing. It is only by malfeasance, dereliction of duty, incompetence or gross disregard of public safety that the health officer, inspector, health board of health department permits any such establishment to do business without this minimum equipment.

For washing eating or drinking utensils soap, any soap, whichever kind is cheapest and most satisfactory, and hot water is necessary. For rinsing a weak chlorine solution has proved most efficient—it disinfects.

Chlorine, you know, is the disinfectant universally employed to keep public drinking water supplies safe—most municipal water supplies are constantly chlorinated and occasionally one can taste the chlorine, but even so, give me the municipal water.

The local health department is always ready to instruct the proprietor or the employees in any eating or drinking place about this use of chlorine in the rinse water. As for the customer, if you sometimes notice a faint suggestion of the characteristic chlorine odor or eating or drinking utensils, that should reassure you that the place is at least trying to keep clean and safe.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Gonorrhea

Do gonorrhea germs eventually die away or is it compulsory to be treated? (Miss T.)

Answer—Eventually may mean years of trouble and possibly serious damage to internal organs. Whether the law places the infected individual under surveillance of the health authorities or not, treatment is imperative if you want to avoid serious complications. Prompt treatment with pencillin now gives complete cure in a very short time in many cases.

Smoking

Do you consider it harmful for women to smoke? f so, why do so many doctors smoke? My husband has stomach ulcers. I think he should give up smoking but he says cigarettes are not injurious to him. (Mrs. V. B. M.)

Answer—So far as I know, a woman suffers no more and no less than a man does from the effects of smoking. I know why one doctor smokes—he enjoys it. I cited here several years ago the study of smoker's peptic (gastric, stomach, duodenal) ulcer complex, made by Dr. Irving Gray, Brooklyn. In a series of cases Dr. Gray found most of the symptoms of stomach ulcer but X-ray examination failed to substantiate the diagnosis, and when the patients quit smoking their "ulcer" symptoms presently cleared up.

Court Dismisses Nashkawa Appeal Against Sentence

Toronto, May 23 —(CP)— A five-man Ontario Court of Appeal unanimously dismissed Wednesday the appeal of Nell Nashkawa, 23, from conviction of sentence of death by hanging for the murder of Walter Lavallee at the Saugeen Indian Reserve in Bruce County last Jan. 6. Only clemency by the Crown now can stay execution.

A statement concluding the judgment, written by Mr. Justice R. E. Laidlaw, and concurred in by Chief Justice R. S. Robertson, Mr. Justice W. D. Roach, W. T. Henderson and F. D. Hogg, said:

"There has been no ground shown on behalf of the appellant upon which this court could properly interfere with the verdict or the sentence."

At the hearing of the appeal here last week, P. S. MacKenzie of Walkerton, counsel for appellant, argued that the trial judge at the Walkerton trial, Mr. Justice A. M. LeBel, should have directed the jury that the Crown had failed to establish a motive.

Lavallee, a Canadian army private, was shot as he sat in his house on the Saugeen Reserve a couple of days after returning from overseas.

WOMAN SENTENCED

Toronto, May 22 —(CP)— Mrs. Elizabeth Fyfe yesterday was sentenced to 15 months definite and three months indefinite in reformatory when convicted of stealing more than $9,000 from the Canadian Pensions Commission from 1917 to 1943. The prosecution charged she became eligible for a yearly pension on the death of her first husband, a soldier, in 1917, and had subsequently remarried without informing the commission. Had she done so the pension would have terminated with a marriage settlement.

Stars of Tomorrow Justify Hopes Of Program's Sponsor

Graduates of Network Contest Already Winning Recognition Predicted by Adjudicators

By EDGAR SIMON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Yesterday's Singing Stars of Tomorrow, graduates of the three year old network show which completed its third season on the air recently, are already justifying the promise of the program's title on operatic and concert stages in and outside Canada.

Winners, semi-finalists and other candidates whose voices first attracted attention on the program are winning recognition for their talents, and the adjudicators report that the standard of performance improves steadily as audition teams continue to find new contestants from all parts of Canada.

From the hundreds of applicants — there were 500 in 1945—44 are selected annually to appear on the air. Of these, three receive music scholarships of $1,000, $500 and $250, and three others get honorable mention and $100 awards.

Claire Gagnier of Three Rivers, Que., winner of the 1944 series has since appeared as soloist with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and the Promenade Symphony Orchestra of Toronto and is now with a touring company of the Metropolitan Opera.

The voice of Evelyn Gould, winner in 1945, is familiar to Canadian radio listeners as she flies home regularly from New York every Sunday night for a trans-Canada broadcast, while continuing her studies south of the border.

But others besides the prize-winners have benefited from their appearance on the program. Pierrette Alarie of Montreal, one of the 1944 semi-finalists, and Aline Dansereau, one of this year's contestants, have been awarded five-year scholarships by the Curtis Institute of Music at Philadelphia.

Miss Alarie also entered the Metropolitan Opera's radio audition series and won herself a job with the "Met."

A 1945 semi-finalist, Joan Ryan of Ottawa, has gone farther afield and is still singing for troops in the Pacific area with a British ENSA entertainment unit.

Four of this year's contestants including Simone Flibotte of Montreal, first-prize winner, will make concert tours of the Maritimes this summer. Others who will appear are Audrey Farnell, Amherst, N.S., first Maritimer to win a prize in the series; Elizabeth McCaskell, Edmonton, who won honorable mention, and Dorothy Hamilton of Regina.

Open hitherto to Canadian girls under 25, the contest may be expanded to include young men, excluded originally because of the absence of many promising male singers in the armed forces.

York Knitting Mills, sponsors of the program, received the Canadian Broadcaster's Beaver Award in 1944 in recognition of its contribution to Canadian musical development.

Moncton's youngest citizens were honored recently on station CKCW when the Moncton Druggists' Association devoted an entire week of the one-hour programs to "Baby Week," presenting baskets of baby gifts to the mothers of the first baby born each day. A milk company added a case of condensed milk for the baby with the lowest weight at birth. There was a baby talent show and the station threw a party for 200 children aged six and under.

RARE SURGICAL OPERATION

Toronto, May 22 (CP)— Fed through a tube for five years, seven-year-old Albert Gagnon may soon eat and drink normally as a result of one of the rarest surgical operations—the construction of a new gullet or esophagus by means of a skin graft. At the age of two Albert accidentally swallowed some lye which destroyed the middle part of his gullet. A tube had to be inserted through his abdomen to the stomach to permit him to take nourishment.

Two Men Arrested After Police Chase At 80 Miles Hour

Lindsay, May 23 — (CP)—Two Toronto men who said they were father and son and bore the same name, Edward Renardson, were arrested Tuesday night after an 80-mile-an-hour police chase between here and Bobcaygeon during which three shots were fired by the pursuers.

They were lodged in jail here for questioning in connection with a break-in of a Bobcaygeon grocery store. The break-in was discovered by David Hamilton who became suspicious when he saw two men in the closed shop and an automobile standing outside with its motor running.

The men fled while Hamilton was notifying police, and the chase ended.

The President, Miss Faye Fleming, presided over a short program, when readings were given by Messrs. Gerald Clancy, Edgar Graham and Miss June Dunham.

Deep-Sea Strike May Follow Great Lakes Tie-Up

Toronto, May 23 (CP)— A strike on ocean shipping will result if operators attempt to move ships after the scheduled June 3 strike of lake and coastal shipping begins, J. A. (Pat) Sullivan, President of the Canadian Seamen's Union predicted yesterday.

The strike of salt water seamen was forecast after George R. Donovan, secretary of the Dominion Marine Association, said: "The owners are thoroughly determined to operate the ships. We are confident we will have sufficient men to man them."

After a breakdown of negotiations between seamen and operators on the eight-hour day issue, the C.S.U. issued a strike call effective June 3.

"If any hot cargoes go through our picket lines to the eastern seaboard the deep-sea crews will be called out in our support," said Sullivan. "Any cargoes moving by water that hit the seaboard are not going through."

If ocean crew are called out, another 4,200 men, all covered by union contracts, will be involved. There is a possibility that American Maritime unions will picket any Canadian ships in U.S. ports during the strike.

Want 8-Hour Day

Main issue in the dispute is the union demand for an eight-hour day for lake and coastal vessels. The present contract, calling for two 12-hour watches, expires July 31. The union is demanding three eight-hour watches, which it says would require five to seven extra men for each ship.

Yesterday Sullivan wired Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell, requesting legislation making the eight-hour day compulsory.

The Dominion Marine Association, representing the majority of shipowners, yesterday announced a new wage and reclassification schedule, subject to national war labor board approval. The scheme calls for an eight-hour day with the same pay as now received for a 12-hour day with overtime for work in excess of eight hours.

Add Crew Members

"Additional crew members will be added so that where there were formerly two wheelsmen there will now be three able seamen who will act as wheelsmen, and canal vessels will now carry six ordinary seamen who will act in the capacity of watchmen and deckhands on an eight-hour day basis," the association's statement said.

Union spokesmen say this would replace the watchmen with men receiving a lower rate of pay. Under the scheme, however, four deckhands per ship would be classified as able seamen with increased pay.

Further union objection is that ordinary seamen could be called out as watchmen.

"The operators' proposal means eight hours spread over a 24-hour period not eight consecutive hours," said Sullivan. "The men could be called out at all hours with not overtime provisions unless they worked over eight hours within 24."

Last night Port Arthur Trades and Labor Council pledged all possible support to the C.S.U. in event of a strike.

Loggers' Strike Still Continues

Vancouver, May 23 (CP) Negotiations in the nine-day old strike of 32,000 coastal lumber workers today entered their third day under the chairmanship of Chief Justice Gordon Sloan with no hint of any settlement which would send them and another 4,000 laborers in the interior of British Columbia back to work.

Representatives of the logging and sawmill workers and the operators continued their discussions over the union's demand for an 18-cent hourly wage increase, 40-hour week and union security, for the coastal district workers. Meanwhile there was no sign of any progres towards settlement of the strike by the workers in the northern and central districts of the province.

Chief Justice Sloan said last night that the "discussions so far are limited to the coastal area." and added that "whether they will extend to the interior is a matter on which I do not wish to express an opinion at the moment."

36,000 Still Idle

When the strike started May 15, 32,000 workers in the coastal district were involved, while 5,000 left their jobs in the interior. Another 1,000 workers struck in the northern district yesterday, but the union estimated that, during the last week abou 2,000 workers have gone back to their jobs, thus leaving 36,000 still idle.

Meanwhile effects of the strike aggravated the shortage of newsprint and threatened loss to the province's apple crop. Growers estimated that every day the shook plants in the interior remain idle more than 100,000 containers for apples are lost to the industry and will necessitate the shipping of fruit in bulk—an unsatisfactory and highly unprofitable business. And the crop this season is expected to be one of the highest in years.

Many publishers already have reduced the size of their newspapers because of the lack of newsprint production.

Ship's Baker Admits Slaying Of Manicurist

Liverpool, England, May 23 — (CP) — Police today charged Thomas Hendren, slender 31-year-old ship's baker, with the "peep hole" slaying of Ella Staunton, red-haired manicurist and former dance contest winner.

Arraigned in Magistrate's Court, Hendren said: "I did it, I did it. I will say nothing."

He was well dressed in a double-breasted brown coat and grey flannel trousers.

Police superintendent T. A. Smith said Hendren had given a signed statement regarding the death of Mrs. Staunton, but no details were made public.

Police said the baker, found sleeping in a park, had been sought since Monday, when the stabbed and strangled body of attractive Mrs. Staunton, 30, was found in the manicure salon she operated here.

Two detectives, sent to investigate the use being made of the premises, were peering through a peep hole in the ceiling when the woman was slain. They said that after a male client and Mrs. Staunton moved momentarily out of range of the peep hole they heard a scream and rushed downstairs to find the woman dead and the man gone.

19 Veterans Form Co-op Company To Operate Farm

Regina, May 23—(CP)—Nineteen men operating the only co-operative farm for veterans in Canada have broken 400 acres of rich clay soil and moved nine barrack blocks from a former Royal Canadian Air Force airport to their site in the Matador Ranch area, 45 miles north of Swift Current, Sask.—all in the last six weeks.

The goal this year on the 16 sections of provincially-owned land is to sow 400 to 500 acres of flax, but lack of rain has held up seeding operations. Ploughing is going ahead on a 24-hour basis and by summer's end the co-operators hope to have 2,500 acres broken.

The veterans also have been engaged in tearing down barracks at St. Aldwyn's airport, about eight miles north of Swift Current, and moving the sections to their farm. There are only three more sections to be moved.

The men are sleeping in a caboose, waiting for the new accommodation before moving their wives and children to the site.

Sponsored by Gov't.

The project, sponsored by the Saskatchewan government, is using Reconstruction Department equipment except for some farm implements.

Plans for the farm started last year when a committee was formed to investigate the idea of a co-op farm for veterans. Included were University of Saskatchewan agriculture experts, Provincial Rehabilitation and Co-operative officials and a Dominion Experimental Farm representative.

Late last March the veterans started a three-week school where they were taught co-operative principles and agriculture and farm organization. Immediately following classes they started work on the farm.

Now the veterans are looking forward to June when they expect to form their own co-operative farm association taking over from the provincial government the two trucks, four caterpillar tractors and jeep now on loan to them.

U.S. CABINET

By Konoye's account, he pressed peace negotiations with the United States in good faith. However, the Prince quoted Foreign Minister Matsuoka of his second cabinet as expressing conviction in May, 1941, that President Roosevelt "was apparently determined to enter" the European war.

Chairman Alben Barkley (Dem.-Ky.) called the committee together today to receive these documents formally and to act on a suggestion that it request an additional 30 days to complete its report. The current deadline set by Congress is June 1. The investigation began last Nov. 15.

The committee last March received a 20,000-word statement from Mr. Stimson covering his recollection of events preceding Pearl Marbor. In it, Mr. Stimson said the president's "war cabinet" reached the conclusion at a meeting Nov. 28 — 10 days before Pearl Harbor — that the United States should intervene with force if Japan moved against British or Dutch territory in South Asia.

Must Be Good Wheat Crop To Relieve Situation

By SIDNEY CAMPBELL
(Reuters Financial Editor)

London, May 23 — (Reuters)—Unless crops are blessed beyond all reasonable expectation, next season's international wheat position will be far worse than this.

There is a real possibility that millions of people in importing countries will depend for their bread on United States corn — and must pray rather than expect to get that.

Only rarely in the past has United States corn been a major export crop.

Of four major wheat exporters the two biggest — Canada and the United States — will export less next season, perhaps far less. The two others, Argentina and Australia, have their whole growing seasons still ahead and can not forecast their crops or exportable surpluses.

There is every reason to believe that Russia needs food imports even more than do countries which are looking to her for supplies. Trade statistics for this season if available might show that Russia has actually imported more food than she exported.

The United States Department of Agriculture tentatively estimates that by reducing United States consumption to 690,000,000 bushels of wheat, a crop of 1,000,000,000 bushels would provide a surplus of 310,000,000 bushels for export and for replenishing carry-over stocks in the United States.

Canada during the season ending next July will have shipped 340,000,000 bushels of wheat. But 200,000,000 of that 340,000,000 represents depletion of the carry-over from 258,000,000 last July to the official estimate of less than 60,000,000 next July — something like the irreducible minimum.

If the crop fails to exceed last year's or pre-war average — and as Agriculture Minister Gardiner frankly says, the present outlook "definitely is not promising" — Canada next season could not ship 340,000,000 bushels but somewhere between 100,000,000 and 150,000,000 bushels.

Biggest Group Test Ships Sail for Bikini

Aboard U.S.S. Mt. McKinley, May 22 (AP)—The biggest group of test ships yet to leave Pearl Harbor sailed today for Bikini lagoon—soon to be swept by atomic-bomb fire, blast and "very high waves."

Ten target and support vessels headed by this flagship of the task force commander, Vice Admiral William H. P. Blandy, were ordered on their way today.

Admiral Blandy told newspapermen before boarding his flagship that scale-model experiments "indicated that very high waves" could be expected in the second test at Bikini when an atomic bomb will be exploded by radio impulse some 18 to 180 feet beneath the surface.

The first test, an air-dropped bomb, is scheduled July 1; the second, as soon thereafter as possible.

The sub-surface bomb will be suspended in a bathysphere-type container hung beneath a barge, and will be detonated by radio impulse from a ship 20 miles away.

Gestapo Methods Not Used Says Board Chairman

Ottawa, May 23 —(CP)— Allegations that the Prices Board uses "Gestapo methods" are "utter nonsense," Donald Gordon, board chairman, said Wednesday in a statement.

Mr. Gordon was commenting on remarks in the Commons by G. S. White, Progressive Conservative member for Hastings-Peterborough, who said rural residents were annoyed by "Gestapo agents" of the Prices Board who spent their time checking up small sales of butter, syrup and honey.

It was the board's "duty" to enforce the price ceilings, Mr. Gordon said. Before prosecutions were authorized they were carefully scrutinized by "senior officials" at Ottawa and every person investigated was given "every opportunity to give explanations."

The board was "berated" on one hand for not taking "sufficiently rigorous action to stamp out black markets and price ceiling infractions," while on the other hand "we have this type of wild accusation about Gestapo procedures."

Floating Airstrip Invented in India

New Delhi, India —(CP)—The floating airstrip, a wartime discovery of great potential value to peace-time aviation, is the direct development of an experiment carried out 25 years ago by a young sapper officer in India.

The test began at the headquarters of King George V's Own Bengal Sappers and Miners when Capt. D. W. R. Walker designed a bridge of floating planks. Laid across a deep, swiftly-flowing canal, it was able to take the weight of a moving vehicle.

The "floating mat" principle was advanced a stage further in 1939 with the incorporation of canvas in its design. Vehicles could stop in midstream. By 1941 it had been adopted for use by the Indian Army.

It was not until 1945 that the principle was successfully applied to aircraft. The young sapper, now Col. Walker, R.E., and his plans were rigorously tested by the Royal Engineers and the Royal Navy at Lamlash on the River Clyde, Scotland. Not only did "Clover" as the "floating airstrip" was called, enable aircraft to take off and land on water, but its sturdy design enabled it to withstand the roughest conditions.

Claims Ignorance Of Conveyance

London, Ont., May 23 —(CP)—Complete ignorance that what he was signing in a lawyer's office in February of last year was a conveyance to his son of property valued at $36,500 was claimed in Supreme Court here Wednesday by John Turock, London.

The elder Turock said he was "awful sick" at the time, and the words in the document had no significance to him because "the lawyer read it all so fast."

Claiming fraud, deceit and duplicity, John Turock is seeking in a suit against his son, Peter Turock, reconveyance to him of the property, an accounting to rentals and profits from February 1945, appointment of a receiver for rents and profits until reconveyance is made, and an injunction to prevent Peter or his agents from managing, dealing with or controlling the properties.

The father told the court Wednesday he could neither read nor write, but had learned to sign his name to business documents.

years. But he may reopen the stand "if I can find someone to operate it and if it looks as though it would be worthwhile."

The tiny nursery near which the quints used to be shown daily in the summer to tourists who peaked through glass, is now their school. And there is no thought that any such exhibition will ever again be part of the lives of Emilie, Cecile, Yvonne, Annette and Marie.

But Oliva realizes that if tourists come to visit the homestead or his souvenir stand their chief interest will be to have a squint at the quints. Although their new palatial home is not yet landscaped it is likely that it would be arranged that the little girls could be seen at play in the yard with their seven brothers and sisters.

Once cars parked bumper-to-bumper by the hundreds near the nursery as tourists waited their turns to see the quints. War changed all that but tourist officials expect to see the scene repeated shortly now that the sisters, as similar as five peas in a pod and the pictures of health, have reached one of the most interesting stages of their careers.

THREE NOMINATED FOR PRESIDENT CANADIAN LEGION

Members in Convention Advocate Keeping Nov. 11th. as Remembrance Day

By DOUG HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, May 23 (CP) — The 11th biennial Canadian Legion Convention ends tonight with knowledge of the name of the man who will lead the Legion's swelling ranks through the next two years of peace.

He will be chosen today on the floor of the convention from among three and possibly more nominees. Three were named yesterday but it is possible that more may be placed in the running before the time for voting today.

Nominated were Maj-Gen. C. B. Price of Montreal, who won the D.C.M. in the ranks in the First Great War and commanded the 3rd division overseas in the Second; William W. Walker, K.C., of Canora, Sask., an Imperial veteran and present First Vice-President; E. J. Struthers of Rock Island, Que., and Ottawa, a government employee and present Second Vice-President.

The victor will take over the job held for the past six years by Alex Walker, C.B.E., of Calgary, ex-infantry sergeant and only non-commissioned officer ever to head the country's premier ex-serviceman's organization. He announced his retirement yesterday.

The more than 725 accredited and 300-500 fraternal delegates have made the 11th convention twice the size of any in the past. But officials predict that its 1948 successor will be larger still and base their prediction of the growing strength of an organization that now has some 250,000 members, many of them women.

Debate Unemployment

The organization's vitality and purpose were demonstrated again yesterday on unemplyoment.

In the wake of repeated demands for full employment, the convention heavily voted for redrafting of a rehabilitation committee report which already urged "a decisive and comprehensive lead" from the government in solving unemployment.

Referring again and again to their insistence that there be no return to the depression of the thirties, delegates demanded that their feelings be laid before the government with more force than demonstrated in the report.

In the first night session of the convention, a number of resolutions on important points were put through. They included recommendations that:

1. Nov. 11 to be Remembrance Day rather than June 15, the anniversary of Magna Carta which was proposed as a compromise between the victory dates of the two major wars.
2. There be no distinctive badge for overseas service.
3. The rights of citizenship be granted all Indians—this in answer to an eloquent appeal by John Jones, an Ontario Indian veteran representing the North American Indian Brotherhood.
4. Departure of German prisoners of war be expedited.
5. The law be enforced in regard to military deserters.
6. Service clubs, Legion branches and charitable organizations be allowed to run bingos and draws.

POLICE PROBING

Did Not Keep Large Sums

Neither police nor Mr. Stewart had any idea whether money was stolen. It was believed that she was not in the habit of keeping any sizable sum on the premises. A bank passbook showed deposits of $2,038 and it was understood that Mr. Hannigan had deposited some money in the bank at nearby Stone Creek last Saturday.

Mrs. Hannigan had operated the store and service station alone since the death of her husband 13 years ago. For the past eight months she had a boarder, Gordon Lees, who was at work all day at a jam factory in Winona, several miles distant. Lees said that when he left the place at 6.45 a.m. yesterday everything was in order and Mrs. Hannigan had prepared his breakfast. He had not seen any transients.

Mr. Stewart however told police that a transient had stopped at his farm early yesterday and was believed to have hitch-hiked a ride towards Hamilton. Police also were investigating reports that two strangers had been seen in the vicinity during the afternoon.

In Four-Hour Period

The slaying was narrowed to the four-hour period between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., because Dalton Spence, a neighbor, said that he had driven past at 11 o'clock and had seen Mrs. Hannigan out in front, pumping gas into the pumps from the fuel tank. The gas pumps were empty however when the body was found about 3 o'clock.

Sgt. Carl Farrow, one of the officers who worked on the Hamilton torso-slaying of John Dick, was among the police party that hurried out from Hamilton after the body was discovered. Photographs and fingerprints were taken.

Mrs. Hannigan's place had been broken into several times in recent years, each time when she was absent. The case also recalled the unsolved murder of a man at Winona, within sight of the Hannigan store, some 25 years ago.

MAZERALL GUILTY

Other Trials to be Heard

Still to come before the Ontario Supreme Court are James Scotland Benning, 38, and Harold Samuel Gerson, 43, brothers-in-law and former Munitions Department officials; and Sqdn. Ldr. Matt Simons Nightingale, 40, former R.C.A.F. communications expert.

The remaining two, Sqdn. Ldr. F. W. Poland, R.C.A.F. officer on loan to the Canadian Information Service, and Eric Adams, industrial development bank official, are to be arraigned later.

The jury's decision on Mazerall's case came after a nine-day trial in which the defence argued there was no security involved in reports which the 30-year-old Fredericton native gave to Gordon Lunan, Wartime Information Board official.

The Crown acknowledged the reports were available to the Soviet through official channels but stated the importance of the documents had no bearing on the charge of conspiracy.

Chief Justice McRuer, who addressed the jury for nearly two hours, stated a conspiracy such as that which they had been told the Soviet was operating to obtain official information would, if it were allowed to develop, create a condition of insecurity in government administration.

"The matter before us is of such importance that it touches the very nerve centre of our national existence," he added.

PIKE HOOKED ON PERCH

Fort Erie, Ont., May 23—(CP) — Michael Celane's eyes popped when he found he'd caught two perch at once on his tiny hook. As he prepared to lift the double catch, a great northern pike grabbed one of the perch and hooked himself. The pike weighed nine pounds, seven ounces.

The party felt decontrol should take place in other respects only when supplies were available to assure fair distribution.

When Mr. Diefenbaker said the C.C.F. supported the government in its stand that there should be no increase in farm prices, Mr. Ilsley protested that the government never had made such a statement.

Made in Orderly Manner.

The Finance Minister added that increases in farm prices had been allowed in the past and there "may well" be others granted in the future, but they would be made in an "orderly" manner.

Mr. Zaplitny said the C. C. F. Party believed in price control as a principle and was attacking the government on the ground the administration of controls was working against the farmers and the workers.

The Canadian people did not want the price structure disturbed but the government itself was doing that very thing when it allowed increases in the prices of steel and farm machinery and hundreds of other articles.

Always Victim of Prices

Mr. Bryce expressed the hope floor and ceiling prices would be retained. Farmers did not want unreasonable prices but wanted only prices which would at least cover the cost of production.

Anyone from a farming community who advocated the abolition of price ceilings "must not be in his right mind" because the farmer always had been a victim of prices. He sold in a controlled market and could not do otherwise until the farmers were organized.

Mr. Jacques argued that if consumption was "financed" production would look after itself. It had been a "great mistake" to remove the consumer subsidy on milk because there was a need to stimulate consumption.

While he did not advocate complete decontrol, he believed controls should be removed as quickly as possible.

GIRLS REMANDED

Whitby, Ont., May 23 —(CP)—Magistrate F. S. Ebbs Tuesday remanded until June 5 Bernice Connor, 19, and Darlene Anderson, 17, charged with making false statements to the Unemployment Insurance Commission. Officials of the commission said they were the first women in Canada to face that charge.

A representative of the commission told the court that Miss Connor drew unemployment insurance between last Sept. 14 and Sept. 28. Records of a local canning company showed that she was employed for part of that period.

Tony Acerra Wins by T.K.O. Over Kelley of Toronto in Fifth Round of Main 'Go' at Arena

Handlers Threw in Towel When it Appeared Their Boy Had Had Enough

Before the largest crowd of the urrent boxing season, "Tony" Acerra, local heavyweight sensation was awarded a technical nockout over Jack Kelley of oronto when the visitor's handlers threw in the towel with only seconds to go in the fifth and final round of the main 'go' at Hume Arena Wednesday night.

It was a peculiar fight. At imes, the Toronto boy did the "Pastor" to perfection and only a otorcycle would have helped Acerra catch him. Then, all of a udden, he would stop cold and eally throw one from the ground. On two occasions, once in the irst round and again in the 3rd, hese unexpected hard rights put he local boy on the canvas but, n each case, he was back on his eet before referee Robinson ould start the count.

The Toronto thumper had a vicked right but displeased the rowd with his persistent backpedalling.

The local boy fought a good ight. He felt the visitor out during the first couple of rounds and hen went after him. In the fourth ound, it looked as if Kelley was oing to hit the deck as Acerra ad him in the corner and hit im with everything he had. The oronto boy covered up well owever and, altho' he was hurt e didn't do too much damage.

Threw in Towel

Again in the fifth round, Acerra went to work on him and had he bout gone another round, the ocal boy might have won by a nockout. As it was, the Toronto andlers thought their boy had aken just about enough punishment and threw in the towel with nly two seconds to go in the last ound.

Acerra showed up well in the ght and, with a little more experience, should be able to take n all comers.

The semi-final didn't last long. t took "Jiber" Ellis just over a inute to put the finishing touches on Ron Nash of Toronto. The Jiber" let go right from the start nd in no time at all, had the oronto fighter down for a three ount. Ellis went right to work gain when Nash got back on his ns and unleashed a few of those avage rights which dropped the urtains as far as Nash was concerned.

arns Return Bout

Ellis was fighting for a return atch with George Polmanter nd he certainly earned it by his isplay Wednesday night.

Frank Pigeon of Belleville roved to be no match for Bill Westfall in one of the preliminaries. It was a clutch-and-grab affair with Pigeon doing all the utching and grabbing. Westfall ent after Pigeon in his usual ethodical way and had him to e canvas for a "no" count in the pening round.

From there on in, Pigeon wanted nothing to do with Westfall nd hung on at every opportuny. Finally, at 1:55 of the second ound. Pigeon's handlers decided that he'd had enough and threw in the towel.

It's too bad that Charlie Pyle, the Montrealer couldn't have fulfilled his engagement with Westfall. It would have been better all around. Credit must be given to Pigeon however, for stepping in with the Trenton battler on very short notice.

One of the best bouts of the night was between "Muskrat" Anderson of Trenton and Harry Abbott of Belleville. Neither boy had ever been in the ring before but they put on a real crowd-pleaser. They gave it everything they had for the three rounds and when it was all over, the judges called it even. Neither boy took a backward step in the whole fight and the bout had the fans really interested.

Outclasses Derushia

"Al" Rowand of Toronto outlasted Harry Derushia of Belleville and after Derushia was tired out, slipped across a few dandies that spelt "finish" for the local boy at 1:51 of the third round.

Derushia had a very definite margin in the first round but tired badly in the second. At the start of the third round, he was on the canvas for a "no" count and when he got up, Rowand coasted in and ended it all.

Lorne Vieau of Trenton earned a clean cut decision over Johnny Pigeon of Belleville. The bout was a real lively effort with neither boy putting any effort into defensive tactics.

Vieau had the local boy pretty groggy in the opening round but he fought back gamely to make a good fight of it.

A Real Show

In the curtain-raiser, Bruce Polmanter, Belleville and Bobby Vieau, Trenton, put on a real show. The two youngsters fought with all they had for the full three rounds and the crowd showed its pleasure by giving the two lads a well-deserved hand. The judges called it a draw.

The only questionable decision of the night was in the Arthur Duby-Ernie Majurie "go". The two boys fought a good fight but at best, it should have been a draw. It seemed that the majority of the fans didn't agree with the decision but that's what makes the fight game.

Referee Harry Robinson did a good night's work. He was in complete command throughout and at no time did he let the fighters get out of hand.

It was announced from the ring-side that another card would be presented next Wednesday, May 29.

The officials for the bouts were as follows: Referee, Harry Robinson; judges, Fred Fisher, Don Langman and Mark Storms; timekeeper, Johnny Lloyd, announcer, Maurice Callaghan.

ST. LOUIS CARDS HAVE PLENTY OF SOUTHPAW HELP

Lanier and Pollett May Each Win Twenty Games This Season

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals, knee-deep in southpaw strength, may turn up with a pair of 20-game winners this year, both pitching from the left side. Only once since the turn of the century has a National League club boasted two left-handed 20-game winners in one season.

In Max Lanier (6-0) and Howie Pollet (4-2) the Cards have two of the most accomplished portsiders in the league. Having already won more than half the team's total between them, they stand a good chance to emulate lefties Carl Hubbell and Cliff Melton, each of whom gained 20 or more triumphs for New York Giants in 1937.

Pollett's fourth victory last night, a 7-1 win over New York Giants, enabled the Cards to regain their first-place National League deadlock with Brooklyn Dodgers. The Brooks had moved a half game ahead by shading the Chicago Cubs 2-1 in 13 innings.

The lean lefthander from New Orleans, who had beaten the Giants eight times in nine previous starts, narrowly missed his second straight shutout before a paid attendance of 45,755 at Polo Grounds. The lone Giants' run came in the seventh inning on a home run by big Johnny Mize, his eighth of the campaign.

Dixie Walker, Brooklyn idol, gave his worshippers plenty to cheer about when he belted a long double off the right field wall to score Dick Whitman in the 13th inning and give the Dodgers a 2-1 edge over the Cubs.

Red Sox Win in 12th

Boston's American league-leading Red Sox retained their six-game margin over New York Yankees by winning a 12-inning game from Cleveland Indians 7-4.

The Yankees overcame a 3-0 deficit, caused by Hank Greenberg's first-inning home run, to defeat Detroit Tigers 5-3 and hand Fred Hutchinson his first loss.

In third place for a few hours as a result of Detroit's loss, the Washington Senators fell back to fourth when they dropped a night tussle to St. Louis Browns 3-1.

Johnny Sain pitched Boston Braves into a virtual third-place tie with the Cubs by trouncing Cincinnati Reds 5-1 for his fifth triumph.

A double by first baseman Murrel Jones in the ninth scored Don Kolloway with the run that gave Chicago White Sox a 5-4 verdict over Philadelphia Athletics.

With Schoolboy Rowe starring both at bat and on the mound, Philadelphia Phils upset Pittsburgh 6-2 for the Quakers' second straight.

Calgary, May 23 — (CP)—The "sport of kings" will make its 1946 Western Canada debut in regal fashion tomorrow at Calgary's Victoria Park. An all-time high of more than 500 horses will be entered in the 14-day meet when chief starter James Donovan officially rings the thoroughbreds out of the barrier for the first time this year.

The previous record for the foothill city's spring meeting was 1930 when 353 horses took to the ½ mile oval.

Horsemen from all parts of N. America will be levelling their sights on $51,800 in purses. Included in this will be the $1,000 added Alberta Derby for three year-olds on June 6 and the $1,000 International Handicap on the final day of competition, June 8.

An estimated crop of 50 two-year-olds will face the crowds for the first time within the next two weeks. These "babies" will be thundering it out in maiden races of $500 and up.

Frank Kilroy's powerful K and K stables from Winnipeg heads the list of Canadian owners. Included in this string are three outstanding Canadian-bred thoroughbreds, Koraway, Gwynfryd and Talipat, as well as the classy three-year-old, High Bluff, which is being primed for the Canadian Derby.

The Burrows and Walker outfit of Edmonton will be running six of their best horses, paced by Silent Flame, a recognized Derby threat. J. P. Kilgour of Chilliwack has 10 and Lee Williams, another Edmontonian, checked in with his string a week ago.

Numerous horses from the United States will be making their initial appearance in Canada. Among them will be Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Neilson's and J. W. Sims' respective stables, both from California.

Western Canada football squads who this fall will have to cover an area bounded on the west by Vancouver, and on the east by Winnipeg, are keeping an eye on how major baseball league teams make out on air travel.

The Winnipeg Scottish - United Weston opener of the Manitoba Football Association's 1946 schedule gave fans an insight into the workings of the five-man unlimited substitution rule now in force in the league. The fans' reaction was that manager Jimmy Hodgert of United shuttled his men so much his club became disorganized. They lost 2-1.

Thought to be the first of its kind ever staged in Canada, the 30-mile stock saddle race of the Western Riding Club set for tomorrow in Calgary, has drawn 46 entries. All contestants must carry a minimum gross weight of 200 pounds, ride with a western stock saddle and cover a planned 30 mile course.

Army trucks equipped with walkie talkies will carry a play by play description of the event. The race will become a yearly

MOONHOLLOW

By Maurice Dekobra and Jessie Ernst

CHAPTER 7

Next day he was in the shabby valley diggins office of the Double Jackpot, about fifty miles from Denver, pumping questions at a laconic buck-toothed engineer who told him Morley wasn't at the mine. "Seen no hide nor hair of him since the tunnel crew came out with a load, which assayed a measly dollar a ton, about six weeks ago."

"Tell you what—Mr. Lewis, you say your name is? I got a hankerin' Cliff Morley's diggin' around somewhere for a hunk of cash. He figures he might tap a fresh vein deeper down. Can't say he's wrong. This mine started off rich as hell, when Ben Iverson owned her. Then he died and his widow married Mr. Morley.. then she died and she willed Morley the mine....couple of years ago we lost the vein that kept us going."

The engineer explained that the Double Jackpot had begun as the best paying tunnel on the line. The main bore was to be 35,000 feet—they had got about 25,000 done.

Worse than just having 10,000 feet more of boring to do they had to run a 5,500-foot lateral tunnel to drain the ground so new digging could be carried on. Then the miners hoped Morley's Double Jackpot might be a 4,000-car mine, and times for them would be sweet again.

"I think there's still plenty of black ore down deep," continued the engineer, "plenty of tellurium. If we hit that, and tried amalgamation we might be in the heavy money."

Gordon figured out his next move while driving back to town. Morley was no doubt dodging creditors. If Morley were hiding, there was one bait that might drag him out—a colorful bait—Cora Leroy.

• • •

The Gold Nugget Room beats New York's fifty-second Street's gilded drums—beats them all hollow—for the Gold Nugget room is built on the spot where miners first dug up a 32-pound nugget of virgin ore. Maybe that was fifty years ago—but there's still plenty of ore, raw and minted in Denver, and streams of the lucre pass through the Gold Nugget Room. The miners there, who need shaves badly, can get drunk on Mumms Extra Dry. They can wash their feet in it, they're that rich.

The walls of the Gold Nugget are rough, like the inside of a good quartz paying mine. Gold powder has been sprinkled on the walls—the lights—the floors. The entrance is timbered and dark like the entrance to many a hand-hewn hole. Along the passageway are artificial skeletons, clutching pick-axes and pans. Rye is a dollar, bread and butter the same, and the manager sends you home in a cab if you go broke. There is always one cab waiting.

Gordon sat at a table in the crowded room Saturday night, his eyes fixed on the curtained passageway to the right of the orchestra.

Cora Leroy was scheduled for 10:30. He was sipping a Scotch compliments of the house after he had shown his "Brad Lewis" press card and mentioned doing a piece of news on Miss Leroy for the Monday edition, with more to follow. The room buzzed with talk and babbled with hearty laughter—mostly of men.

The pink light in the center of the floor glowed brighter as the master of ceremonies bowed in it, saying, "Now, ladies and gentlemen, the treat of the evening with the new song and dance I've been telling you about—the fascinating, titivating, scintillating, Cora Leroy!"

She flashed out from parted curtains—the red hair like a torch. Her face was pale in the cigarette-smoke cloud; her lips moved silently until the noise diminished.

Then her voice rasped fully, growled deep down; words came out tortured as she sang.

She pranced sure-footed as a mountain goat—head high, toward the audience. From two flower baskets at her sides she drew handfuls of silver-papered chocolate kisses and threw them, left-handed at the grinning rows of men and women.

Hands whipped into the air like branches, caught her kisses. The men munched, leaning on the backs of chairs. The cigarettes hung untended from slackened lips.

The smoke was heavy as morning mist and mingled with it were pungent odors, a hint of lilac perfume.

The six men on the orchestra stand complained through brass and wood. "O Honey, when will you ever know how I miss you so. I miss your kisses, my honey baby."

They all watched Cora. The pianist played with fingers hugging the keys—the trombone player blared at her, his pipe almost reaching her knee.

She rocked her body backward and forth, dragged back her left foot and stamped it.

She gave them a tune, swinging into the orchestra's repetition of the same refrain. A wiggle and a bend and a bow and she'd shake her shoulders and laugh loud.

"The Lorelei," said Gordon to himself. "No, they had gold hair and sat in the Nazi river. Circe,

Cora Leroy then began to roll her lips. The Gold Nugget filled with up-beat music, punctuated with rattatat from the drummer and blasts from the brasses.

All was closer. The smoke acted like a magnetic conductor for spot-light and watchers. All had shrunk to one round cylinder of light in which she danced. Blue and pink.

Lights changed. She slowed as if tired. She sang, "Won't you be my man?"

The curtains closed. The bassoon howled like a hungry wolf.

Gordon went to Cora's tiny dressing room later—was introduced by the manager as "Brad Lewis—writer guy."

She offered him a warm, moist hand—asked him to sit on a trunk while she greased her face and wiped off colorful make-up. She combed her dark red hair straighter, threw a blue robe over her costume—turned to him.

She was less flamboyant now—but her brown eyes set in her pale face were wise, and the thin lines by her eyes, and wide lips spoke experience, as if time had clawed her.

"There's a drink for you, Mr. Lewis." She poured him whiskey and water. "Well, what shall I talk about?"

Lifting the glass in her direction Gordon smiled and answered, "I want to do a piece on you—color, pep, warmth. You put on a great show. I liked it."

"Thank you. You seem to mean that. Don't be surprised if I'm a lot different in here from what I was out on the floor. That was my business, you know. The minute my act is over—I'm just myself, and that's a different story. Go ahead, shoot the third degree to me, Mr. Lewis, and I'll sing my words to your tune."

The room was warm, sweet with powder and perfume. Gordon walked over to her, placed one finger on the back of her smooth pink hand with the aviation-red nails.

"First off," he said, "suppose you call me 'Brad.' This is going to be a sort of serial. It won't finish tonight—I'll need other sessions with you—do you mind?"

She gazed at him, silent a moment. Her lips parted in a half smile, and she said, "Not at all, Brad, I'm glad it's going to be like that."

During the next week Cora proved she had meant that remark. There were friendly chats in her dressing-room every night; conversation while they danced together after the show—laughter when they went on an auto drive to Estes Village — or hiked through the piny air of Estes Park. A touch of the hand—a smile—her arm in his. They were together a lot, and Cora continued to like Brad Lewis. But love? No dice. Those were her words when they first touched that delicate topic.

"A guy already has a stake planted in my heart, Brad. It's an old story," she told Gordon. "I'd like you to meet him. His name is Clifford Morley. I just got no eyes for anybody else, never have had since the night I met him. It clicked for both of us and we said so."

She talked freely about it, banking on Gordon's friendship to keep her secret...unburdening herself of her pent-up love for a man she hadn't seen for a month, and missed. She mentioned Morley's first wife—the gold mine wife, Laurie Iverson. Her eyes glittered when she told the rest of the story. She told how she had thought Morley would marry her, after Laurie died. He had told her that he would, before he went East to get money to finance some work in the mine.

"Gold got into his blood," Cora said. "He got the fever, I guess. Men do out here, once they strike pay dirt. He stayed away a long time. I thought he was in South America, but he wasn't. He was after dough all right. He married a rich frill, a Long Island tramp with nothing to do but steal another woman's man."

Gordon flinched. "Were you fighting mad with her?"

"Mad? I'd have clawed her eyes out and killed him, so help me. She knows that. She wanted to buy me off, offered me a good piece of change too. If she thought she was taking Cliff from a softie, she was crazy. I made it hot for her—boiling hot. She must have been sore and frightened at the heat I put on her. Cliff was ripping mad too. We had a real battle, the three of us. I mean real, look." She held up the hair over the left side of her head—a blue white welt showed. She dragged her hair back in place. "That's where he got me with a bottle. Knocked me cold for an hour. I was glad, because it made him awful sorry, and we patched up right afterward. He hasn't tried to pull anything on me since....Where's he gone?" She shrugged. "You got me; I never knew. He's like quicksilver, now you got it—now you don't. But he comes back to me."

"You gave me a good idea, Cora," said Gordon, "if you want him back soon."

Cora clutched his arm. "Do I want him back soon? Of boy, you spoke a mouthful."

Gordon outlined a plan that had run through his mind the moment she had said she wanted to see Morley again.

"You're going to finish out your engagement this Saturday night. My story on you is all ready to print—we'll run it for Saturday, an unsigned featurette—telling everybody you're leaving Denver for good. Then I want to add one item to that story, a paragraph saying that the admirers of Cora Leroy had better get their last eyeful of the sultry dancer—because Saturday night after the show she's eloping with Brad Lewis, a newspaper man."

"Brad, I always thought writers were screwy—now I know it. Why, how would a gag like that bring Cliff back to me?"

Almost every day you can read in the papers about how local folks have been relieved of common ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and their long train of painful symptoms, by taking a treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound. Syntona helped them. Don't you think it will help you, too? Here, for example is the splendid experience of Mrs. Maude Spearing, 159 Locke St., north, Hamilton, as reported recently:

"During the early part of this year I felt nervous, weakened and run-down. My appetite was poor and the little food I did eat just seemed to sour in my stomach and cause gas, cramps and heartburn. There were gas pains all through my chest, spots floated before my eyes and I was subject to throbbing headaches and pains in my back.

"I have only taken a short treatment of Syntona, but already it has done wonders for me. My appetite has improved and my food digests well, without all that gas and indigestion. I am free of headaches and dizzy spells and I got relief from the pains in my back. Since my nerves are more relaxed, I sleep soundly and I arise mornings feeling rested and ready for the day's work."

If you, who read this, suffer like Mrs. Spearing did, make up your mind to begin taking Syntona today. See how much better you, too, can be feeling in just a short time.

Go to DOLAN THE DRUGGIST, Belleville, and find out how Syntona can help you, too.

DIXIE WALKER, PEOPLE'S CHOICE IN BROOKLYN

Veteran Outfielder Cheered Before He Ever Reaches Plate to Hit

By GAYLE TALBOT

Brooklyn, May 23 (AP)—Baseball affords few dramatic moments to compare with that when the great Dixie Walker, the "people's choice," strides majestically to bat at Ebbets Field.

There has not been such stage presence, such superb sense of timing since the immortal Babe Ruth last minced up to the dish at Yankee Stadium.

Like Babe, the popular Dixie whose 13th inning double won yesterday's 2-1 contest with the Cubs is the complete artist, secure in his hold on the clientele.

Perhaps the veteran outfielder from Georgia is not quite the ball player that the Babe was at his peak. The record quite definitely says he is of lesser stature. Yet it would be difficult to believe that any player, past or present, ever measured up to "old No. 11" when he comes to bat in Brooklyn.

The cheers start going up for the mighty man before the preceding Dodger hitter has had time to reach first or be decently retired. They approach a crescendo as Dixie rises slowly from his kneeling position halfway out from the bench and reaches for the resin bag.

Some players might have their maces all resined-up and ready to go at this juncture, but not Walker. With the loving care of a Kreisler or a Menuhin tuning a Stradivarius, the pride of Flatbush dusts the handle of his instrument until it feels just right, and only then does he saunter plateward.

A Triumphal Entry

The opposing pitcher cannot but be struck by the fact that he is witnessing a triumphal entry. The stands vibrate to hoarse huzzahs from 30,000 throats, and Dixie does everything except tip his cap in appreciation. No flinger could feel too secure at such a moment, and, by golly, he isn't secure.

For Dixie, approaching 36, is more than repaying Brooklyn's fans for an idolatry that has never wavered since he reached the loud borough back in 1939, a supposedly washed-up outfielder who had been waived out of the American League.

If Dixie relishes the cheers, he has a right to. His amazing hitting in what must be the twilight of his career—though it is impossible to be sure—has kept the Dodgers at or near the top of the National League standing this season.

Manager Leo Durocher had a strange idea in the spring that a youngster named Gene Hermanski was going to be his rightfielder and that he wouldn't need Walker, who had somewhat abused the artist's prerogative of reporting late.

Fretted on Bench

For 10 days Dixie fretted on the bench. The first time Durocher asked him to do a job of pinch-hitting he smote a game-winning home run, and from the roar that arose on that occasion Leo must have known he was fighting a losing battle.

Once he started a game, there was never a chance of getting Dixie out of there. He not only has been hitting at a terrific clip, fighting it out with Stan Musial of the Cards for the batting leadership at around the .380 mark, but his fielding and throwing have verged on the spectacular. In the pinches he has been especially deadly.

Small wonder that Brooklyn's rooters roll out the carpet when Dixie comes to bat, or that Dixie takes it big.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Picton will be the centre of attraction for golfers of the district on the holiday. Lovers of the fairways and greens will find plenty of excitement in the Prince Edward County town links where the Country Club of that fair hamlet is holding its first annual amateur tournament. There will be medal play, prizes and all the embellishments of the bigger tournaments. A number of members of the Bay of Quinte Country Club and Belleville Golf Club fraternities have indicated their intention of swelling the ranks of the tournament participants "over in Spain."

FISHING.

A fair wind, and a cloudy sky; a little grub and a little rye; a couple of pals along with me; plenty of bait and the fish biting free. Well, what more do you want?

Old Man Pickerel will take a beating on Friday if his appetite is good. There's plenty of bait being sold today, and by the looks of things the Waltons are going afishing in force. And those deepwater babies, the grey trout, had better look to their life savers for quite a number of the lads who have a yen for these babies are figuring on doing some fishing.

• • •

WRESTLING.

Then to top off a gala session of holidaying, one can relax, so to speak, by dropping in at the Hume Arena, where the boys and gals of the wrestling faithful will be out in force to see the British Empire Champion defend his title against the hulking Lee Henning, a 250-pounder, who thinks the opposition is something to tear apart without bothering to reassemble it again. Brother Jonathan and Pat Fraley will provide the entree while Leo Numa and Dean Detton will furnish the appetizer to a zestful repast of groan and grunt fodder.

• • •

There is plenty of juicy tidbits on the sports menu for the faithful on Friday, May 24th., the Queen's Birthday, when everybody takes a rest from labors arduous except the sports desk slaves who holiday gathering the data for the reading public on Saturday. Which reminds us of the sweet young thing who at a baseball game a few years ago, gushed:: "It must be just ducky to be a sports editor. Imagine getting in free to all the games, and being able to actually speak to those wonderful wrestlers."

• • •

BASEBALL.

For the baseball-minded there's the Belleville Baseball Association opener at the Alemite Ground between the Stewart Warners and Speedy St. Louis' Kiwanis Juniors. . . . That joust starts at four of the clock, and it is expected that His Honor Frank Follwell, President Don (Ducky) Thomas and Arthur Young of the Stewart Warner Alemite Company, will go through the opening ceremony callisthenics.

• • •

SOFTBALL.

As a chaser for the baseball game, those of the softball fraternity can get an eyeful of their favorite sport at the Fair Grounds, starting at 6:45 p.m., when Frank Sedore's Army and Navy Flashes take on the Kingston Army and Navy Squad in an exhibition tilt. Incidentally, Andy Knott, former Belleville softball star, is managing the Kingston veterans' team.

• • •

TRACK AND FIELD.

Albert College track and field athletes will vie for collegiate honors at a meet being held at the school starting at 10 a.m. Friday. Practically all events in the track and field calendar will be run off, and prizes will be presented to the champions in all classes in the boys' and girls' events. Members of the staff will act as officials and the meet will be under the supervision of Athletic Director N. A. "Pete" Beach. The afternoon's activities will culminate with a banquet in the evening, following which the students will hear an address by Douglas Monsson, athletic director at Queen's University.

• • •

Vern Geyer's Goodman's Juniors will hold a softball practice on the Collegiate Campus tonight at 6:30 of the clock. Coach Geyer was informed at a recent meeting of the Belleville Softball Association that he will be allowed to carry twenty players instead of the conventional fifteen. So there is plenty of opportunity for up-and-coming junior softballers to make a spot on the team. Any youngster who thinks, or knows, that he has a pitching arm, will be especially welcome. It's a lot of fun, lads, so get out and report to Coach Geyer and join the gang.

• • •

If the Point Anne-SACOS softball inaugural at the Fair Grounds last night was a forerunner of mushball things to come, then the fans need have no qualms as to the brand of this form of sport this summer. Both squads played in mid-season form, with the exception perhaps of hitting, and this may be taken as an indication that the hurling, too, was of better than usual opening game samples. The fielding, especially that of the infields was one of the highlights of the pastime, and the victory could have rested on the shoulders of either team up until the time Nicky Sero connected solidly for a rousing game-winning triple.

• • •

The game was played in an hour and thirty minutes, which in itself is proof that the boys weren't exactly kicking the ball around. The hitting eyes of both squads can stand sharpening up a bit, but this will come no doubt as the season gets under way. Only three extra baseclouts were recorded, and not a few of the hits appearing on the score cards were bunts that clicked.

• • •

Hizzoner Mayor Frank Follwell proved himself to be a lusty hitter. This corner which served up a fancy assortment of balls and strikes, not a few of which managed to get beyond the plate finally got one in the groove. It sailed through the air with the greatest of ease, accumulating at times the terrific speed of two yards a minute, finally wobbling in despair and nestling close to the war-club in the mayoral mitts. The chief magistrate swung a mighty blow at the upholstered pill. There came a resounding crack and the ball sailed high in the air over second base. President Al. Hitchon, who was the Bill Dickey of the ceremonial trio, chucked away his glove, hollered "Enuff" and ambled over to his seat in the presidential box.

Point Anne Wins Opening Game Of Softball League Defeating Sacos by Close Score of 2 to 1

Nicky Sero's Smashing Triple in Seventh Scores Winning Tally

Nicky Sero's smashing triple to centrefield in the seventh innings of the Point Anne-SACOS inaugural Belleville Softball Association game at the Fair Grounds Wednesday night, broke up an outstanding tilt and sent the Ox Pointers home with their first victory of the season by a 2-1 score.

The starry shortstop celebrated his return to the softball wars by belting out two hits, his second, the three-bagger sending Genereaux across the plate with what proved to be the winning run.

Up to this point, the game had been a nip-and-tuck affair with both squads providing a splendid calibre of softball. It was strictly a fielders' game with both infields popping up with some sparkling plays, and nipping potential rallies with neat play in the inner gardens.

Point Anne scored in the first inning when Sero's first hit scored Whitehead who had drawn a free ticket scampered across the plate on the shortstop's sharp smack to left centre. What looked like a Point Anne rally at this stage of the pastime was nipped in the bud when Bennett with two out, drove a hot liner through short. Murney Green's bid for a hit rolled past the SACO shortstop and struck Bennett who had dashed for third, for the third out.

Good Fielding

Big Jim Hunter, however, aided by some neat work afield by his mates held the Ox Pointers runless until the seventh when Sero broke up the game. Hunter was nicked for nine hits, one a two-bagger by Horwood, who "died" on second when his mates failed to hit behind him. Hunter walked four and struck out two.

Pat Maracle, dusky hurling star of the Pointers, restricted the opposition to six well-scattered hits over the nine-inning route, the only extra-base clout coming in the 8th when Catcher Mark Storms lined out a two-bagger and went out trying to stretch it to three. Maracle struck out three and walked one.

Made Bid in Seventh

SACOS made their bid for victory in the seventh. Sword got life by virtue of an error, but was forced at second by Lionel Blaker. Hunter flied out to left field and Maracle issued a free ticket to Wardaugh. He promptly stole second and galloped home with the lone SACOS tally when Jimmy Barriage hit cleanly to centre for a single. Stew Wood, however, popped weakly to the pitcher, and that was that.

Maracle bore down in the last half of the ninth sending down Sword and Blaker via the whiff route and forcing Hunter to fly out to centre field.

Besides Sero, Genereaux and Horwood got a brace of hits for the winners, with Loft, Bennett, and Murney Green Jr. contributing singles. Red Carson got a brace of smacks for the losers with Storms, Reid, Hunter and Barriage donating singles. Hunter's one-hand grab of a hot liner was one of the fielding highlights of the game.

Opening ceremonies marked the inaugural game of the league, with His Worship Mayor Frank Follwell wielding the hickory, League President Al. Hitchon doing the receiving and Geo. H. Carver on the pitcher's mound. The mayoral bat connected solidly after two or three balls had whizzed by him at the rate of a mile per hour, and he hoisted a high fly into deep centre field.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 994

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When playing bridge with Droopy Drew, prepare yourself for grief. No matter what the players do, he always finds a beef. If nothing else comes up to mar a deal without a flaw, he raps you with peculiar infractions of the law.

Oddities in the bridge laws crop up in a bridge game now and then. The judge who makes the decision is sure of one thing. One side or the other is going to hate him for it in the morning.

South opened with one heart when he held this hand:

♠Q J 9
♥A K 7 5
♦A 4
♣A K Q 7

West bid a spade; north one no-trump; and east passed. South came back in with: "Two clubs. Oh, hold on everybody. I meant to say three clubs instead of only two clubs."

West cried: "Just a darn minute. You can't go around making two different bids when it is your turn. You first said two clubs and you'll have to stick to that until you get another chance to bid."

Rather than go to court, they called me for a decision. All I could do was read the law on the subject. This is what the laws say:

A change of calls ranks as (1) two separate calls; the (2) second call is cancelled; and (3) if the first call is a proper one, the (4) offender may (5) allow it to stand (6) or substitute any proper call; and in either case (7) his partner must pass thereafter.

The change from two to three clubs made (1) two separate calls. Thus, (2) three clubs is cancelled. As (3) two clubs is a proper call the (4) south offender (5) may leave it at two clubs or (6) substitute any bid like three clubs, or three no-trump, or slam.

Whichever he does, however, there is a penalty. The penalty is that (7) his north partner is barred from any further bidding. The offender simply shuts out his partner for the rest of that deal.

Though it may be raw, you can shove a law down a player's craw.

PRAM FOR WINNER

London —(CP)— Highlight of Tottenham's Victory celebrations will be the presentation of a pram to parents of the first baby born June 8.

Column Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 23 —(AP)— Come next month, Bob Hope is embarking on a little tour "to touch up my timing."

Helping the comedian in his timing exercises will be several hundred thousand citizens expected to crowd ballparks and other stadia in all parts of the United States to see him and a two-hour variety show. "It's the biggest thing I've done since the Orpheum Circuit," he told me.

Hope is breaking in the show at Glendale this Saturday before "an intimate audience of 2,000." Hope will play a golf date in each town for the Professional Golfers' Association Rehabilitation Fund.

Press Agent Hope showed me a trailer which will be used in local theatres. In it Bing Crosby warns the citizenry of Hope's advent. Pretty high-priced advance man, I'd say. Ever on-stage, Hope tried out a new gag before the handful of people in the projection room:

"Sinatra and Crosby could only happen in America. That's the only place where a piece of spaghetti and a meatball could make so much gravy."

Walter Slezak takes care of his friends and enemies. He has an 86-acre farm in Bucks County, Pa. Livestock abounds. And each animal bears the name of an entertainment personality.

A beautiful horse is named Maurren. An ugly sterile sow bears the name of a Broadway and Hollywood actress. His two prize bulls are Charles Laughton and Leo McCarey. The chickens are plentiful, as in Hollywood, but he doesn't bother to name them. He just eats them.

"We had a wonderful ham last week," Slezak observed, "but I can't remember who it was we ate."

AT THE CAPITOL — Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan, William Benedict, William Frambes and Huntz Hall advise hemmed-in gangster Mike Mazurki to surrender in "Live Wires," first of the new Monogram Bowery Boys series now at the Capitol Theatre. Gorcey stars in the new films. The added hit, "Sheriff of Las Vegas" stars Bill Elliott as Red Ryder. Matinee Friday at 2.15 p.m.

TWELVE HORSES LIKELY TO START IN KING'S PLATE

Kingarvie, Owned by R. S. McLaughlin of Oshawa, Favored to Take Guineas

By HARRY ECCLES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, May 23 (CP)— The final workouts are over; long months of painstaking preparation have reached their climax—and if the weather gods are kind Saturday's 87th renewal of the King's Plate should be one of the most eventful runnings of the Canadian turf classic since it was inaugurated in 1860.

The Governor-General, Viscount Alexander, and perhaps 40,000 others will be at Woodbine Park Saturday when the bugles blow for the fourth race, the Plate—the oldest fixture run continuously on this continent, with the cream of Canadian three-year-olds racing a mile and an eighth for the King's 50 guineas and $10,000 added by the Ontario Jockey Club.

Twelve horses are expected to start but it won't be known until the entries are issued Friday just how they'll line up. The dozen or so are all that are left from the 110 nominations that were made in November, 1944. Last November the number was reduced to 49, and when it came time May 1 for the final acceptances only 26 were left in. For actual starters a $100 additional fee is necessary.

Kingarvie Favored

All the tradition and the long roll of historic names on the King's Plate records fade into the background when the horses dance on to the track Saturday for the supreme test. And when it comes to assessing the chances of this year's starters there's only one conclusion—if there's a three-year-old that can beat Kingarvie, he's a mighty good horse.

But nobody can predict a horse race.

The Parkwood Stable's Kingarvie, a chestnut colt by Teddy Wrack out of Forsworn, has been the favorite for this year's Plate all winter. He won eight starts as a two-year-old and his first and only start as a three-year-old. In his division of the Plate Trial last Saturday Kingarvie was more than two lengths in front at the finish.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, May 23 —(AP)— Special stocks exhibited strength in today's market while many leaders were unable to overcome profit cashing.

Dealings slowed as the session proceeded although blocks of as much as 20,000 shares of low-quoted utilities expanded volume. While favorites tacked on gains of one to three points or so, declines were plentiful near the fourth hour.

Mid-day prices on Canadian issues were mixed. Hiram Walker was up 3 at 138, Canadian Pacific up 1-4 at 19 1-4, Dome Mines down 1-8 at 23 1-2 and International Nickel down 1-4 at 40 1-4 while Distillers Seagram was unchanged at 115 1-2.

HOGS

Toronto, May 23 — (CP) — Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were unchanged at Stratford $20 to farmers, $20.15 to truckers, delivered, in markets reporting early today.

Young Veteran Guilty of Slaying N.S. Merchant

Pictou, N.S., May 23 — (CP)—Teen-aged John Beverly Thompson, four times decorated for service during the war, sat grimly in county jail here today awaiting sentence for the holdup slaying last February of a Stellarton, N. S., grocer.

The youthful merchant seaman, discharged from the navy in 1945 as under age, last night was found guilty of fatally shooting Alonzo Keay, 61, and was remanded for sentence by Mr. Justice R. H. Graham until the end of the Supreme Court term.

The jury, after deliberating one hour and 34 minutes, returned the verdict with a recommendation for clemency. It brought to a climax the three-day trial, highlighted by the presentation of a signed confession to the crime by the 18-year-old youth.

Earlier yesterday, 72-year-old Maj. James W. Maddin, K.C., veteran Sydney criminal lawyer, delivered an impassioned plea in Thompson's defence. Admitting his client's guilt, he sought a verdict of manslaughter on grounds of insanity.

"When the dark shades creep down over the mind, that's not the kind of a man to reward with a rope's end after His Majesty has awarded him with four decorations for service to his country," he argued.

Just a Boy

"You look at him now," said Maddin. "He's just a boy. It's silly. It's wrong.

"When Thompson should have been in school he was serving in the Atlantic on the St. Laurent ...

"The war was pretty tough. They were scraping the bottom of the keg of human resources and they winked at his youth. So instead of being taught the ethics he would learn in Sunday School, he is taught the art of war — to kill, be hard, be cruel, be tough. He was taught to murder, to kill, to slay."

"I'm pleading for the life of a boy — just a boy who lost his boyhood," he said.

Crown Prosecutor E. M. Macdonald challenged the defence contention that Thompson did not know what he was doing when he killed Keay. He classed the crime "brutal."

Thompson, in his statement read in court Tuesday, said he shot the aged merchant when he attempted to resist the holdup by throwing a bag of potatoes at him.

Dutch Will Pay Canada $4 Million For Equipment

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Amsterdam, May 23 (CP Cable)—Under terms of an agreement signed here last night, Canada will receive $4,000,000 in cash from Holland for all Canadian army equipment in the country which is being turned over to the Dutch.

The equipment, including hospitals, trucks and weapons left in Holland when the war in Europe ended, is valued at $33,000,000. The remaining $29,000,000 will cancel Holland's bill for services rendered the Dominion since the first Canadian liberating forces entered the country in November, 1944.

Lt.-Col. Harold Baker of Arnprior, Ont., commanding Canadian army equipment dumps in Holland, has turned over control to the Dutch army. Except for a staff of 25 experts, the 150 personnel at these depots will leave for Britain and Canada before the end of May, leaving only about 100 Canadian soldiers in Holland.

The experts will supervise the process of taking over the dumps by the Dutch army, which is expected to last four or five weeks. Then they also will leave the country. Among the estimated 40,000 pieces of equipment about half are ready for us and the remainder will become usable through interchange of parts and repair. Holland also has purchased in Canada spare parts valued at approximately $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

The equipment will be used to train new armies for The Netherlands East Indies and for an occupational role in Germany.

Churchill, Bevin Clash in Empire Day Debate on Egypt

Former Premier Does Not Want Troops Withdrawn

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 24 (CP Cable) — An Empire Day debate flamed in the House of Commons yesterday with Winston Chuchill, leader of the Conservative opposition, stating that there was danger to commonwealth communications in the proposed withdrawal of troops from Egypt and Foreign Secretary Bevin replying that there was no intention of allowing a "vacuum" in canal defences.

The former colleagues in Britain's wartime coalition government exchanged barbed words as the opposition ended its co-operation with the Labor government on its foreign policy. The staid house was in an uproar and the words of Mr. Churchill and Mr. Bevin were sometimes drowned out by the excited cries of other members shouting across the floor.

The bitter debate went back to wartime days when Mr. Bevin said the government decision to propose the withdrawal of all forces from Egypt to facilitate a new treaty had been carefully considered. He questioned why British troops were not moved from Cairo to Alexandria when Allied forces reached Italy during the war.

Mr. Churchill called across the floor that Egypt had remained the focal centre of British communications—but the rest of his words were lost in the tumult. Amid continuing uproar, Mr. Bevin said: "I am glad this has come out. It has only been a thin veil of courtesy that has been shown me since I have been in office and I knew it would come sooner or later."

Sympathizes with Eden

He said he sympathized with his predecessor, Anthony Eden, when Mr. Churchill "does these excursions in foreign affairs."

Mr. Churchill said that if the government pursued its present course it would ruin British interests in the Middle East and would destroy communications with the Dominions and British possessions. The government claimed a "dangerous right," he said, in taking its decisions without consultation with the Dominions.

The action had shocked the Commonwealth and confidence in United Kingdom leadership was affected by "the apparent casting away of all those interests we have hitherto declared to them were vital."

Mr. Bevin said it had been argued by the opposition that the United Kingdom was responsible because there was no united commonwealth defence. But the United Kingdom could not tell the Dominions to contribute to a common budget and supply manpower for particular purposes although defence in association with the Dominions always was studied. He said the Dominions had been informed on Egypt.

Mr. Eden said the government should have offered Egypt a treaty revision and a united front in defence immediately after Japan was defeated.

The former foreign secretary was the first speaker for the opposition and when he finished and a Labor back-bencher started to speak, Mr. Churchill rose and sought immediate reply to Mr. Eden from Mr. Bevin. Prime Minister Attlee refused and Mr. Churchill's motion to adjourn debate also was turned down.

Had New Status.

Mr. Bevin said the countries in the United Nations felt they had new status and it was not popular now to maintain troops on other people's soil. He said he preferred open negotiations with Egypt rather than to be forced to it by disorders on the streets.

The Foreign Secretary said British prestige now was higher in the Moslem world than for many years because of the "decisions we have taken in trusting them— being prepared to trust rather than to shoot."

Weather Synopsis

Synopsis. A cool mass of air which covers the southern prairies, the Central States and Northern Ontario has now pushed southeastward as far as Georgian Bay, Lake Huron and Southern Michigan. The fine weather in the warm air to the southeast becomes cloudy with showers along the boundary between the air masses. Further west in the cool air there is a gradual clearing. A still colder air mass now covers Hudson Bay and the northern prairies and is pushing southeastward over Northern Ontario.

Rail Strike At-a-Glance

(By The Canadian Press)

President Truman urges 250,000 striking engineers and firemen to return to work by 5 p.m. today or the army will take over the strike-bound trains.

President says chiefs of striking Brotherhoods responsible for paralyzing work stoppage, accuses them of creating "terrible havoc"; Union presidents make no comment, but early reports from locals after Mr. Truman's speech indicate strikers will not heed back-to-work appeal.

Mr. Truman to appear before extraordinary joint session of Congress at 5 p.m. deadline to report on rail crisis.

Other strike effects:

Transportation — Rail service virtually at standstill; few trains operate in attempt to mainrun mail and passenger service, estimated 100 of 17,500 passengers and 240 of 24,000 freight trains moved.

Industry — Further shutdowns, with coal mines and steel mills expected to close soon if strike continues; automobile industry faces almost complete suspension of car assemblies; unemployment widespread.

Food — Thousands of cars of perishable foods sidetracked and grain shipments halted; supplies in many cities dwindle; meat supplies in some areas will be exhausted within few days.

Attlee Stresses Spiritual Drive Of Idealisim

Edinburgh, Scotland, May 25 — (Reuters) — Prime Minister Attlee on Saturday addressed the annual Assembly of the Church of Scotland on the need for "the spiritual drive of idealism," after Moderator John McKenzie, had silenced a delegate who tried to introduce a counter-motion to the proposal that Mr. Attlee be called on to speak.

Rev. J. Stratheran McNab told a reporter he had intended to move "that Mr. Attlee be not heard unless he promises that pledges of the Scottish Labor candidates (at last year's British general election) are carried out and Scotland is given a measure of devolution (governmental power.)"

COMMONS VOTES DOWN 2 MOTIONS BY OPPOSITION

Week-Long Debate On Government Price Stabilization Program Ends

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 25 — (CP) — The government yesterday survived its first test of strength of the session on its price stabilization policy when the Commons rejected by votes of 80-29 and 56-37 opposition motions of non-confidence in the administration.

The voting came at the end of a week-long debate on the government's price stabilization program and was followed by passage of a bill authorizing expenditure of $203,837,388 as interim supply.

The House voted 56-37 against a Progressive Conservative motion which called on members to express the opinion the government's price ceilings policy was discouraging food production and placing on food producers an unfair share of the burden of maintaining the price stabilization policy.

Coming as it did on a holiday, the vote was taken while many members were away. For instance, on the Progressive Conservative motion, that party had about 25 members in the House of more than half of them were paired with Liberal members and were thus unable to register votes.

Reject 80-29.

The C.C.F. non-confidence motion was rejected 80-29 as the Progressive Conservative members joined with the government in defeating it. The motion called on members to express the opinion that the recent "unjustifiable" increases in the prices of steel and farm implements had placed on the food producer and the worker an unfair share of the burden of maintaining the price stabilization policy.

Participants in the pre-vote debate included John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, Finance Minister Ilsley, Angus MacInnis (CCF-Vancouver East); William Irvine (CCF-Cariboo) and George Cruickshank (L-Fraser Valley.)

After the House opened, Reconstruction Minister Howe warned that as a result of the coal and rail strikes in the United States the fuel shortage in Ontario and Quebec next winter may reach calamitous proportions.

Mr. Bracken, concluding a speech he began Thursday night, said that while farm costs were being allowed to rise, farm prices were being held down and as a result there was a growing inequity to the disadvantage of those in agriculture. Prices of manufactured goods had risen in recent months.

"We no longer have a stabilized price ceiling, the government itself has broken it," he said.

Wants Stabilized Income

There was a tendency on the part of the farmer to take the position that if he could not make a little more money he would be better off out of production.

"It is not only stabilized prices the farmer wants, it is stabilized net income," he continued. "If we stabilize farm prices and let costs go up that would be the best way

Some Sources Believe Russia Herself Badly in Need of Grain

By SYDNEY CAMPBELL

London, May 25 (Reuters) — Russia has not accepted pressing invitations to join the combined food board in Washington but if she did she might well turn up with a request for import allocations of perhaps 10,000,000 tons of grain—and be prepared to allow outside observers see how badly she needs it.

From scanty indications available she needs it very badly indeed.

Some sources believe that if Russia joined the board it would only be for the purpose of getting supplies.

Czarist Russia generally exported wheat and Soviet Russia sometimes did before the war. But no serious student of grain production ever believed that Russia ever had a real exportable surplus after providing even the minimum requirements for the subsistence of her 180,000,000 people. That was even before she suffered her appalling wartime devastation.

This view also does not take into account the threat of drought in the Ukraine reported by reputable United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration observers.

Even in good crop years the Ukraine now is a deficit rather than a surplus area, and the drought threat may be real enough.

Except on demonstration farms and in favored localities normal Russian crops might well appear drought stricken to any observer accustomed to yields in western countries. The popular idea of Russia as a boundless bountiful granary is a myth. Much of her grainlands are sub-arid. The remainder is chronically overpopulated and under-equipped—and now devastated too.

If one allowed also for the effects industrialization and an increasing population have in raising home consumption and reducing the export of primary products, it might be more realistic to expect large food exports from India rather than from Russia.

Manchurian Evacuation By Russian Troops Officially Announced

Nanking, May 25 (AP)— Completion of Russian evacuation of Manchuria was announced officially today amid new attempts to end China's internal struggle.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs said it had received official notification from the Soviet Embassy, in answer to a query sent May 4. There had been an earlier unofficial announcement of the withdrawal of Russia's occupation troops.

Edwin W. Pauley, U.S. Reparations Commissioner, announced here he soon would establish a base in Mukden to survey Manchurian industry, reported stripped by the Russians of much of its vital machinery.

The speculation about new prospects for internal peace was spurred by the visit of Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-Shek to Mukden in the personal plane of Gen. Marshall, special U. S. Envoy to China.

But there was disagreement between government and Communist spokesmen as to the effect of the government's recapture of Changchun, Manchurian capital.

"Now we can begin to talk with the Communists," said one high government party official.

"The key is not now in our hands," countered Tung Pi-Wu, a Communist spokesman. "We shall see what Chiang Kai-Shek will do."

Tung termed the government's seizure of Changchun Thursday "regrettable" and said it had complicated the situation. A peace plan proposed by the third party democratic league and accepted in principle by the Communists, was based on both sides staying out of Changchun.

The Communists today officially acknowledged Changchun's fall, saying their withdrawal from the city was completed May 22, on orders from Yenan, party headquarters.

In a dispatch from Changchun, the government central news agency said government troops under Gen. Cheng Tung-Kuo "completely mopped up remnant Communist troops" there by 6 p.m. Thursday.

Another column of government troops entered Hwaite, 27 miles north of Kungchuling and about the same distance west of Changchun, the agency said.

DR. PETIOT DIES UNDER GUILLOTINE FOR 27 SLAYINGS

Scribbled Letters to Wife and Son, Smoked Cigaret Before Going to Block

Paris, May 25 (CP)— Dr. Marcel Petiot, convicted of slaying 27 persons in the sensational "murders of the Rue La Sueur" during the German occupation, was beheaded by guillotine at La Sante prison early today.

The slight, 55-year-old physician, who allegedly collected money from his victims by promising to help them escape from Nazi occupied Paris, said "gentlemen, I am yours," before mounting the block.

His lawyer, Rene Floriot, said Petiot was half-smiling as he approached the guillotine.

At the foot of the block, he received religious rites: "To please my wife."

Floriot said Petiot was awakened shortly after 4:15 a.m. by his jailer and said: "I know what this is."

He smoked a cigaret, scribbled letters to his wife and son, and then went coolly to the prison courtyard.

Only a small group of official witnesses saw the guillotining, since public executions were banned in France in 1939. Cordons of police blocked every entrance to the prison.

Taken From Courtyard.

At 5 a.m., a lorry backed into the main gate, and emerged 10 minutes later bearing Petiot's casket. An official notice then was posted saying that he was executed at 5:05.

Thus ended one of the strangest criminal cases in France's history. Petiot had maintained at his trial that he was a leader of a mysterious resistance movement known as the "Fly Tox Gang," which executed collaboratores. He denied that he murdered for profit or that his victims were Jews and others seeking to flee from the Germans.

The physician's house in the Rue La Sueur contained a lime pit and a furnace, in both of which police found parts of human bodies. Police also charged that several bundles of expertly dismembered human limbs, which were found in the Seine and in various public parks, were left there by Petiot.

His trial last March attracted huge crowds, and Petiot kept the courtroom in an almost constant turmoil by claiming that he had invented a secret death weapon, vowing that his "secret organization" would avenge him if he were convicted, and lecturing the judge and attorneys on points of law.

Redistribution Calls For Ten More Seats

Ottawa, May 25 (CP)—A resolution was placed on the order paper of the Commons yesterday providing for repeal of the redistribution section of the British North America Act and substitution of the section increasing parliamentary representation from 245 to 255 seats.

The redistribution will take effect on termination of the present parliament, which under normal circumstances will end in 1950.

Repeal of the redistribution section—Section 51—will necessitate not only a process of legislation through the Canadian parliament but also through the British parliament.

SEAMEN ON ALL CANADA SS LINES GO ON STRIKE

Precipitated by Dockside Dispute at Montreal but Ship Sailed With Non-Union Crew

Toronto, May 25 —(CP)— The steamer Noronic today tied up at Thorold, Ont., and its crew walked off in response to the call of the Canadian Seamen's Union for a strike against Canada Steamship Lines, owner of the Noronic.

About 500 passengers on an excursion from the Detroit area were left stranded at Thorold.

The union set June 3 as the date for a general strike among its members on lake ships and coastal vessels to enforce its demand for an eight-hour day to replace the 12-hour day called for by the present contract, which contains a "no strike" clause and runs until July 31.

The strike was precipitated yesterday by a dockside dispute in Montreal when the C. S. L. freighter City of Montreal sailed with a non-union crew after a union delegate was ordered off the ship. Crew members went ashore to confer with the delegate and were discharged by the captain.

C.S.U. President J. A. (Pat) Sullivan late last night phoned A. A. McLean, chief labor relations officer of the Federal Department of Labor, demanding the non-union crew be replaced on the City of Montreal. When no guarantee of action was forthcoming the strike call was phoned to union representatives at various ports.

"The Federal Labor Department's lack of prompt action in the case of the City of Montreal is repsonsible for the strike," said Sullivan. "It is regrettable that when the labor minister wired all parties to attend a conference on Tuesday, that this company's operating manager has deliberately provoked a strike situation by locking out union members in order to bring in a partial crew of scabs and taking the vessel out of port undermanned."

Labor Minister Mitchell had invited delegates from the union and the Canadian Maritime Association, representing most Great Lakes shipowners, to meet in Ottawa Tuesday, in an attempt to avert the strike.

It was problematical whether the strike against C. S. L. would lead to an early tie-up of seamen on other steamship lines. When queried early this morning, Sullivan said "it's hard to say."

Prior to the Montreal dispute, the union had announced that one steamship company, the Quebec and Ontario Transportation Company which operates seven pulp-carrying vessels, had agreed to the union terms. A submission was sent to the National War Labor Board requesting an eight-hour day and 12 1-2-percent pay increase.

Support Promised

Among the ships affected will be the Noronic en route from Prescott to Detroit with 500 passengers. Instructions have been sent to Port Weller to issue the strike call when the vessel reaches the locks.

Support has been promised the C.S.U. by 100,000 American lakes seamen, members of the National Maritime Union. Support was also pledged yesterday by the Ontario Federation of Labor, representing thousands of Ontario trade unionists.

ROCKETS EXPLODE BOY OF FOURTEEN FATALLY INJURED

Four Other Persons Are Seriously Hurt In Brandon During Sports Program

Brandon, Man., May 25 —(CP) —A 14-year-old boy was injured fatally and four other persons, two of them children, seriously hurt early today when a box of rockets exploded as a Victoria Day sports program neared its end.

The boy was Rudy Weszniowski of Brandon. In addition to severe burns, doctors said he had multiple injuries received when trampled by the panic-stricken crowd.

In hospital in a serious condition were:

Mrs. Mary Truss, a middle-aged woman, also of Brandon, who was struck in the temple by a rocket. She was taken immediately to an operating room of Brandon general hospital, and Madeline McKenzie, 12, of Brandon, Dorothy Lock, 9, of Portage La Prairie, Man., and Thelma McKenzie, age unknown, all with serious burns and other injuries.

U.S. Coal Strike Truce Moves Into Its Final Hours

Washington, May 25 —(AP)— The United States coal strike truce went into its final hours today without a sign whether the miners will stick to their jobs or resume the 42-day walkout they interrupted two weeks ago.

President Truman's pledge to restore the strike-bound railroads to operation added a new note of urgency to the impending decision, because without coal many of the trains soon would stand idle again.

One faint hint of hope in the coal picture arose from the fact Mr. Truman did not couple his appeal to the striking rail workers with one to the miners. This could mean that the government, as boss of the seized pits, felt some assurance that the truce would be extended for further settlement talks.

Ben Morrell, deputy mine operator for the government, in a telegram to district U.M.W. unions late yesterday formally advising them of Wednesday's seizure action, said:

"I request you to urge the members of your union as loyal Americans to continue to report for work each normal week day and to produce the maximum tonnoge of coal which is vitally needed."

Already more than half of John L. Lewis's 400,000 bituminous workers had laid down their tools yesterday as the back-to-strike movement that set in with federal seizure gained momentum.

Meanwhile, as negotiations progressed there were reports that J. A. Krug, secretary of the interior, might be inclined to favor a jointly or independently-administered fund built upon a levy of not more than three and one-half percent.

However, Mr. Lewis's action yesterday in delaying any further meeting of his 250-member policy committee pending "further clarification" of the union's position led to some speculation that he regards Mr. Krug's initial position as unsatisfactory.

More Restrictions in Priorities On Coal Issued by Hon. C. D. Howe

Ottawa, May 25 —(CP)— Following up his statement on coal in the Commons yesterday, Reconstruction Minister Howe today announced further restrictive measures in the form of priorities.

Effective immediately, the following classes will share equally a first preference rating:

1. Public utilities, railways, hospitals, food processing plants like milk plants, dairies and bakeries; refrigeration plants and laundries;
2. Cargo ships;
3. Dwelling, apartment houses and hotels.

In the case of the first group, the preference is limited to a tonnage of coal from all sources which, when added to the stock on hand, is sufficient to meet consumption requirements to June 30.

In the case of the third group, preference is given provided the consumer has less than five days' supply on hand. The preference is limited to the consumer's actual consumption requirements for five days or a minimum truck load — whichever is greater.

Suppliers, unable to give the required first preference because of lack of sufficient coal, are asked to notify the consumer and coal controller. Suppliers are also asked not to make any deliveries of bituminous coal which would jeopardize their ability to supply first preference consumers.

A directive from the coal controller covering the general situation says that preference deliveries can not be made to office buildings, stores, schools, theatres, public buildings for heat or hot water heating except where such service is needed to provide heat and hot water for private apartments, medical consulting rooms or the care of babies, sick persons or the aged.

Delivery may be made, from mines, in railway cars or ships in quantities as equitably distributed as possible, giving preference to consumers in the first and second groups having less than 10 days' supplies on hand.

Truman Takes Rail Strike to Congress; Troops on Alert

President Tells Strikers To Return to Jobs Today

Washington, May 25 (AP)— President Truman today directed the breaking-off of further government efforts to mediate the rail dispute with striking unions.

At the same time he began efforts to reach an agreement with the other 18 non-striking rail Brotherhoods.

A presidential announcement said these negotiations, starting at noon E.D.T. by Dr. John R. Steelman, will be on the basis of the President's compromise proposal for a wage increase of 18 1-2 cents an hour with changes in working rules to be deferred for one year.

Washington, May 25 (AP)—The full impact of the railroad strike tumbled United States economy topsy-turvy today as President Truman promised action designed to restore service and end the "terrible havoc" resulting from the strike.

As the second full day of the paralysis in rail operations threatened to imperil all phases of business and industry, Mr. Truman, in a stern ultimatum, told the strikers that if they did not return to their jobs by 5 p.m. E.D.T. today the army would take over the trains.

Even as Mr. Truman delivered the ultimatum in an address last night, troops were being moved to "strategic locations" in anticipation of orders for protection of workers obeying his request to return to work.

The 5 p.m. deadline set by Mr. Truman also was the time he was to appear before an extraordinary joint session of Congress to report on the rail crisis.

There was no definite indication immediately of the reaction to the strikers to the President's back-to-work appeal. However, early reports from locals of the striking Brotherhoods of Trainmen in Buffalo, N.Y., Kansas City and Houston, Tex., were that his plea would be ignored.

There was no comment from Albanley Johnston and A. F. Whitney, Presidents of the Engineers and Trainmen, respectively, after they had listened to Mr. Truman's radio speech. The President, who charged they were responsible for the strike, directed his back-to-work appeal to the union rank and file.

Effects Widespread.

The President said that the effects of the strike were widespread, creating shortages in fuel and raw materials and threatening to bring chaos to food distribution. He asserted that the country's welfare must come first and that if service is not resumed immediately thousands will starve.

Service on 227,335 miles of tracks in the United States was slowed to a trickle as the Office of Defence Transportation struggled to mobilize all non-rail transport facilities.

Meanwhile Senator Claude Pepper (Dem.-Fla.) declared after a post-midnight conference with Mr. Whitney that he believed the unions would be willing to end the strike immediately under an interim agreement with the

'Calamitous' Term Used to Describe U.S. Rail Strike

(By The Canadian Press)

The term "calamitous" was used in the House of Commons Friday by Reconstruction Minister Howe, and elsewhere by industrialists, to describe the situation created for the central provinces by the paralyzing United States railway tie-up.

Mr. Howe used the term with special reference to the already critical Canadian coal situation, but every indication pointed to a gradual slow-down in all Canadian transport and allied industries if the U. S. strike continues. A consequent closing down of other Canadian industries and mass unemployment, through lack of supplies, was a distinct possibility.

It was impossible to estimate how far the strike would go toward completely throttling Canada's reconversion program, but such a result was envisaged if the strike is of long duration.

Effects of the strike were immediately apparent on the Canadian points nearest the U. S. border, with rail and motor coach travellers, or would-be travellers, caught in a transportation tangle that hourly became worse.

Effect of the U. S. strike was also felt on Canada's West Coast, where Canadian railway officials prepared for a flood of requests from U. S. citizens wishing to go east via Canadian lines, but it was impossible to estimate how much traffic could be handled.

4,000 Affected at St. Thomas

First Canadian workers affected by the strike were between 4,000 and 5,000 railway workers at St. Thomas, who operate and service U.S. lines running through that railway terminal. A crippling effect on the economic life of that Lake Erie centre of 18,000 persons, where the railway payrolls bulk large, was an immediate prospect.

In the Toronto area, coal dealers pointed out their stock-piles are built up during the summer months and the railway strike, coming on top of the serious U.S. coal strike could create an acute situation there this winter.

In an effort to stave off a threatening famine in fruits and vegetables, Canadian truckers talked of organizing fleets of trucks to be sent to the southern states for supplies, if a crisis develops.

An official of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange said oranges and lemons will vanish from dealers shelves within a

FORTY PARISHES OVER OBJECTIVE

The Anglican Advance Appeal Campaign will most likely reach its objective of $147,000.00 in the Diocese of Ontario this weekend. Approximately some forty parishes are well over the top of their respective quotas. Should the financial drive reach the $150,000.00 mark, an all-time high record will have been attained in the Diocese of Ontario, which is leading in a nationwide campaign for $4,300,000.00.

9½-lb. PICKEREL HOOKED AT O'BRIEN'S BRIDGE ON HOLIDAY

There were some fancy bags of fish hauled from rivers and lakes of the district over the holiday, but the prize catch reported to this office at least, was that bagged by W. R. Dove who went a-hunting for pickerel.

Mr. Dove should remember May 24, 1946. For he took himself quietly to the former O'Brien's Bridge, prepared his bait and settled down to his favorite sport. To make a long fishing story short, he got himself five handsome pickerel with little or no effort, the prize beauty tipping the scales at nine and one-half pounds.

And that one tops the record for the holiday fishing, unless a bashful Izaak Walton is hiding a bigger catch beneath the figurative fishing bushel.

EMPIRE DAY PROGRAM AT K. G. SCHOOL

Traditional Empire Day program was observed by pupils of King George School on Thursday with a special play "Children of the Empire" depicting costumes and customs of the various countries in the Empire.

Barbara MacDonald acted as chairman for the Empire Day program which consisted of special readings and recitations in keeping with the meaning of the day.

The entire school joined in singing O Canada while Robt. Reid followed with a reading "The Empire." The play "Children of the Empire" was given by Miss Wedden's room, Grade IV, the seven nations each represented by a girl in native costume. Each pupil gave a brief address stating why the nation she represented was proud to belong to the Empire.

Other numbers on the program included a recitation "The Union Jack," by Ronald Fargey; a chorus "Salute to Canada" by Grade VII pupils, recitation "Canada" by Marion Nevery. The entire school joined in singing "Rule Britannia." Principal E. S. Fairman gave a brief address on why Empire Day is celebrated.

Donald B. Boyce Temporary Pres. Optimist Club

An enthusiastic organization meeting was held Thursday evening at the Old Taven Bar B-Q to perfect plans for forming the Optimist Club of Belleville, which will become a part of the Optimist International Organization when establishment of the local club is complete.

Donald B. Boyce, J. Boyce and Sons, was elected temporary President of the club, and Alex Cunningham, Loblaw Groceterias, was chosen as temporary Secretary-Treasurer.

"Optimist International has become famous throughout North America because of its devotion to high ideals, and because of the services it performs in every community where a club exists," President Boyce told the new members.

"Not only do Optimist Clubs take part in every worthwhile civic activity, but they also have earned distinction for their wholehearted and successful efforts to aid boys.

Friend of the Boy

"Their slogan is 'Friend of the Boy' and their interest in providing leadership, educational opportunities, recreation and courage for needy or friendless boys is an outstanding tribute to their own idealism.

"We shall be proud to become Belleville's representatives of Optimist International."

After the local club has met the initial requirements, Boyce announced, a ceremony will be held at which officers of the international organization will present the charter to the Optimist Club of Belleville.

Inspiring Address

An inspiring address was given by Optimist Sheldon Eaton, recently transferred to Belleville as manager of the Canadian National Express Office. Speaking as a charter member and ex-President of his club in Woodstock, Eaton told of its founding in 1940; of the later building of "Optimist Centre," now the headquarters of their numerous activities; of the work among delinquent boys; the establishing of "Teen-Town"; and the active assistance given by various ladies' organizations in Woodstock.

The Governor of the Fifteenth District, in which the Optimist Club of Belleville will be located, is Frank L. Mallory of Windsor, Ont.; Leo Larkin, Montreal, Que., is Lieutenant-Governor of the district.

By-law Committee Formed

Also selected at Thursday's meeting was a by-laws committee which included Clifford Murphy, Robert Kidd, and Robert Stewart.

Headquarters of the Optimist International Organization is in St. Louis, Boyce stated. International officers include the President, Carl C. Donough, Portland, Oregon; Vice Presidents: Earl C. Dahlem, San Francisco, Cal., Raymond H. Fryberger, Minneapolis, Minn.; Secretary-Treasurer, Russell F. Meyer, St. Louis.

SPECIAL SPEAKER AT CHRIST CHURCH

The special preacher in Christ Church on Sunday night will be the Reverend R. F. Palmer of the Society of St. John the Evangelist at Bracebridge, Ontario. Bowlers Enjoy Perfect Weather For Opening

Under a brilliant sun and with a large number of bowlers in attendance, the bowling season was officially opened at the greens on Yeomans Street Friday afternoon. George Pauley, president of the club welcomed the old and new members and hoped for them a successful year and one in which fellowship would prevail. The flag was raised by Ray Zufelt and George Watkin took charge of the draw for the trebles tournament. There were 9 greens in perfect condition in play which required 54 bowlers and this was one of the largest crowds that has been out for the opening in many years. The members viewed the recent renovations to the clubhouse and were highly pleased with the new arrangements.

The competition was very keen for so early in the season and Fred Harper's rink emerged as the highest two-game winner of the afternoon. Other two-game winners were Cliff Argue, Wilfred Price and Ray Zufelt. Highest one-game winner was George Watkin, the others being Alf. Symons, Ernie Vanner and Cyril McBride. Two rinks were tied for the lowest two-game losers, C. B. McGuire and Elgin Ford, Mr. McGuire winning the prize in the draw. Suitable prizes were given the winners.

Rocket Crashes Through Window

Residents of Gordon Street sat on their verandas and lawns last night, enjoying a brilliant pyrotechnics display as rockets soared into the air to burst into colorful flashes of light, and smaller firecrackers added their noise and color to the show.

They didn't know that something of a serious nature had happened until Mrs. Roy Messervey, 87 Gordon Street suddenly rushed out on her lawn and started shouting for help. Neighbors rushed to the scene and assisted in extinguishing a fire that had suddenly blazed in curtains of a house of a neighbor of hers.

It appears that Mrs. Messervey was firing off rockets when suddenly one of them, instead of soaring high into the air, went into a tail-spin and ripped through an upstairs window igniting the curtains and doing other damage.

Neighbors, viewing the holiday fireworks show did not know what had happened until Mrs. Messervey called for assistance. No one was in the room at the time. The quick action and presence of mind of Mrs. Messervey averted more serious consequences.

C. of C. to Request City Council To Provide Necessary Facilities To Build Fifty Housing Units

Housing Enterprises Ltd. Discusses Question With Directors of Chamber

Members of the local city council at their next meeting will be asked to pass on a Chamber of Commerce recommendation requesting the city to provide the necessary facilities to permit the erection of 50 housing units in Belleville by Housing Enterprises Ltd.

Such was the decision of directors of the Chamber of Commerce at their regular Thursday luncheon when they unanimously passed the above recommendation after hearing the need of additional housing accommodation in this city, and of the program which Housing Enterprises Ltd., had to offer.

Attending the meeting were Col. C. S. Craig of Housing Enterprises Ltd., and Charles D. Lundy, chairman of the rehabilitation committee of the local branch of the Canadian Legion, who presented figures relative to a recent survey made by the Legion of local housing conditions.

Maintain For 50 Years

In outlining the program of his organization, Mr. Craig told that Housing Enterprises construct, operate and maintain housing rental projects for a period of fifty years after which time the housing units are turned back to the municipality. Rentals would range between $35 and $50 per month on a basis of two, three or four bedrooms, while construction would be of concrete blocks, brick veneer, or of frame.

The corporation would be called upon to provide the necessary land and to supply pavements and sanitary services to the units. Whenever possible houses are built in a separate sub-division with many corporations puchasing land outside their present limits for the purpose. In Kingston 74 such units are being constructed, it was stated.

Could Not be Afforded by Vets Claim

Legion representative Mr. Lundy felt that houses renting at between $35 and $50 per month could not be afforded by the many veterans in Belleville needing living accommodation. These veterans, he stated, had indicated as result of the survey that on the average they could not afford to pay more than $27.50 per month.

Mr. Craig, however, pointed out that the average returned veteran who felt entitled a home, actually had no idea of present day building costs. "These veterans feel entitled to a good home," said Mr. Craig, "but they have no prospects of paying a rental which would justify the type of house they want."

It was also pointed out by Mr. Craig that the erection of 50 housing units in Belleville renting at the higher figure would indirectly provide additional living accommodation in the lower bracket. "So in helping the person who can afford a better type of home, we also assist those in the lower income bracket," he stated.

Writes Off Cost

According to the present program Housing Enterprises Ltd. writes off the cost of houses in 50 years and therefore fairly good type of construction must be put in or maintenance costs would be tremendously increased.

Here Jamieson Bone interjected that what was needed in Canada was construction of modern flats. "No young man can afford a $6,000 house and I don't understand why the authorities cannot see this," he said.

Construction of housing units by Housing Enterprises in no way interferes with legitimate builders, according to the organization representative who assured that if private interests could build in the same time his organization would much rather this be the case.

Local Contractors Hired

"Wherever possible," he said, "local contractors were hired as it was realised that if outside contractors are hired, more outside labor is necessary."

Mayor Follwell asked what arrangements the corporation would have to make if Housing Enterprise considered erecting houses in Belleville. In reply the advantages of a separate sub-division were pointed out, while the city would be expected to build pavements and provide services for which the corporation would be paid $400 per building lot.

President of the Chamber of Commerce, Lorne McDougall declared that Belleville must look at its housing situation in a broad sense and in the light of future requirements. "We must avoid taking action now which we would regret later," he said.

Mr. McDougall pointed to the growth in population seen in Belleville since the turn of the century and to the need for additional industry in Belleville. On question by Mr. McDougall it was stated that four months after the start, a percentage of the 50 housing units would be ready for occupancy.

Takes Own Gamble

Mayor Follwell wanted to know if any guarantee that all houses would be fully rented would have to be given before Housing Enterprise would construct houses in Belleville. In reply Mr. Craig stated if following a survey of the city it was decided to build, his organization took its own gamble. Jamieson Bone then moved for the recommendation to council asking that necessary facilities be provided.

Following confirmation of the Chamber of Commerce recommendation by council, Housing Enterprise will immediately undertake a survey of the city.

Recently appointed secretary to the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. John B. Badgley, was in attendance at the meeting, it being announced by President McDougall that next week Mr. Badgley would go to Toronto to acquire information regarding the fulfilment of his new position.

Thefts of Fish From Nets Are Reported

Local Provincial Police are checking closely into reported thefts of fish from the nets of commercial fishermen operating in the immediate Belleville district, it was indicated at county police court on Thursday when five local youths appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills on fish theft charges.

The five youths were also charged with the theft of a boat in connection with the fish theft charges. Three of the accused were given suspended sentence for one year by the magistrate, while two had their cases enlarged for one week to permit them to acquire the services of counsel.

Thefts of fish from local commercial fishermen have been going on for several months according to Provincial Police who are making a concerted effort to ascertain the persons responsible. Charges against the five accused youths were laid following investigation by Provincial Constable James Driscoll.

Johnston Hillier, Front Street, was found guilty on a careless driving charge arising out of a motor accident on Highway No. 2 approximately two weeks ago and was fined $10 and $10.50 costs, while he also paid $13.00 for "having" liquor.

Saturday Market

The offering of tulips in a wide variety of colors and of other spring flowers presented a colorful aspect to the customary weekend market here on Saturday. Tulips sold generally for 75 cents the dozen.

Egg prices held firm at 40 cents the dozen with a few extra weights bringing 43 cents.

Scarcity of meat in city butcher stores resulted in a keen demand for fowl with supplies being well picked over long before eleven o'clock. Price ranged generally from 40 to 45 cents the pound. The few fish which were offered were quickly bought up with whitefish bringing 40 cents and lake trout 50 cents the pound.

Transplanting stocks were again plentiful with strawberry plants, raspberry canes, tomato and cabbages being freely offered at regular prices.

Radishes were quite plentiful at a dime the bunch, while rhubarb and onions also sold at a dime and asparagus two bunches for 25 cents. A few farmers offered certified seed potatoes at $3.75 per bag.

'Call to Arms' to Student Veterans Made by Viscount Alexander To Shoulder Life's Responsibilities

Toronto, May 25. (CP)—Addressing a convocation ceremony at the University of Toronto Thursday, Viscount Alexander told his listeners: "In these times when it seems the lights of civilization are burning but dimly, your work and activities are more important than ever before."

In a speech prepared for delivery following his award of an honorary degree, the Governor-General issued a "Call to Arms" to students veterans.

"We have won the war, but we have not yet won the peace," he declared. "That is the great problem which faces us all today. The Call to Arms I make is this:

"When you step from these halls bearing a degree from this famous university, go out into the world as your fathers did, ready and willing to shoulder the responsibilities which life will bring you and welcome the opportunities of leadership.

"You to whom I speak are the salt of the earth. You have done your duty on the battlefields of Europe from the Mediterranean to the Baltic, in the air and on the high seas. . . .Now you, as the young generation, the new army, go forth into the world armed and equipped to carry on the fight for the salvation and progress of our civilization. Much will depend on you."

A university's value was measured by the worth of its graduates, and "according to the constructive work they contribute to the community, so will the public be convinced that a university education is worthwhile. If that be the case, money and support for institutions of learning and research will surely be forthcoming."

He paid tribute to the contribution made by the university to winning the war and noted that of the 15,000 students expected to enroll at the university next year, 7,000 or 8,000 would be ex-servicemen and women.

A university education was not only a just tribute and award to those who won the war for us, but a wise and sensible step for the future."

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, May 23 —(CP)— Double bills are tricky things to enact and also to attend. The plays involved must contrast and yet the mood of the first must set the stage for that of the second. The actors must change costume and character in 10 minutes instead of overnight. The audience — an integral part of the play in any seriously-intended drama — works twice as hard for its pleasure.

When the Old Vic Players undertook to present "Oedipus" and "The Critic" in one evening they set themselves a difficult test in versatility; but they came off not only unscathed but with their collective reputation increased.

The former, a classic Greek tragedy in which the translation of W. B. Yeats has sustained the inevitability but perhaps lost much of the poetry, is highlighted by Laurence Olivier's powerful portrayal of the damned, doomed king of Thebes.

Mr. Olivier comes back strong in the central role of Mr. Puff in "The Critic," one of Sheridan's jollier satires which hurls its barbs at actors, playwrights, critics and the press at large without anybody being mortally wounded. The 18th-century hilarity at a rehearsal of a singularly witless play-within-a-play is just what the audience wants after the "pity and terror" of "Oedipus;" and Mr. Olivier and his crew pull few comic punches.

Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey Honored

Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, who for ten years has been Canadian High Commissioner to the United Kingdom in the most trying period in history, the time of the Second World War, is on his way home to Canada bearing honors in recognition of his long and unwearied service. On the eve of his departure from London, Mr. Massey received in a quiet and informal ceremony in Buckingham Palace the decoration as a Companion of Honor from the hands of His Majesty King George. The honor is bestowed upon men and women who have given outstanding national service and is limited in membership to His Majesty the King and fifty Companions.

Mr. and Mrs. Massey in their official capacity in Britain have been able to render to the Dominion service of the greatest importance. The duties of the office have been carried out with marked ability by Mr. Massey and during the long war years Mr. and Mrs. Massey have been able to meet and entertain and help many of the young Canadians on their great mission of service in the war. Canada's part in the war brought many extra duties and responsibilities upon Mr. Massey and Mrs. Massey.

The honor which he has received is an honor to Canada and one of her great sons.

Their Excellencies Welcomed

Their Excellencies Viscount Alexander and Lady Alexander have begun their visits to Canadian cities which will bring this famous soldier, one of the great military commanders of this age and of history, and his gracious lady into contact with Canadians everywhere. This week they were in Montreal and in Toronto and the reception which they received was an indication of the warmth of the welcome they will receive everywhere in the Dominion in their five-year residence in Canada. In Toronto Viscount Alexander said it was his aim and that of Viscountess Alexander "to have a share in your lives and to win your friendship." That they will succeed there is every assurance.

The new Governor-General as Sir Harold Alexander was known to Canadians in the Mediterranean theatre of conflict. There troops from Canada came to know the brilliance of this great soldier and there he learned to know Canadians. Besides, his family and that of Viscountess Alexander have had ties with the Dominion in earlier days. In Toronto the Viscount told that his family had considerable property in Nova Scotia and Lady Alexander's great-great-grandfather, the Duke of Richmond, was a Governor-General of Canada about a century ago. "My own grandfather was in Canada a long time ago with his regiment, the Coldstream Guards," said the Governor-General.

The Governor-General and the Viscountess already feel at home in Canada, the Governor-General said in an address at Toronto University where he was given the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Canadians have the greatest admiration for the soldier and his military record in the late war as pointed out by President Sydney Smith of the university, who referred to the place His Excellency held in military annals as a result of his great achievement in bringing the British army off the Beaches of Dunkerque, in retrieving the disaster in Burma in 1942 and in commanding the conquering British armies through the war in the Mediterranean from Egypt to Sicily and Italy.

His Excellency paid high tribute to the importance of the work of universities towards the Allied victory over Germany and Japan, indicating that their research had been of the greatest value to the United Nations cause. For the students he upheld the high ideal which should dominate their efforts and noted the great privilege which was theirs as students.

Montreal and Toronto have revealed to Their Excellencies the loyalty of the Dominion and the spirit of Canadians. Every place which they will visit will vie in paying honor to the representatives of His Majesty the King.

Typical Victoria Day

Victoria Day, familiarly known as the "Twenty-fourth of May," lived up to all expectations and its record as one of the most enjoyable days when the whole nation and countryside enjoys a real spring holiday. Though probabilities heralded the possibility of light rain, but a very few drops fell here, practically unnoticed. To the highways and rural roads great numbers went, to sports events and other enjoyments went many. Others in the morning put finishing touches on their lawns and did some work on their victory gardens, one of the most laudable of jobs on this holiday in this year when food is so essential.

As ever the day was a day of the keenest enjoyment for the children. It was so in the late nineteenth century and it was so even after Queen Victoria passed away for the celebration always took in the school pupils. In the old rhyme

"The Twenty-fourth of May
Is the Queen's birthday
If you don't give us a holiday
We'll all run away."

The boys and girls did not have to run away for there was always a holiday on the 24th.

Fireworks put in an appearance again after the lull during the war, among them, rockets of quite long flight and range.

The day still preserves many of the features of the holiday years ago. It is a spring holiday one of the most pleasant times of the year, it is given over to the young and to their elders alike. It is a form of celebration with fireworks. It is a general holiday in which all participate. It may perhaps have lost some of its intensity and color but it still is characteristic of the day observed for many decades.

It still offers tribute to the memory of the great Queen whose reign was one of the greatest in history from the standpoint of progress.

Borstal

The use of Dartmoor as a Borstal institution will shortly come to an end. New premises are being acquired, and old establishments returned, which will provide additional accommodation for about 1,500 boys in the course of the next 18 months, says The London New Statesman. With existing accommodation, excluding Dartmoor, this will provide for a total Borstal population of 3,300, against a total number of youths sentenced to Borstal detention of nearly 3,000 at the end of February.

British Jet Propulsion Advance

Details of a new and powerful "straight" jet propulsion engine for aircraft have been announced by Major Halford, Chairman of the United Kingdom Aircraft Company, De Hahilland. Known as the "Ghost" the new engine is more powerful than the Goblin engine which powers the Vampire. It develops a five thousand pound static thrust, which is equivalent to twelve thousand horsepower from an engine driving an airscrew. In announcing the new engine, Major Halford predicted six hundred and fifteen miles per hour, eighty-five-ton jet planes, to take fifty passengers from London to New York in seven hours.

Newspaper Facts

The employment of 150,000 boys in Canada as newspaper carrier boys has created a source of executive manpower according to John Webb, South African game hunter and lecturer.

The difference between a bull and a cow is that the cow does no damage in a china shop, says New Zealand News Letter.

That, now is the view in Parramatta, N.S.W., because a cow lumbered through a china shop there — some of the passages between the shelves were only three feet wide — and out into the back yard without breaking a single thing.

He buys honey too dear who licks it from thorns.—Old Proverb.

GREAT GRANDMOTHERS

Some there are who never see
What their children grow to be
Though on earth they'd choose to stay
They are early called away.
Others (larger seems the sum)
Doting grandmas may become.
Then a few (and lucky they)
Who for great grandchildren stay.

In a far off western place
Three there are of charm and grace
Living on (or so I've heard)
For the generation third.
Great grandmothers, bright of eye,
Keen of mind and body spry,
By the Lord allowed to wait
For so happy an estate.

So to them I pen a toast
Who are favored more than most.
Few the honors quite so proud
As the one to them allowed.
Few permitted here to claim
Such a joy and such a name.
Few on whom such blessings fall.
Here's to great grandmothers all!

Whitehall Notebook

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 23 —(CP)— Ivor Thomas, 40-year-old parliamentary secretary to the civil aviation ministry, is a mild-voiced but determined Welsh journalist who has decided to honor his office by learning to fly an airplane himself.

He is taking instruction from a civil-aviation ministry pilot and says he has found flying "the most natural form of locomotion in the world." This former infantry officer who was editorial writer on the News Chronicle before the war is something of an authority on speedy movement. He was a notable runner 20 years ago, winning top races on the Continent as well as in the United Kingdom.

Top Hat M. P. Sir William Darling, Conservative M.P. for Edinburgh South and former Lord Provost of the Scottish capital, recently demonstrated a member's right to sit in the House with his hat on his head.

For the occasion he chose a handsome silk topper, which even in London is unusual today. He had a long morning coat and striped trousers, a hard winged collar and thick black tie. Every time he rose to ask a question, the Labor members cheered and the opposition cheered back.

Sir William had a pleasant fantasy to follow when he spoke of the plan of Hugh Dalton, chancellor of the exchequer, to have excise licences permitting serving drinks in aircraft. It would, he suggested, be a new experience to acquire a hangover in licenced premises in the stratosphere but there was an R.A.F. theory that a quick excursion into the air was the soundest cure for the morning-after feeling.

U.S. Declared Unrestricted Sub Warfare Dec. 7, '41

Nuernberg, May 25 —(AP)— Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, wartime United States commander in the Pacific, stated in a deposition introduced at the international military tribunal's war crimes trial that the United States ordered unrestricted submarine and air warfare against Japan Dec. 7, 1941.

His answers were sought by counsel for Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz of the Germany navy, who sought to show there were many parallels between American undersea warfare in the Pacific and that of Germany in the Atlantic, where Doenitz issued "sink on sight" directives to his U-boat packs.

Admiral Nimitz said the American order "was justified by Japanese attacks on that date on United States bases and on both armed and unarmed ships and nationals without warning or declaration of war." The order was issued the day of the Pearl Harbor attack.

BRITISH INVENTION

London (CP)—A British invention that attracted much attention recently was a thrust borer to facilitate underground pipe and cable installation without road disturbance. This machine can be operated by one or two men and guarantees accurate alignment of each thrust tube.

32 Families Left Homeless By $500,000 Fire

Chicoutimi, Que., May 25—(CP)—Residents of Riviere-du-Moulin, a small village a few miles east of this Lake St. John centre, today took stock of a disastrous fire that late yesterday wiped out an entire block and left 32 families homeless. No serious injuries were reported.

The blaze, which broke out in the shed of Arthur Gagnon, caused damages estimated at $500,000, sent six firemen and two women to hospital and necessitated treatment for some half dozen other persons.

Firemen from Chicoutimi and nearby Arvida were on the scene shortly after the blaze was discovered but gasoline and oil, stored in a building housing the roads department garage, hampered efforts of the firefighters and the blaze raged through 14 homes and seriously damaged a number of others before being brought under control. Most of the dwellings were of wooden construction.

Some residents of threatened homes, most of them containing more than one family, were able to remove some of their furniture but so rapid was the advance of the flames, that most persons lost the great majority of their belongings.

Homeless families found temporary shelter with neighbors and in religious communities. Population of Riviere-du-Moulin is about 2,000 persons.

Rev. Omer Carrier, assistant Parish priest from the Chicoutimi Cathedral, was driven around the fringe of the affected area during the height of the fire and exhorted all to pray for rain. Shortly after, rain fell for some 20 minutes although the official weather report for the region had not forecast it.

Eye-witnesses said the brief shower aided the firemen and confined the blaze to the area already burning.

An emergency medical station was set up on the hospital grounds where a number of persons received treatment. Ambulances also were on hand to transport the injured.

Manpower Surplus Italian Problem

Rome—(CP)—More than ever before Italy today looks upon its abundant manpower — the only exportable surplus it has — to dig the country out of the morass into which the war and 20 years of Fascism have plunged it.

Shipping and the tourist trade which once helped balance Italy's budget are gone.

The number of unemployed is estimated at 3,000,000. More than half are unskilled laborers. Agriculture's ability to absorb them has been lessened because many fields still are mined or covered with war-produced swamps.

The ministry of labor is looking for outside help to draw off manpower. This can come chiefly in two forms:

1. Emigration about which the Italian government has hopes, but no delusions.
2. Specific contracts whereby Italy can process other countries' raw materials, paying for them with labor.

Rome's Voce Republicana said that the spirit in Italy today is such that "15 million men would willingly leave tomorrow for any part of the globe." Pope Pius chose this theme recently when he gave a group of Americans a private audience — among them Ugo Carusi, United States commissioner of immigration. The Pontiff expressed hope that gates would be opened to immigrants, saying that "immigration could help solve Europe's saddest problem."

South America Silent.

But while officials at the ministry of labor have hopes, there are, as yet, few results. No word of a welcome for Italian workers has been received by the Italian government from South American countries, including Brazil and Peru.

There are, however, hopes that requests for Italian workmen will be made and that doors will be opened to immigrants, especially in South America, Belgium, France, Spain and perhaps England.

Negotiations with France for 25,000 miners to dig coal that France desperately needs are stalemated because of France's ruling to protect its own currency, that none of the earnings of the miners shall be sent back to their families in Italy.

The Italian press is carrying almost daily articles of arrangements whereby British wool and cotton, Swedish wool and other raw materials will be worked by Italian factories, returning in payment part of the processed goods. Circles close to the ministry of labor, however, said that the only contract thus far negotiated is with Norway, whereby that country supplies wool and cotton for Italy to process and pays for the processed goods with codfish.

There is considerable interest on the part of private foreign capital in Italian labor, which is a bargain on the international labor market. For example, an Italian workman today receives an average of $22 to $24 monthly.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed letters, not more than one page or 100 words long, pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper.

Readers addressing letters to Dr. Brady will please include the word "Canada" on their return envelopes, as these letters have to be forwarded to Dr. Brady. And it is requested that readers use standard size envelopes that will hold a small booklet

THE AUTOINTOXICATION BUNK

After reading your booklet (The Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene—for copy send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope) I tried your advice to pay no attention to missing a day or even two days but let nature take its course, writes an engineer and surveyor, I tried it and found it works. Now I take no laxatives at all and I no longer have autointoxication if I do miss a day or two days...Dr.——— was of the other school—he said if you didn't have a movement after each meal you would have autointoxication...(C R. A.)

Well, there you are agan. On the one hand I teach physiology and on the other hand the charlatan you mention (he was not a doctor of any legally recognized school, had no bona fide doctorate degree) scares the living daylights out of you with that absurd teaching, and you poor, gullible folks, being ignorant of physiology and all that there stuff—which is not nice enough to include in a common school, high school or college education—are caught in between as usual. To you it is just another instance of the doctors disagreeing—for you credulous laymen are perverse and childish about taking any slick merchant at his word if he has the cheek to call himself "Doctor."

Now if you are crammed full of knowledge of the sort usually fed prospective suckers by these fake "doctors" you will probably want to flabbergast me. "If autointoxication doesn't happen, how do you explain the—(here you enumerate your symptoms)—I invariably get if I let more than 24 hours pass...?"

For the benefit of readers, I quote from Howell's Textbook of Physiology (there is no better authority):

"In the large intestine protein putrefaction is a constant and normal occurrence."

You may brush me aside, my dear wiseacres, but I do hope you will not brush Howell aside in your blind adherence to the singular pathology taught by your pet charlatan.

If protein putrefaction (bacterial decomposition of nitrogenous material) is a normal part of digestion, why worry about it, sucker?

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Talbot's Solution

I have tried all over town to get diluted Talbot's solution as suggested in your booklet "Save Your Teeth," but no one has it. (E.L.)

Answer—Diluted Talbot's Solution may be prepared by any druggist, after the formula for Glycerite of Iodine and Zinc Iodide given in the National Formulary, which is a standard formula book for all drugstores. How to use it for chronic gingivitis (gum inflammation) and pyorrhea is described in booklet "Save Your Teeth"—for copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

Atrocity

The school doctor said his tonsils were too large and he would not be admitted to school next term if...he was 13 and had never had colds, ear trouble or anything, was quite healthy, but we had his tonsils removed and he died two weeks after the operation of lung abscess. (Mrs. C. M. S.)

Answer—I have said here repeatedly that in my opinion tonsillectomy is unjustifiable for merely enlarged tonsils. I assure you that the only surgery I would permit in any case of enlarged tonsils and/of adenoids, is the clipping of the tonsils (tonsillotomy) with the instrument called tonsillotome—which can be done under local anesthesia with as little risk or difficulty as extraction of a tooth involves.

Just Don't Kiss the 'Phone

One woman here in the office insists on sponging the telephone mouthpiece with (a nostrum purporting to be "antiseptic") before she will telephone—she says it is not because she thinks the rest of us are dangerous but that doctors advise it. (H. A.)

Answer—There is no danger in using a telephone if you do not touch the mouthpiece with your lips.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How does one change his name?

Although it is customary for a person to bear the name of his parents, he is under no legal obligation to do so, and in the United States anybody may change part or all of his name at will, provided he does it in good faith and for an honest purpose.

If he desires he may change his name simply by adopting a different one, without any legal process whatever.

In the early days of this country the formal procedure of changing one's name was for him to petition the State legislature.

Now most of the States have statutes covering the subject. As a rule these statutes do not repeal the common-law privilege of changing one's name at will without legal formality. They merely supply an additional method, which consists of applying to a court to authorize the change. Such applications are generally granted as a matter of course and the court order serves as a public record and as a means of identification. In a few cases courts have held that after a person has changed his name by legal process he is not entitled to the privilege of changing it again at will.

The Naturalization Act of 1906 provided: "It shall be lawful, at the time and as part of the naturalization of any alien, to make a decree changing the name of said alien, and his certificate of naturalization shall be issued to him in accordance therewith."

Should the alien not have his name changed when he is naturalized he may do so later like any other citizen.

In 1931 Senator James Cousens, of Michigan, requested Judge Henry S. Hulbert, of Detroit, to deny the petition of Abraham Dworkin, to have his name changed to Albert Cousens, the same name as that of the Senator's brother. Judge Hulbert agreed with Cousens and denied the petition on the ground that the change in name was "against public interest" and might tend to confuse identities.

In 1942 Federal District Judge George A. Welsh, of Philadelphia, refused the request of 54 new citizens to change their names when they received their final citizenship papers. The judge, after saying "national origin is of utmost importance" in war time, told the applicants that "the local courts are open to you if you want to change your last names, but the records of the Federal courts which show your original national origin shall be kept intact and unchanged for the duration."

At this time Helen was asked to take a seat of honor under a large white bell and Mrs. James Reynolds carried in a silver tray of gifts and little two-year-old Nancy Ellen Reynolds dressed as a bride wheeled in a nicely decorated carriage of towels. Miss Tena Watt on behalf of the neighbors asked Helen to accept these gifts. After unwrapping them Helen graciously thanked each one. She also invited them to visit her in her new home. Spring Formal Of B.C.I. Most Enjoyable Affair

In a setting reminiscent of pre-war Holland, the annual Spring formal of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School was held Thursday night in the gymnasia of the school. The decorations centred around a large windmill at one end of the gym. Warm yellow light pouring from its windows lit up the giant flowers surrounding it, as well as the gay red window boxes filled with artificial flowers at the side of the room. A white bench stood at the other side of the room before a lattice covered with climbing roses. Railings and ceiling were festooned with green and white streamers and colored flowers. Opposite the windmill the Commodores' Orchestra provided music from a purple and white stand, surrounded by a white picket fence. Decorations were under the direction of the Girls' Athletic Society and Miss I. Morton.

Receiving the guests were Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Currie, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Finkle, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Smith, Miss Barbara Maxwell and Mr. Scott Denton.

Delicious refreshments were served in the cafeteria and green room under the direction of Mrs. Embury and the Household Science Department. The rooms had been beautifully decorated in rose, blue and white streamers by Mr. George Manjuris. The large number who attended made the dance one of the most successful ever to be held at the school.

Fashion Flashes

ROMANCE AND moonlight, plus soft fleecy clouds, all seem tangled up in a dream of a summer evening wrap, a cloud of white fox worked into a cape with bands of white chiffon shining with flowers made of multi-colored sequins alternating with the fur.

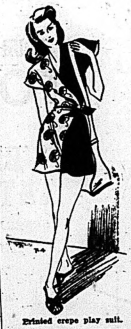
Indicated for an important afternoon event is a lovely frock of pure silk crepe, black, with a scattered design of white birds and green leaves. The shoulder scarf forms a cape, one side of which continues around the skirt as a tunic that ends in a point near the hem in back.

So what! Who cares if it is raining? It means a chance to wear a colorful raincoat, one of nylon twill in pale yellow, or a coat of luscious pink satin in cotton and rayon.

Fantasy has invaded the blouse field. One designer, who goes in for clever painted designs, is showing a beauty. It is softly tailored in white crepe and painted with bumblebees, whose wings gleam with irridescent sequins.

Coming back into the fashion picture is the ensemble of print dress with tied-in coat, usually lined with the print fabric. For a nice switch in this ensemble, we recommend a black silk crepe dress with a white and green leaf print draped across the shoulders, the low, round neckline bordered with the print. A Kelly green sash on the dress gives the cue for a full Chinese mandarin jacket in sheer wool crepe lined with the green of the sash.

Two Toned Beach Costume



Printed crepe play suit.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THIS IS THE sort of play and beach costume that is going great guns on the West Coast. It is easy to wear, and easy on the eyes—so what more could one ask! White crepe printed with a navy and red parasol design on one side, while navy crepe is used for the other side and for the back of the shorts. The waistline is draped to a side tie.

YOUNG LOVE AND THE LAW

Having her crowning glory coiffed here as her proud hubby looks on is Mrs. Sneed Bussell, 14, of Detroit. She is the former Norma Brooks. She wed her 16-year-old husband, who hails from Harrogate, Tenn., in Middlesboro, Ky., with their parents' consent. But when they came ahoneymooning to Detroit, the law put them in the juvenile detention home for a weekend because they could not produce immediate proof of a legal ceremony. Such a marriage is illegal in Tennessee or Michigan. But it is legal in Kentucky.

Questions and Answers

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper to Information Branch, WPTB, 490 Sussex Street, Ottawa.

Q. I would like to get a used car but have no car to trade in. Is there anything I can do in order to get a decent car?

A. Under present regulations a dealer is not allowed to demand a trade-in. Dealers are now required to sell used cars to any person who offers to pay cash and are prohibited from demanding an exchange or trade-in of any kind. Every used car that is for sale by a dealer must have a tag on it showing the lawful price and the model, model year and other particulars. If you will send us the name of the dealer demanding a trade-in we will investigate the matter for you.

Q. Could you tell me how long a term of credit one has on a monthly charge account?

A. Monthly charge accounts must be paid by the 10th of the second month following that in which the purchase is made.

Q. We will be hiring extra help from time to time, on our farm this summer. How many meals must I serve before I am entitled to extra coupons?

A. Extra ration coupons are only issued for a total of twelve meals or over. If extra help is hired for two weeks or more, the ration book must be surrendered to the employer.

Q. Is the 12½% increase in new farm machinery also on parts for machinery my husband has asked about parts for a binder and the dealer says his price is increased. Is this correct?

A. Your dealer is quite correct . . . the increase permitted on farm machinery applies to parts as well as the new machines.

Q. When I was discharged from the army I was given a priority suit certificate. Unfortunately I lost it. Is there any way I may obtain another priority.

A. Sorry . . . We have had many cases such as yours but unfortunately just one priority for a new suit may be issued.

Citizens of Trenton Honor Veterans and Those Who Paid Supreme Sacrifice in War

Each Veteran Presented With Wallet Suitably Inscribed and Next of Kin of Those Who Died Given Scroll of Honor

Trenton, May 25, (Special.)—A grateful Trenton donned full holiday attire here yesterday and an appreciative citizenry turned out en masse to pay tangible and other tributes to gallant sons and daughters of the armed services returned from the holocaust of war, and honor to the memory of those who paid the supreme sacrifice in the battle for civilization.

Thousands of people from the town and all parts of the district lined flag-bedecked streets in the morning as hundreds of young men and women among whom were many distinguished native sons, of the army, navy and air force, swung along cheering thoroughfares in the van of a parade of four thousand marching feet to receive a civic accolade of "Welcome Home" and "Thank You".

"It was an-all-out day for the young "old sweats". They attended a memorial service following the parade and later were presented with handsome leather wallets suitably engraved and designed in gold, tributes of appreciation from a grateful home town. The next-of-kin of those who "went west" in the cause of civilization were presented with engraved rolls of honor.

In the afternoon, the guests attended softball games and a program of sports held on the park here, or attended theatres where they and their families were the guests of the various managements. In the evening they were banqueted at the Trenton Air Station and climaxing the day's celebration were guests at a ball game held in the Sports hangar of the station.

Mile-Long Parade

Headed by cruisers of the Belleville, Trenton and Ontario Provincial police, and official cars carrying Mayor Harry Cory, his town council and other town dignitaries, the colorful column of the parade swung away from the College Street School grounds shortly after ten-thirty.

The Lions' Club Band gaily bedecked in brilliant costumes of yellow and blue, marching behind the pert prancing drum majorette, Miss Christine Roberts, paced the parade immediately in frout of a color party of veterans of two wars carrying the flags of the United Nations.

Then came the guests of honor. In the famous battle-dress with divisional patches; the blue and gold of the navy and the blue of the air force not to mention "priority civvies", the youthful veterans of the last war, faces agleam strode along in perfect formation. Interspersed in the ranks were the khaki and blue of W.D.'s and C.W.A.C.'s.

Squadron of Airmen

Then followed a squadron of airmen from the Trenton Air Station, trim cadets from Trenton public schools; the nattily attired girl cadettes in blue and white from the Trenton High School; C.G.I.T. girls; the band of the Kingston Branch of the Canadian Legion; a detachment of the Trenton Branch of the Legion in berets and medals; Trenton cadets and cheering hundreds of pupils of the public schools.

Decorated trucks carried shouting cheering children while grotesquely-garbed clowns provided a keen touch of humor. A highlight of the parade was the "circus" and its sign "Welcome Home from Our Gang". Miniature wagons ando cages were drawn by the tiny performers and in the cages were cats, pigeons, rabbits, a pup or two and in one, a dozen live snakes.

Colorfully decorated floats representative of business and industry of the town added a bright touch of color. The parade was in charge of Parade Marshal Warrant Officer John Silver, M.B.E., R.C.A.F., Trenton, and Mr. R. F. McInness, of the Trenton Rotary Club.

Impressive Service

Shortly after eleven o'clock the parade augmented by thousands of citizens paused reverently in the shadow of Mount Pelion, where they participated in a service of Thanksgiving for Victory and to honor the memory of those who paid the supreme sacrifice. The lush green of the natural amphitheatre was dotted with the colors of women's dresses and the more sombre tones of the uniforms.

On a raised dais behind a large white cross, the simple yet impressive service was conducted by members of the Trenton Ministerial Association. Music for the hymns was played by the Lions' Club band under the baton of Lieut. Fred Jobson, Belleville.

At the conclusion of the service, the entire gathering stood in the hush of the morning silence as the haunting notes of the "Last Post" rang out. As the last note died away, Mayor Harry Cory placed a memorial wreath, bearing the inscription, "Lest We Forget" at the base of the cross, on behalf of the citizens of Trenton.

During the service the names of those who gave their all for Canada and civilization, were read over the public address swstem.

Nothing Forgotten

Nothing had been forgotten to make the day a real veteran's affairs. Events were timed with accuracy and scarcely had the young "old sweats" got over the thrill of one feature of entertainment, than they were whisked away to another.

The Trenton Lions' Club, in charge of the afternoon's program of sports started off their part of the proceedings with a softball game, and other events proved highly exciting to sports-loving veterans and their wives and families.

Then, too, thanks to the cooperation of the Trenton Kiwanis Club there was free ice cream and soda pop for the kiddies all of whom were ready for the treat after watching the funny antics of four grotesque clowns and other novelty features provided especially for the children.

Guest of Banquet

Climaxing the day's activities, the veterans and their wives and husbands, were guests at a "Welcome Home" banquet of the citizens of the town, in the spacious sports hangar at the Trenton Air Station.

Here following a sumptuous repast they drank a silent toast to the memory of the Trenton boys 'who gave their lives that we might always live a life of democracy". Followed the toast to His Majesty, The King, then Jock McLean, well-known comic impersonator and master of ceremonies, took over Guests at the head table were introduced by Mr. Kenneth J. Couch and attractive Lisa Derney and her champagne songs brought down the proverbial house. Miss Derney received a splendid ovation.

Brief Address Given

Brief addresses by Group Captain H. C. Rutledge, O.B.E., officer commanding the Station, and Air Marshal E. Middleton, C.B.E. of the R.C.A.F., followed. Brigadier Howard D. Graham, D.S.O. and Bar, Deputy Chief of the General Staff N.D.H.Q., Ottawa, a former Trenton boy and ex-commanding officer of the famous Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, also addressed the veterans among whom were many men who served under him.

The Rev. J. L. Hutchinson, former Royal Canadian Navy chaplain, spoke briefly to the veterans, and Mayor Harry Cory expressed the appreciation and gratitude of the citizens of the Town of Trenton for the splendid job done by its sons and daughters during the war that ended last year.

Warrant Officer John A. Silver was the toastmaster for the banquet and addresses.

At night, the guests augmented by crowds of townspeople and those from the district were present at an informad dance at the Air Station.

Chief of Police Walter Probert, Inspector Clare Hayes and Constables Peter Thomson, W. Johnson and L. W. Rathwell of the Belleville Police Department, assisted the Trenton police force in traffic control with Provincial Police Constable Sam Irvine, Jack Perry and Douglas Wilson, being in charge of highway traffic and parade duties. Officers from the C.N.R., Colborne and Brighton, also assisted Chief William Bain and his department.

TRENTON

JURY FINDS GIRL TOOK CARBOLIC ACID TO END LIFE

Inquest at Trenton on Death of Miss Olive Poulin Held Thursday

Trenton, (Special.)— A dying girl, clutching in her hand a letter and a glass from which she had drunk a lethal dose, walked from her bedroom along a hallway to the kitchen of her boarding house here on May 12, and calmly said to Mrs. Nellie Waddell, proprietress of the house, "Call the police, quick. I am dying." Three minutes later her dead body was found on a bed-couch in her room.

That is part of the sworn testimony of Mrs. Waddell, one of the witnesses at the coroner's inquest inquiring into circumstances surrounding the death of Miss Olive Poulin, former RCAF, Women's Division, Trenton, held here, Thursday night.

The coroner's jury, after a few minutes deliberation returned a verdict that the deceased Olive Poulin, died as a result of the affects of carbolic acid, self-administered. The inquest was presided over by Coroner Dr. E. A. McQuade, Trenton, with the Crown represented by County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, Belleville.

Dr. J. Mackay, provincial pathologist at the Belleville General Hospital told the jury that death was due to carbolic acid poisoning.

Questioned by the Crown as to whether he cared to give an opinion of the time between the taking of carbolic acid and death, Dr. Mackay stated that it depended on the dose. In this case, he said, death took place a short time after the poison was taken.

Appeared Despondent

Mrs. Waddell testified that a few days previous to the death of Miss Poulin, who had roomed with her since March 29, she had at times appeared to be despondent, but the witness had not noticed anything unusual until Sunday, May 13.

"She walked slowly to my kitchen from her room along the hallway on the same floor, and handed me a letter. Then she said 'Call the police, quick. I am dying'.

"I took her back to her room and immediately called the doctor and the police. When the police arrived about three minutes later, Olive was apparently dead".

Constable George Crawford, of the Trenton Police Department, who investigated the tragedy told the jury that on arriving at the Waddell home on the date mentioned, he met Mrs. Waddell in the hallway, who told him "One of my boarders has taken poison", and handed him a letter.

The police officer testified that he had gone to the girl's bedroom and found her lying face downwards on the bed. He examined her and concluded she was dead. He called Dr. McQuade and the undertaker, who later removed the girl to Dr. McQuade's office. The doctor, upon examination, pronounced Miss Poulin dead, Constable Crawford said.

Two Bottles Found

Examination of the girl's bedroom revealed two small bottles that smelled strongly of carbolic acid in a cupboarfd. On a table, the officer found two letters. In the kitchen, where it had been taken by the dead girl was found a glass which smelled strongly of carbolic acid.

Letters read in court indicated that the dead girl had suffered a disappointment in a love affair. Sergt. Jack Taylor, Trenton Police Department and Inspector Clare Hayes, of the Belleville Police Department, who conducted a full investigation of the case were also called as witnesses, as were other residents of the town who had known the late Miss Poulin.

Watson Wins Over Henning In Wild and Woolly Affair At Hume Arena Holiday Night

Loser Crashed Over Noggin With Piece of Board Brought Into Ring by Him

It's a good thing Manager Walt. Gerow of the Hume Arena does not permit baseball bats to lay around loose in his palace of sport on wrestling nights. Had that been the case a gent by the name of Lee Henning, would probably be nursing a knock on his noggin the size of an elephant's egg.

For the gent from Iowa, matched with Whippah Billy Watson in the main bout of the rassle-dassle sport Friday night, flew into a berserk rage as the champion flung him willy-nilly out of the ring; picked up a loose piece of board which a frenzied fan had torn from a seat in his excitement and leaped back into the canvas arena with mayhem in his heart and determination in his eyes.

But he had reckoned without the Whippah. The young gent, himself in no mood to be trifled with, gently but firmly wrestled the timber from Henning's mitt, raised it aloft and brought it down with a resounding whack on the Henning noddle.

That was but a part of the best bout seen here in years, which the Whippah won after he had thrown Henning in, about and around the first row of spectators seats, and was awarded the third and final fall when the Hen failed to get back into action on time.

A Wild Affair

The bout was one of those wild woolly affairs in which the East York Adonis and the Iowa buckaroo hit each other with everything but the Stewart-Warner plant and the Bank of Montreal building. The faithful screamed, hooted howled and cried as the two in a wild melee of holds, and flurries of fists tore into each other with all the abandon of a couple of starved jaguars over a choice bunny.

Henning had the faithful screaming for his hide in the first seconds of the bout. He disdained the usual conventions, and tore into Watson before that young man had removed his robe and the timekeeper had rung the gong. He kicked, gouged, ripped and punched the champion into a state of semi-consciousness and by the time Referee Ernie Power had matters straightened away it was a simple trick for Hennings to pin the champ after two minutes of actual official time.

Watson Has Temper

But don't go away. You ain't heard nuthin' yet. Mr. Watson, it appears has a temper. The Henning tactics had gotten deeply under the Watsonian epidermis. And so it was fighting fury that leaped into the ring for the second bout, after Henning strutted his stuff and demanded victory due to Watson's late appearance.

The Whip ruffled his own hair the wrong way. And that usually is a signal for even locomotives to clear the track. He went after the ferocious Henning, even as the faithful surged around the ring, and tore into him with mucho gusto. Twice he entwined him in the ropes— then used the Henning puss as a punching bag. He threw him out of the ring. He "whipped" him in approved style and finally pinned him for the fall in eleven minutes. The crowd went wild.

Given Heave-Ho

Then came the third fall and the battle of the planks. Watson gave Henning the old heave-ho out of the ring and that worthy came bounding back with a two foot piece of plank. You know the rest. The Whip hurled Henning over the ropes and promptly followed him as spectators scattered in all directions. Henning piled back and tore into Referee Powers and that gent promptly went into action with both fists. Again Henning soared over the ropes into the crowd and this time the Whip followed him.

They fought for minutes among the spectators and finally Watson leaped into the ring, but M'sieu Henning tarried too long. Up went the Whippah's hand— and the battle was over.

In the semi-final Brother Jonathan pinned Joe Mazzetti with his famous Mormon Crusher hold and the curtain raiser saw Leo Numa disqualified for roughing tactics against Dean Detton.

CARDS KNOCKED OUT OF LEAD BY CINCINNATI

Ewell Blackwell Becomes Second Hurler to Beat St. Louis Twice This Year

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals, who could not "see" Ewell Blackwell when the stringbean Cincinnati right-hander was recommended to them five years ago, wouldn't mind at all if they never saw him again.

Not only did the 23-year-old, six foot-five inch fireballer from Fresno, Calif., knock the Redbirds out of their half of the top perch in the National League standings last night, but he became the second hurler to register two victories over the Cards. Pittsburgh's Ken Heintzelman is the other.

In clipping the Redbirds' wings 5-1 for the Reds, Blackwell dealt the Cards only four hits and turned back six on strikeouts.

Defeat dropped the Cards into second place, one full game behind the Brooklyn Dodgers who took over undisputed possession of first place by whipping Philadelphia Phils 8-1 before 34,492, largest crowd to see a National League arc light game in Shibe Park. It marked the 13th straight victory for the Brooks over the Phils at Shibe Park in a two-year span.

Kirby Higbe, pitching his first complete game of the year, limited the Phils to two hits in registering his fourth triumph without defeat. A six-run rally in the third against Dick Mulligan clinched matters for the Dodgers.

Hal Newhouser joined Boston's Mickey Harris at the major's only seven-game winners when the lanky southpaw ace pitched Detroit Tigers to a 3-1 victory over Chicago White Sox. The game marked the last appearance as manager of Jimmy Dykes, who turns over the reins to Ted Lyons today.

Held hitless for the first seven innings by Boston's Ed Wright, New York Giants came to life to tie the score in the last half of the ninth and won the game 2-1 in the 11th when Ernie Lombardi smote a pinch-hit home run.

Rookie outfielder Ralph Kiner and veteran pitcher Preacher Roe combined to lead Pittsburgh to a 6-3 victory over Chicago Cubs.

The only other scheduled contest, between Washington and the St. Louis Browns, was postponed by rain.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

There was a truly brotherly spirit pervading the new Stewart-Warner Recreation Park yesterday afternoon. For one thing, it was ideal baseball weather; the new seating arrangements are comfortable, the diamond was in excellent shape, and the large crowd of fans who turned out to greet the debut of Belleville baseball was in holiday mood.

• • •

Even the genial spirit of camaraderie seemed to infiltrate into the veins of the teams themselves. The Kiwanis Juniors, underdogs in the opening day betting, and the Stewart Warners, who formally opened the baseball season here, seemed to realize that peace had finally arrived; after a fashion, and that no one team should take advantage of the other in such balmy Spring weather, with income taxes a memory, and friendly brotherly love the motif for a perfect Victoria Day holiday.

• • •

For instance, the Kiwanis Kids under the guiding hand of the veteran coach, Speedy St. Louis, and the Stewart-Warners, obeying the baseball orders of one Lefty (The Cud) Whitman, seemed content to feel each other out for two innings. Then in the third inning the planters, just to show that this brotherly stuff can be carried too far, smacked out a couple of hits and sent a runner across the plate. That made the score 1-0.

• • •

An interesting sidelight on the operation of Ki-Y Softball is the fact that all umpiring in the league is done by volunteer officials. Many of these young men are members of the Phalanx Fraternity, and the others are men who have played Ki-Y in previous years and are now taking their turn to provide competitive recreation for youngsters of the city. We feel that real credit is rue these young men who handle an average of two games a week throughout the entire schedule with no other pay than the satisfaction they get from the knowledge that they are helping to make Belleville a better place for boys. The names of these young men are Jack Hegan, who handles four games a week, Austin Watkin who handles three, and the others handling two each, Percy Marcus, John Stewart, Jim Rapino, Cam Snell, Jim Watson, W. Fitzgibbon, and Bill Spafford. Available for emergency calls when the regular umpires are unable to be on hand are, Bill Jackson, Ron Walmsley, Andy Thompson, Dick Kirby, Tom Hutchinson, Bernard Meagher, Raymond Hall and Gordon Mifflin. A glance over the list will show that these young men are all active around the Y.M.C.A. as well as in Community and young people's activities.

Service of this kind is an inspiration to all citizens, and our thanks should go out to them in their effort to build a Community program.

Apparently Tommy Colden, impresario of the Stewart-Warner Alemite ladies' softball team is not dismayed, though perhaps disgusted by the lethargic lackadaisical don't-give-a-damn attitude of the former brains of the girls' softball loop Tommy has gone ahead with his lassies and has been practicing faithfully for some time. In view of the fact that there is no present likelihood of a girls' softball league being formed here. Tommy is ready to have his gals play exhibition games with outside teams.

With the possibility of drawing a bye in the Provincial Ladies' Softball Association playdowns later in the season. In the meantime Tommy quotes: "I would like to stay there are a few positions open on the squad and any young lady desirious of playing softball this year is cordially invited to join the practices.

The squad practices every Monday night at 6.30 on the Stewart-Warner diamond. There is a chance for you, ladies.

• • •

Aside to Tommy—There are four or five snappy softball teams in the Trenton Ladies' League, Thomas m'lad ,and possibly one of those would give you an ex-game in the immediate future. It's worth a try—and don't mention it, chum.

• • •

But, perhaps they were sorry for taking that seemingly unfair advantage. For in the second half of the same innings, the shortstop heaved the pill over the first baseman's head, and that error was responsible for a Kiwanis run that evened matters. And there the boys were back where they started, all even stephen.

• • •

But gadzooks, cried Whitman to his stalwarts when the fifth rolled along. After all this is a ball game, and these young upstarts need a lesson. "You have my permission, gentlemen. It's now zero hour, so charge the redoubts and don't spare the nags."

And his gladiators responded. They hitched up their neat and natty togas, grasped their war-clubs firmly in their mitts and proceeded to batter the offerings of one, youthful Robert Bunton, who had essayed the chucking duties for the service club voteless ones.

• • •

No less than five base-earning spanks went into the wild blue yonder or rolled amidst the lush grass of the outfield. And no less than the same number of Stewart Warner platers tabbed their tootsies on the home platter, to bring the general reckoning to something like 6-1. Now, it appeared, the pastime was sewed up, signed, sealed and ready for delivery.

• • •

But the canny Speedy St. Louis, he of the expanding waistline and never-hay-die-spirit called his beardless ones into a crapshooters huddle, out of which emanated fierce whispers that sounded like "these guys can't do that to us." And it seemed they were right.

• • •

They strode to the plate, fire in their optics and a determination to die for dear old Speedy, or at least suffer a little for Mark Vanner's gallant Kiwanians, who after all are their baseball poppas, so to speak.

• • •

No longer the lazy-at-times slants of the Planter C. O. M'seeu Whitman, held any terrors for them. The gent who slowly rolls a half pound of "chawin" around his starboard jowls, while cavorting on a baseball diamond, was just an ordinary pitcher, thought they. And right away, muy pronto, quick like a bunny, to quote Kenny (Bustin' at the Seams) Colling, they proceeded to park the offerings of M'sieu Whitman, to all corners of the lot. To give the guy credit — and here comes the brotherly love spirit again, for wasn't his team five runs in the lead?—he filled the sacks, then walked the next batter to present the younkers with a gift run.

• • •

'H'mmm" growled La Speedy. "Thinks we're kiddin' huh? I'll show 'em." He did. he parked a clean single over second, and two of his protegies, broad smiles on their youthful pans, ambled across the plate. The crowd moved to the edge of the seats. It threw its broad smiles of favors to the younkers. And being the appreciative kids they are, they leaned gently but firmly on more of the Whitman tosses and by the time the smoke had cleared the score board read Kiwanis 8, Stewart Warner 6.

• • •

"That," remarked Speedy, "may have been an oversight on our part. After all, these guys were good enough to let us tie them. Mebbe we overdid it, by scoring more runs than they. But shucks, what can we do about it?" There was a suspicious swelling in his cheek, which might have been his tongue.

• • •

Enter Ernie Smith, elongated member of the Alemite baseball pitching fraternity, who throws 'em from the knife side. He strode to the mound, warmed up—and dang it—here comes that brotherly love stuff again. Ernie kindly presented the first two batters with free, one-way trips to Gordie Booth's balliwick at first base. It couldn't be, murmured the faithful, that this is Sons' Day and each young fellow gets a free gift if he is a good boy and doesn't take any swings at the nasty ball? But Smith's mates thought otherwise. Enough of this Santa Claus skullduggery, was their mental reaction. So they proceeded to exhibit some nifty throwing from the faraway pastures and the inner gardens while the kids were jitterbugging on the bases, and retired the side.

• • •

And young Mr. Bunton, who wore a blue semi-kimona instead of the conventional baseball shirt (Cheer up, kids, they've been ordered) likewise remembered there was no pay for overtime, and retired the side to win his first ball game of the season. And that, dear readers is the story.

• • •

It couldn't be that Bluesweep will win the King's Plate today, could it? Well, if he does, don't say you weren't tipped off, chum.

Says Three Million In U. S. Afflicted With Alcoholism

Buffalo, N.Y., May 25 (AP) — About 3,000,000 persons in the United States are afflicted with alcoholism, "one-quarter of them being full-fledged alcoholics," Dr. Selden D. Bacon of Yale University said in an address prepared for delivery today at the National Conference of Social Work.

Dr. Joseph Thimmann, medical director of the Washingtonian hospital, said the most modern treatment for acute intoxication as well as "the most rapid and humane procedure is a sub-shock dosage of insulin, neutralized later by dextrose."

KIWANIS JUNIORS TAKE ALEMITES IN OPENING GAME

Runs Come in Bunches but Juniors Have Enough Power to Win 8-6

There was a distinct Alphonse and Gaston act in the Belleville City and District Baseball League opening game at the Alemite Field, Friday night when the Kiwanis Juniors and the Stewart-Warner Alemites clashed in the league opener in perfect baseball weather and before a large enthusiastic crowd.

Stewart-Warners scored a run in the third innings of the seven-chukker affair, and Speedy St. Louis kids tied it up in the same frame thanked to a wild peg on the part of Alfie Rowbotham, S.W.A., shortstop.

In the fifth, Lefty (The Cud) Whitman's stalwarts pounced upon the offerings of Bobby Bunton doing mound duty for the Juniors and five Alemites dashed across the plate after laying down a barriage of five hits paced by Johnny Ronsky's towering triple to deep centre.

But not to be outdone by this display of war-bludgeon power, the Kiwanians bats exploded in their half of the same innings and seven Juniors raced home with the victory in the bag. And that is how it ended. Kiwanis Juniors 8, Stewart-Warner 6.

Whitman sent in long Ernie Smith in the sixth and although the big fellow walked a brace of batters, his mates turned in some smart work afield and he retired the side runless and hitless.

Lefty Whitman, Alemite coach injected himself into the game as the starting pitcher and held the kids to one hit and one run, a gift of his mates, until the disastrous last half of the fifth.

Kids Rally

Vern Green dusky Kiwanis second baseman, drove out a single to start the rally and Soules got a life on Rowbotham's error. Whitman walked the next two batters to force in a run, and the veteran Speedy St. Louis lined a clean single to centre to score two runners. Art Wright did likewise, and Semark and Bunton went out. Bush lashed out a hit to left field scoring two more and Green got a life when hit by a pitched ball. Soules drove out the fifth hit of the innings but went out stretching it.

Bobby Bunton held the Alemite sluggers to two hits and a run until the fifth. In the third innings Fitzpatrick, Alemite second baseman, laced out a hit and galloped home on Whitman's double to right centre. In the fifth the Alemite guns went to work. Ronsky smashed out a long triple and Fitz drew a walk. Latchford and Whitman hit singles in succession and Fred Titus cleared the sacks with a rousing double. Gordy Booth singled, but Bunton settled down at this point and forced Rowbotham to fly out and struck out Hammett, Bunton struck out six and walked two.

Paces Hit Parade

Whitman paced the hit parade for the Alemites smacking out a triple, double and single for four. Ronsky got a triple and Titus a two-bagger. Fitzpatrick, Latchford, Moore and Rowbotham contributed singles to the lost cause.

Art Wright paced the winner's attack with two singles with Bush, V. Green, Soules and Coach St. Louis coming through with single hits.

Opening ceremonies preceded the game with His Worship Mayor Frank Follwell in the pitcher's box; Past President of the League Jack McVeigh catching, Arthur Young, batting and Kiwanis President, Mark Vanner, calling the balls and strikes. Previous to the ceremonies, Mayor Follwell paid tribute to those who had made the rejuvenation of baseball in Belleville possible and urged the sports public to support all teams in the league.

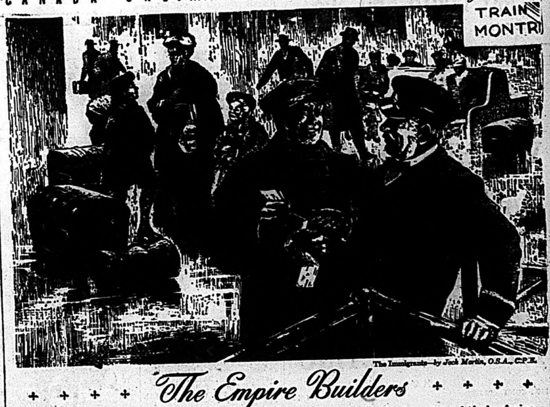
CANADA UNLIMITED — The Formative Years



The Immigrants—by Jack Martin, O.S.A., C.P.E.

The Empire Builders

FROM THE MOORS OF SCOTLAND, the rocky coasts of Ireland, from English cities and farms they came, their hearts filled with wonder and a great hope. With them, fleeing from the hardships and oppressions of the Old World, came the sturdy countrymen of Europe.

Canada! and the very name was magic. Canada, land of opportunity . . . where a man's two strong hands could carve out security.

Up the mighty St. Lawrence to quaintly old-world Quebec—on through the rolling fields of Ontario—to the vast fertile miles of the Prairies—to the wooded slopes of the Rockies. And wherever they made their homes new strength was added to the bonds of blood kinship . . . new solidarity to the cause of Empire. Within a few short years they had become a part of the fabric of Canada, their unbounded faith in the country of their choice justified, their dreams merged into the one dream that was to become a reality. The reality of Canada Unlimited—the Canada of today.

And the bright light of freedom and prosperity which they saw, shines today for all of us with an even greater brilliance, beckoning us to the Canada of Tomorrow . . . the Canada that will be more surely and swiftly ours if we give expression to our continuing faith by our purchase and holding of Victory Bonds.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 995
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There is not much of a gap between a palooka bridge player and his expert partner. You begin to realize this as soon as you learn a few efficient rules that you thoroughly understand.

Rule says the order of choice of leads is tops, longies, shorts. Lead the top from any sequence group like K Q J or K Q 10, Q J 10 or Q J 9, J 10 9 or J 10 8, 10 9 8 or 10 9 7.

With no desirable top, lead from a long suit. From a long suit, lead the fourth best. Subtract that led card from 11 and it tells you how many higher cards in that suit are held by the other three hands.

Your partner leads the club jack from the west hand and you see these cards:

NORTH
♣ K 7 5 2

WEST ♣ 4
EAST ♣ A 9 6 3

The four in the west is the club your partner has led. The north K 7 5 2 are seen in the exposed dummy. Your east hand holds A 9 6 3.

Subtract the led four from 11 and your answer is seven. There must be seven clubs higher than the four in north and east and south.

Three of them in north and three of them in your own hand tell you where six of them are. The seventh must be in south, the declarer. Which club does south hold? Which clubs are still held by west?

Having led a fourth best, west must have three higher than the four. They must be three from among the unseen cards of Q J 10 8.

West does not have Q J 10, or he would have led the queen top of a sequence. If west did not have the queen, he would have J 10 8 and would have led the jack as top of the sequence.

Consequently, west must have the queen and not the jack or the ten. The jack or the ten must be in the south hand and west must have either Q J 8 or Q 10 8; the only non-sequence group.

Of course, there are many times when you do not need this kind of information. But it sure comes in handy when you need it.

It is well to be prepared for the future.

Column Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 25 — (AP) — "Hi-yo, Harry, away!" may resound through film theatres if Harry James has his way.

"Yes, I want to do western pictures," said the young man with a horn, "and it's not as fantastic as it seems—after all, I played with a band on horseback when I was a kid with circuses and rodeos." I suggested that sliding down hillsides and jumping off cliffs is different from riding down main street and blowing Sousa marches.

Harry's contract calls for his band to appear in all his pictures. I asked if he intended to put his boys on horses for his proposed western.

"Certainly," he said, "some of them are very good riders." Still, wouldn't the string section look pretty silly on horseback?

Harry spends much of his spare time at the Hitching Post Theatre' studying westerns. You can guess how much spare time he has, what with Betty, the band, the baby, his racing stable and baseball team and his current picture, "You're for Me."

Vic Mature's romance with a Pasadena socialite appears serious. He drove many miles from his Arizona location to telephone her . . . Carmen Miranda has picked up the Vine Street lingo. She was telling me about a number she will shoot next week. "Eet's sensational," she said. "I do a Souse American boogie woogie. Eet's vout o'reen-ey and rootie-tootie . . ."

KINGARVIE STILL HORSE TO BEAT IN KING'S PLATE

Bluesweep and Palermo, the Hatch Entry, Expected to Make Next Best Bid

By HARRY ECCLES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 25 (CP) — It rained off and on throughout the night but even the tearful skies couldn't cloud the spectacle presented this afternoon at old Woodbine race track in Toronto's east end, when the cream of Canadian three-year-old thoroughbreds pranced on the track to run for the King's Plate—the 87th time they've run since 1860 in the continent's oldest race.

The renewal of the Plate featured the closing day of the Ontario Jockey Club's spring meeting. The Governor-General, Viscount Alexander, was present to award the King's Guineas to the winner. The crowd was tremendous; there were 35,000 at the holiday program yesterday and indications were this would be exceeded this afternoon.

The Plate was the only topic in Toronto today. Twelve were entered—12 out of 110 nominations made back in November, 1944. Everybody knew that the Parkwood Stable's Kingarvie, unbeaten in his last nine starts, was the horse to beat. And everybody was picking out of the 11 other starters horses that might beat Kingarvie.

Hatch Entry Strong

They picked out the Hatch stable entry—Bluesweep and Palermo, regardless of the fact that Bluesweep is known to be a poor runner on anything but a fast track. They picked out the Irene Webster-George Groves entry—Double Briar and Barefoot Joe.

And from there they picked out the rest of the starters—Charles Turner's David T., winner with Kingarvie of one of the two Plate trials a week ago; Louis Simon's Royal Worth, which didn't run in the Plate trial but turned in some fancy workouts; the Halton Brook Stable's Noddy's Number, Norman Heise's Williegivit, Frowde, Seagram's Kanshore, Harry Giddings' Kharakas, and the Medway Stable's Khabnula.

Bluesweep, notoriously a slow breaker was drawn in number 1 position. Kingarvie was fourth from end and Double Briar was on the extreme outside of the track at the start.

TORONTO LEAFS SPLIT TWIN BILL WITH ROCHESTER

Lose Morning Opener 13-3 but Come Back in Evening to Win 7-2

By The Associated Press

A poor start is all that has kept the front-running Montreal Royals from enjoying a commanding lead in the Internaional League pennant race.

The Royals, victors in 13 of their last 16 contests, are only two games ahead of the Syracuse Chiefs despite their torrid .842 pace of the past three weeks.

Montreal managed to cop only seven of its first 13 games while the Chiefs racked up nine out of 13. Since then the Chiefs have taken nine out of 16 conflicts to remain hard on the heels of the Royals.

The Royals highlighted with a 17-4 and 11-2 victories over Buffalo Bisons. All told 87 runs and 120 hits were smacked in six loop contests against 23 moundsmen.

Syracuse trounced Baltimore Orioles 19-2, scoring 12 runs in the ninth inning. Joe Just, Chief catcher, clouted a home run with the bases loaded and a double in Syracuse's big frame.

Rochester and Toronto split a doubleheader, the Red Wings winning the morning game opener, 13-3 and the Leafs the nightcap, 7-2. Eddie Joost batted in five Rochester runs in the lid-lifter with a homer, double and single.

Newark and Jersey City hurlers got off easy, the Bears winning 4-3.

Canadian Derby Will Be Raced At New Hamburg

New Hamburg, Ont., May 25 (CP)—"The greatest trotting race ever held in Canada," is the claim of the 11th Canadian racing derby to be held here Aug. 4, and the list of 12 entries, released here today, bears the claim out.

Holder of a world's record for the mile and a quarter, Blue Again, winner of last week's $50,000 stake at Arcadia, Cal., heads the derby list. He has such stiff competition as Count B, derby winner for the last two years, Merry England, Probationer, Time Table and Saratoga.

Radio Electronic Technicians Form Local Group

A province-wide radio electronic technicians association was formed last week when the executive of each group of the Radio Electronic Technicians' Association from all parts of Ontario met at "Crofton Villa," Cooksville, Ontario.

The meeting was very successful as many difficult problems were discussed and received the approval of all present.

Mr. Poulter of Poulter Publications, was elected secretary of the Provincial Council of the new organization which will meet monthly. It is hoped that two delegates from each of the local groups will attend these meetings.

The objectives of the organization is four-fold. It will raise the professional status of the radio technicians, further the art of radio through technical discussion, create fellowship and good will among the members of the profession and also will serve to gain public confidence and good will and also protect it from incompetent repair men.

Assure Fair Prices

The forming of the R.E.T.A. will assure fair prices, high quality workmanship and, in general, will be beneficial to the radio owner.

Every service rendered by a member of the organization must carry a ninety day guarantee on all parts used and work performed.

The members will be kept up to date on all the newest radio and electrical equipment by lectures given by members of the Canadian radio industry. These lectures will enable the members to intelligently service the complex radio equipment of the future.

At a regular meeting of the Bay of Quinte District Association, the local members voted to join the provincial organization. Three members were appointed to meet the Provincial Council each month.

The following are the members of the local group: John H. Moring, George E. Fralick, M. G. Wright, A. C. Coombs, Howard Booth, R. B. Finkle (Associate member), Glen Peterson, W. A. Ironside (associate member), Albert Basset and Harry Evans (honorary member) of Belleville; Harry Fletcher, Jack Scott and Clarence Smith, Picton; Gordon M. Turney, E. A. W. Wright and H. O. Brown (associate member), Trenton; Harry Brookes, Stirling; J. G. Bennett and John Burkitt, Napanee; W. O. Harvey and W. N. Flindall, Brighton; Frank Hochberger, Deseronto; M. S. First Peacetime Victoria Day Since '39 Marked

By The Canadian Press

Across the Dominion, Canadians yesterday celebrated the 127th anniversary of the birth of Queen Victoria—the first peacetime Victoria Day in six years.

The weather was generally warm and Canadians took advantage of it. They jammed trains, buses and highways, went to ball games and races, tennis tournaments and local ceremonies.

At border points, thousands of Canadians planning to visit the United States were turned back when the American rail strike tied up transport. Many Canadian rail travellers were caught in a disruption of schedules.

Children knew the war was really over when removal of the wartime ban on fireworks made pyrotechnics plentiful. Only snag was the lack of firecrackers—all made in China and still unavailable.

Some hardy Ottawa souls braved chilly local rivers for the year's first dip, but most bathers stayed unwet. Cloudy late afternoon skies did not deter citizens who picknicked, hiked, sailed, motored, golfed and shot off fireworks.

Despite threatening skies, Torontonians flocked to the race track and ball park, then watched fireworks displays at night. Many others had left town the night before to take full advantage of the long week-end.

At Deleware, Ont., near London, the town's veterans received presentations from civic officials during a day-long celebration. London residents flocked to Lake Erie beaches.

St. Thomas, Ont., continuing an age-old custom, crowned Jean Penhale Queen of the May while hundreds of her subjects paid homage.

Many Fire Calls Keep Montreal Firemen Busy

Montreal, May 25 — (CP) — Members of Montreal's fire department are glad that Victoria Day comes but once a year as last night they answered almost 150 alarms, during which two tear gas bombs were hurled and a divisional chief and his chauffeur were assaulted by a fusilade of bricks.

The Griffintown and Point St. Charles areas, in the southwest section of the city, were the main trouble spots as weary firefighters were repeatedly called on to battle a number of blazes, most of them of a minor nature or "false alarms."

One blaze, in a vacant two-storey stable at Shannon and Ottawa Streets, required five streams of water before being brought under control. The stable itself was destroyed in 15 minutes, in the most important blaze of the evening.

Shortly after midnight, a tear gas bomb was hurled among hundreds of Victoria Day celebrators and firemen while a second bomb was thrown in front of a fire station shortly afterwards. For several minutes, celebrations were practically brought to a standstill as the crowd and firemen alike were rendered helpless while tears rolled down their faces.

Divisional chief Fred Gilmore and his chauffeur narrowly escaped injury when they were assaulted with bricks as they entered their car after directing firemen in extinguishing a bonfire near Wellington and Duke Streets.

At another point in Griffintown, firemen were criticized by a crowd for attempting to quell a blaze.

Although a number of "false alarms" were turned in by persons who like to see the fire engines go by, police said a number of yesterday's fires were set deliberately in streets and sheds.

CHAPTER 8

"Don't you see what I mean? Morley couldn't pass that up. If he's near Denver at all — he'll read or hear about it—and he'll come out from hiding—come out running, for you."

She laughed throatily. "Maybe he would. I take it back, pal. It's a deal—see you tomorrow night. Print your phoney story."

The story appeared on page one of the Saturday afternoon supplement. The Telegram staff artists had given it a drawing and a four-column spread. Nobody could miss it.

Gordon dressed excitedly that Saturday night; dark red tie, white shirt, soft flannel suit, and arrived after Cora's 12 o'clock show. He stood near the orchestra; all the seats in the Gold Nugget were occupied.

Engineers and production men, tanned and hard—flabby white faces of Eastern executives; weaving, laughing, gulping — Gordon searched them all for that one saturnine face. He stood at the side, near the entrance, watching the pay nighters crowd in. Then he circled the bar, peering into faces, wandered about the packed tables, returned to his post sadly.

When Cora pranced on, her eyes were wide with inquiry for him. Gordon shrugged at her—held up his hand with an open empty palm.

After her show she came to him in street togs, tense with the question, "Seen him at all?" To which Gordon answered "Sorry, no."

"Well, come on," she added, "let's go around together. You might have missed him. I'd spot him fifty feet away."

With that, she dragged Gordon through the rows of standees at the bar, peering around shoulders, staring through the haze of cigarette smoke. The hat check girl didn't remember seeing Morley; the doorman was vague.

"No dice," said Cora, "I'm not his glamour girl anymore."

"I'm sorry, Cora," said Gordon, "I thought it was a sure bet he'd show up."

"To tell the truth, so did I," she mumbled wearily, "Come on, let's dance. He's given me the cold shoulden for sure. Damn him."

"Maybe he's out of the country," said Gordon.

"It's possible, but not probable. Well, I don't expect anyone else I want to see. It's 1 o'clock now. I'm taing the Silver Arrow east to Chicago. She leaves at 1:30. I must change, go back to my apartment for my suitcase. Want to see me off?"

"Sure. Try and stop me."

They were standing close to the tables when a huge, long-maned drinker rose to his feet and staggered over, "Hi, Miss Leroy, Hi pardner. How's chances of a dance with the little lady?"

Gordon saw Cora's eyes open wide. She said, "Sorry, not right now, my friend. This one's promised."

Gordon pushed the miner away gently with, "Sorry, old pal; maybe later."

Cora said, "Let's dance, Brad. That guy is hard. I know. It's a wonder he didn't want to scrap. I wouldn't want to get stuck with him. Let's finish the number to make it look good, and then make a smooth exit."

The orchestra was playing a liquid waltz. Cora's head rested against Gordon's lapel; they danced into the group of gliding couples, Gordon asking Cora about places where the missing Morley might be. She suggested one, the big house he owned in the valley—and then there were two strong taps on Gordon's right shoulder—and a sharp voice asking, "May I cut in?"

Gordon turned, ready with an angry "No," expecting the intruder to be the miner. But it was not the hard-looking tippler this time. It was a man whose face Gordon had seen before—in a portrait over the mantel at Moonhollow. It was Clifford Morley.

Gordon stiffened; Cora's words slipped back unspoken into her throat.

The music sobbed and moaned and ebbed away.

"Shall we finish the dance, Miss Leroy?" Morley asked in a harsher voice. Without waiting to hear Gordon's answer, he took Cora's hand from Gordon's shoulder.

Gordon looked inquiringly at Cora. She smiled. A new light shone in her face. "You didn't expect me?" Morley asked her. Cora's warm hand had fallen willingly into his. Gordon acquiesced with a slipshod bow, adding, "Yes, yes! of course, she did. Of course." He left them.

He leaned against a gilt post at the side of the dance floor.

"So that's the man I came two thousand miles to find....Clifford Morley! Audrey's charmer; her super-charged high-pressure fascinator, ex-husband No. 1. Well, Gordon, old pal, admit that this fellow is something any woman would remember. He's a main-line personality if ever you saw one. Clifford Morley is no school girl's hero as Ed Boden thought. He's the style a woman has a right to rave about, and he has two of them doing it now.

He saw Cora and Morley across the floor, their heads floating as if suspended by cords in a potpourri of dancers.

Morley's face was shining with assurance, his lips were bent to Cora's cinnamon hair, and his words had titivated her, for she was dancing, body close, head thrown back, laughing.

Gordon rapped his knuckles against the pillar; the pain prodded his mind away from his miserable thoughts, but his mind returned to the problem like a dog worrying a bone, as he thought, "You've come out here to show up Morley—well, go ahead, do it, you fool! You thought it would be easy. But you've struck steel on steel. There's a foe worthy of your mettle—draw away—strike!"

He turned, the demon of jealousy urging him as he pushed his way blindly, dull and stupid, out of the room through a forest of shoulders to the warm rich red mahogany of the bar, like a spent swimmer coming to a raft. He held the curved upsweep of the bar to steady himself.

The bar glowed like the window of a home on a stormy night. A band of diamond-point lights circled the top supports of the bar like a diadem, and below that, brandy ponies, cocktail glasses and goblets glistened amid an array of bottles.

The head bartender left two assistants and waddled along the side of the bar. He spread his huge hands on the bar in front of Gordon.

"Yes, sir, what'll it be? You look like I should a come arunnin'."

"A stiff hooker. Yes."

"Never heard better words in my life. Gents come in here and ask for Gin Daisies or Fancy Ladies. That's what's wrong with this country. Men are gittin' soft. Take Henry Plummer and the Earps and Doc Holliday. They wanted Bourbon, straight—or a quart of Red Dog. How about a straight shot—got some fine old bar whiskey I just siphoned out of a barrel myself."

The bartender lifted a ham of a hand, clutched the neck of an unlabelled bottle, and poured a hooker.

"Drink up, mister. Down to your toes, where you'll end up, Lord only knows."

The bartender must have known his facts like a hen knows its chicks, for Gordon felt the whiskey sink hot to his toes. His eyes watered and his tongue stuck to the roof of his mouth.

"Gawdamighty man — that's good," Gordon gasped.

The bartender leaned back and laughed. Loud rich laughter that tickled the drinkers—and shook the bottles on the shelves.

The disciple of John Barleycorn shoved over a glass of water. Gordon gulped it gratefully.

The bartender grinned. "It's all right, mister. Most of 'em chase it with water. And many a tough man has caught it in his tonsils."

He said that while glaring at Gordon's smiling neighbors — as if waiting for comers to take his dare. The bartender poured another jigger of the liquid heat and pushed it to Gordon.

"Take your time on this one, pardner. Second one always settles better."

"Thanks," murmured Gordon. "It does the trick. I asked for a real shot, and I got it."

"Evenin'," someone hiccoughed at his side. Gordon turned; it was the bucktoothed mining engineer h[illegible]ted with at Morley's D[illegible]ackpot Mine.

"Nice [illegible] you aroun'. Say I read t[illegible]ece in the newspaper that you was goin' to hitch with that pretty dancer inside."

"That's right; it was in. Fine girl, Miss Leroy. Have a drink?"

"Thanks, sure will. Hope you'l be as happy as a couple of jackrabbits in a cabbage patch, if my boss, Mr. Morley lets you. He's always huntin' jackrabbits."

Gordon beckoned to the bartender who lumbered down, smiling at Gordon's new friend.

"Evenin', Blackie. Where you all been, all this time?"

"Stayin' out at the Jackpot, where else?"

"Any new action down there?" The bartender leaned closer, confidentially.

"No, nothing spectacular," answered Blackie. "Got some new electric drills working."

"We seen hide nor hair of Mr. Morley lately," said the bartender, "Where is he?"

"You'll see him plenty tonight, if you look sharp. I just drove him in. We brought in some samples of ore. We've been working on a new level out at the mine."

"Thet so?" marveled the bartender: "Suppose that coyote, Mr. Oliver, is with him?"

"Naw, not any more. He ain't been trailing him for a long time," said the miner, downing his drink. "Mr. Oliver ain't west; he's back east. Mebbe he's in one of these fancy calabooses— Sing Sing or Leavenworth."

"No more'n likely," mused the bartender. "I say Mr. Morley ought to be powerful happy to get rid of that hombre. Say, he used to stand up at the bar here and order a bottle of bubbly for everybody. I got a hundred-dollar tip from him once. That was easy money from somewhere. He was always as queer as a two-tailed cat. Can't understand why Morley didn't see through him!"

"No one else can. Guess lots of extra dough stuck to Oliver's fingers. But when the Jackpot was spouting dollars like a Spindletop gusher, Mr. Morley didn't care or he couldn't keep track of all his money."

The two men were closer now, almost head to head. Gordon edged in with, "Let's all have a drink of this red-eye. Seems I heard you talk about a fellow named Oliver. I don't mean to interrupt. I was wondering if I knew him."

Gordon's mind was a whirligig. He wanted to quiet it down. This mention of Oliver—could it be the taciturn, chill major-domo of Moonhollow? The thought stung him insistently; he waved it away as fantastic.

"My man Oliver is tall. He has a face like a—like a silver axe," Gordon laughed casually.

"Wait a minute. There's a picture of our Oliver around here," the bartender said. He stopped before the liquor cabinet, rummaged with his left hand, drew forth a handful of photographs and snapshots.

"My art gallery," he expounded. "I expected to hang 'em around walls, but the manager raised hell. So I keep 'em anyway, in private. Now look, this one's Governor Slade with his arm around my shoulder — that was five years ago. Here's one of the manager and his wife, and, yeh, here 'tis." He held forth a six inch by eight inch glossy print.

Comparative Quiet On Twenty-Fourth

A comparatively quiet 24th was observed at the city police station over the holiday with only minor occurrences being reported including several infractions of the L.C.A.

A 1939 Nash sedan remained parked on Bleecker Ave., for two days with the keys left in the ignition lock and remained unmolested by persons with auto theft in mind. The vehicle was taken to the police station.

Chief of Police Walter Probert was in receipt of a letter from Mrs. E. A. Toon of Manchester, England, inquiring of a James Horrocks who at one time worked in Belleville or district. Horricks is a veteran of the First Great War serving in France with a Scottish regiment. Any information regarding the above-named man would be gladly received by the police chief.

Col. P.H. Wills Presents to Sea Cadet Corps 21-Foot Power Launch for Training Purposes

Presentation Made by "Gib" Stackhouse on Behalf of Mr. Wills to Chairman of Sea Cadet Committee, Warren Jones

A trim and newly-painted 21-foot power launch, provided through the kind generosity of Col. P. H. Wills, was added to the training facilities of the local "Quinte" sea cadet corps on Friday night when during a special presentation ceremony the craft was officially turned over to the local corps officers.

The presentation was made at the Government Dock by A. Gilbert Stackhouse, chairman of the Belleville branch of the Navy League of Canada, on behalf of Col. Wills, with Warren Jones, chairman of the "Quinte" sea cadet committee accepting the craft and turning it over to corps officers.

The entire corps personnel, including officers and approximately 60 cadets viewed the presentation ceremonies as they lined up on the Government Dock. Lieut. Roy C. Nurse, staff officer of sea cadets at HMCS Cataraqui, Kingston, was also on hand to witness the ceremony.

Complete Surprise

Presentation of the trim power craft came as a complete surprise to members of the local cadet corps who saw their acting commanding officer Lieut. E. Zeran accept the launch from Mr. Jones. Appreciation of Mr. Jones as chairman of the local committee, and of Lieut. Zeran, as acting commanding officer, for the generosity of Col. Wills in presenting the craft, was fittingly expressed.

Following the regular drill exercises at the Armouries, the cadets were marched to the dock where Ralph Collins put the craft through a brief demonstration prior to the presentation. Having a six-and-one-half foot beam, the craft is capable of approximately 12 knots per hour. In keeping with the name of the local corps the launch will be christened "Quinte".

Inspection Monday Night

Annual inspection ceremonies for the local sea cadet corps will be held on the Armouries lawn on Monday night at 7:30 it was announced Friday night. Lieut. W. G. Crothers, R.C.N.R., Area Commanding Officer at Cataraqui will be the inspecting officer.

Other officers of the local corps in addition to Lieut. Zeran are: Lieut. Addison Lloyd, Lieut. Wilbur Fox, Lieut. Howe, and Sub-Lieuts. Longhurst, Stewart and McCauley.

COMMONS VOTES

I know of to bring about the bankruptcy of the wage earner. What he needs is not a higher hourly rate of pay, he needs a higher annual income."

Mr. Ilsley, replying to the criticism of the government's policy, said the treatment accorded industry in the price control period of 1941-1946 differed entirely from that shown to the primary producers and wage earners.

"The level of farm prices has risen 44 per cent since the basic period in the fall of 1941, not including what participation certificates which would add several more units per cent," said Mr. Ilsley. "But with regard to the great range of commodities in this country the price ceiling has been very rigidly maintained."

Conditions had changed and a point had been reached at which it was unreasonable to expect certain industrial producers to carry on without some relief in the face of increased wages and material costs.

"I want to point out to this House and to the people of Canada the disastrous consequences of the implementation of a policy calling for the complete removal of the ceiling on prices of farm products," he said.

Effect Immediate, Violent

"Then the cost of living at once takes a great rise, with the condition of world shortage and national shortage in so many foods. When that rise in the cost of living takes place the effect on wages is immediate and violent.

"The effect on the prices of manufactured goods is immediate and violent, leading at once to further increases in wages and further increases in the price of farm products.

"So the policy of this government is not the removal of the ceilings on all farm products. It is the control of the prices of farm products, which we will try to operate as fairly as possible in a period of very great difficulty."

Mr. Ilsley said that while the Progressive Conservative motion did not call for the lifting of ceilings on all farm products speeches by members of that party had indicated that was their desire. Such a policy would mean ruin to the population of Canada within a few weeks.

He said he could not accept the C.C.F. motion either. The C.C.F., he believed, would favor permanent price control as part of a planned economy. Such a policy was constitutionally impossible regardless of its economic possibility.

He had no apologies to offer for the conduct of the prices board and said the government could not show favoritism to any one group in the country. It had to be fair to agriculture, industry, labor and other groups.

Did Not Want Increase

The government did not want to increase the price of farm machinery. It was not the type of action which would increase the popularity of the government. But the government could not be representative of only one group in the nation.

Mr. MacInnis said the clamor for removal of controls had come from big business and had resulted in the removal of some controls when such action was not justified. As a result, further inequities had been created.

Mr. Cruickshank said he disagreed with the removal of all price ceilings on farm products. He had at one time insisted on ceiling prices being removed from strawberries and raspberries but that was because they were perishable.

Mr. Irvine said the government, rather than allowing increases in the price of farm implements should have taken over the implement industry or enabled the farmers to operate it on a co-operative basis.

government as operator of the railroads.

Senator Pepper Heard.

Senator Pepper said he was "sure" the workers would restore train service if:

1. "Any permanent working conditions or benefits they might later work out with management in excess of those enjoyed during governmental operation should be made retroactive.

2. "If rule changes awarded by the emergency board are awarded by the government during governmental operation, and the government further allows reasonable wage increases."

The walkout by the 250,000 engineers and trainmen late Thursday also made idle an unestimated number of the 1,200,000 members of the 18 other rail brotherhoods. The American Association of Railroads termed the strike nearly 100 per cent effective. The 18 unions and the carriers accepted President Truman's compromise proposal of an 18½-cent hourly wage increase, but the engineers and trainmen rejected it.

100 Passenger Trains Moved

Some carriers operated trains in desperate efforts to maintain mail and passenger service, but it was estimated that fewer than 100 of the 17,500 passenger trains moved yesterday. Of a day's 24,000 freight trains, about 240 — or one per cent — operated. The trains were manned by supervisory employees, not bound by union rules.

The strike brought further shutdowns to industrial plants and continuation of the walkout threatened virtual closing of steel mills and coal mines and hundreds of factories. Widespread unemployment was threatened. More than 1,000,000 workers were idle because of labor disputes, thousands because of the rail strike.

The automobile industry faced virtually complete suspension of car assemblies early next week. Halting all car and truck production would leave about 750,000 workers idle.

Railroad terminals throughout the country were nearly empty but bus stations and airports were jammed by commuters and travelers.

Movement of thousands of cars of perishable food was halted and shipment of grain from farm areas stopped. President Truman in his speech asserted that 100,000 tons of grain were being held up by the strike.

In many cities, food supplies dwindled and there were many reports of heavy buying.

'CALAMITOUS'

week if the strike continues. Approximately 65 carloads of oranges which were rolling from California to Ontario when the strike went into effect, will not reach their destination, he added.

Meanwhile, several hundred Toronto residents found themselves stranded on Friday when they travelled to Buffalo by motor coach, hoping to find transportation to interior U.S. points.

Bus Lines Jammed

The Greyhound Lines station in Buffalo was jammed with hundreds of people, sitting on suitcases, hopefully waiting for accomodation on buses. But most waited in vain, as the crowded buses rolled through, stopping only for a change of drivers.

An official of the Greyhound Lines addressed an appeal to Canadians, planning bus trips into the U. S., to stay home.

"We've got more than we can do to handle American travellers demanding passage," he stated, "thousands are being turned away. There is hardly elbow room in the station."

At Ottawa, Revenue Minister McCann announced that motor traffic would be allowed to transport goods in bond from the U.S. to interior points in Canada. In addition, United States trucks would be permitted to use shorter routes through Canada, from Sarnia and Windsor to Fort Erie and Niagara Falls, carrying goods in bond.

There were other developments, too.

At St. Thomas, residents accustomed to the rustle and bustle of the trains, complained that they could not sleep because of the quiet.

At Chatham, one business man hired a taxicab to drive him to Florida.

U.S. Strike-Draft LaborProgramHits Trouble in Senate

Barkley Hopes Bill Passed By Night; May Be Modified

Washington, May 27 — (AP)— President Truman's "strike - draft" labor program hit fresh Senate trouble today, despite its quick approval by the House of Representatives.

Democratic Leader Alben Barkley (Ky.) voiced hope of pushing the proposed legislation through by nightfall, with perhaps some modifications, but some colleagues spoke in terms of days.

The threat shaping up to the bill is an unusual coalition of Republicans and pro-Labor Democrats who balked at Mr. Truman's recommendations for drafting into the armed forces workers who strike against the government, and for slapping criminal penalties on their union leaders.

The way the House whipped through the program by a 306-13 vote within two hours after Mr. Truman addressed the joint session of Congress Saturday evidently made little impression on Senate critics of the President's plan. They were in a mood to take their time.

The fundamental objection urged by opponents was summarized by Senator Robert Taft (Rep.-O.) who said the powers which would be vested in the president are too sweeping.

Besides requesting the draft-strikers authority and criminal penalties against employers or union leaders, the president's program included provisions for:

1. Transfer to the United States Treasury of all profits from government operation of a seized industry; 2. Injunction proceedings against union leaders inciting or encouraging a strike in a government-seized enterprize; 3. Arbitration to fix wage scales in strikes requiring government seizure; 4. The loss of seniority rights for workers persisting in striking against the government.

Several Seators privately criticized the idea of having profits going to the Treasury. One Democrat, who would not be quoted directly, declared: "This means the nationalization of industry."

The injunction clause likewise appeared certain to draw fireworks, so the prospect was that numerous amendments would be offered before the Chamber can get to final action.

Predicts Butter In U.S. Will Rise 10 to 12 cts. Pound

Washington, May 27 —(AP)— The United States government is about to let prices go up a cent a quart for milk and 10 to 12 cents a pound for butter.

Officials who withheld use of their names said also that cheese will cost about five cents a pound more.

These officials, predicting an announcement in a day or so, cited two reasons for the decision to boost retail price ceilings:

1. Grain and feed price increases earlier this month hiked dairy production costs.

2. Price stabilization officials have decided it would be futile to try to put through any new food subsidies in view af the opposition in Congress.

Six weeks ago Stabilization Director Chester Bowles sharply rejected proposals to boost dairy product prices, but later was persuaded to authorize grain price increases in a move to obtain more food for famine relief.

Canadian consumers will pay two cents a quart more for their milk after June 1 when the Prices Board stops paying a two-cent consumer subsidy. Subsidies to producers of fluid milk were increased last week from 35 to 55 cents a hundredweight, a level which the government will maintain until Sept. 30.

Weather Synopsis

The storm is expected to move northeastward but is not likely to give any rain in Ontario. Warm air covers the Maritimes, southern Quebec. Temperatures were over 80 west of Lake Superior yesterday afternoon. Northern Ontario and the northern Prairie Provinces are in cooler air with some cloudiness. This cool air is pushing southeastward and will cover all but the southwestern tip of Ontario tomorrow.

Britain to Complete Reconversion By End of This Year

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 27 (CP)— Reconversion of industry from war to peace production will be completed by the end of this year, if government expectations are fulfilled.

Within three months manufacturing industries and utility services will be employing the same number of workers as before the war. By Dec. 31 they will employ an extra 800,000.

The export industries, already employing 1,176,000—or 176,000 more than the pre-war level — will go up to 1,500,000.

Spokesmen for the Board of Trade and Labor Ministry report that industries are switching from war to peace output at "a progressively increasing rate."

During 1946 the armed forces will have been reduced in strength from 3,850,000 to 1,200,000; munitions workers from 1,800,000 to 500,000; and the number on demobilization leave from 750,000 to 250,000.

The reductions will make an additional 4,450,000 available for civilian employment. It is expected that the present working force will drop by at least 1,000,000 through retirement of elderly persons and return of women to the home.

The net increase is estimated by government sources at about 3,200,000, to be distributed something like this:

Home civilian manufacture, 1,400,000; exports, 600,000; building and civil engineering, 500,000; distribution, 300,000; and other industries and services, 400,000.

Since the war ended, there has been an increase of 2,368,000 —78 per cent—in the number of men and women making manufactured civilian goods for home and export. The metal and chemical industries, largely responsible for re-equipping other British industries for post-war production, more than doubled their strength as far as civilian output is concerned.

So far unemployment has been remarkably low, despite the speed of demobilization. At April 8 the jobless total was 371,410 in a total working population of more than 20,000,000. A slight reduction from the March level was the first reported since unemployment reached its record low of 60,000 around D-Day.

Valuable Poultry Destroyed

Cottam, Ont., May 27 — (CP)— Fire late last night destroyed a two-storey hatchery on the Kettlewell poultry farm at North Ridge. Volunteer firemen from this village, 20 miles from Windsor, fought the fire unsuccessfully.

About 1,500 turkeys, 500 pedigreed roosters and many hens were lost as well as a summer's supply of feed. The fire cut off a large well behind the hatchery, handicapping the firemen. Loss was estimated at $10,000.

TRUMAN KEEPS ALIVE TWO-WEEK COAL TRUCE

Issue Threatens Tie-Up Trains Put Back In Service by Ending Of Railroad Strike

Washington, May 27 (AP) — The United States coal strike—on again from every sign—threatened today to flag to an early stop many of the trains put back into service by Saturday's dramatic settlement of the countrywide railroad strike.

Not even President Truman — who succeeded in breaking the railroad deadlock—was able to wrest an agreement from John L. Lewis to keep alive the two-week coal truce which ended Saturday midnight.

Mr. Lewis, head of the 400,000 United Mine Workers (A.F.L.), was grimly silent as he emerged from the White House last night. He had not so much as a word for Mr. Truman's demand that Congress give him authority to order the arrest of recalcitrant strike leaders and draft their followers into the United States army.

The army provided one hint that some coal might be mined. the War Department announced last night that a detachment of 150 troops was en route to Madisonville, Ky., "for the protection of employees of the Pond River Coal Mine in Hopkins County." The request for protection had come from the Federal Coal Mines Administration —the agency set up after Mr. Truman seized the pits last Wednesday.

An armored unit was in the detachment sent from Camp Campbell, Ky.

While the trains were running again Sunday the government cautioned that its drastic strike-imposed transportation restrictions, lifted Sunday, might have to be clamped on again unless the coal supply improves.

Mr. Truman plunged into the bituminous crisis last night with his hands strengthened by widespread approval of his speeches Friday and Saturday emphasizing that he will not tolerate strikes which he considers imperil the United States economy.

Rocket Explosion Probed by Police

Brandon, Man., May 27. (CP)— Rudy Wiznowski, 14-year-old Brandon boy who was trampled to death here Friday night when a crowd watching a fireworks display stampeded, will be buried today.

Meanwhile police still were investigating the cause of the explosion which showered spectators with flaming fireworks and started the stampede. They said either a lighted firecracker or part of a burning rocket had dropped into a box containing 40 rockets and ignited the lot.

Condition of six others in Brandon hospital with burns or injuries was reported improved.

PROMISE AUSTRIA FOOD

Vienna, May 27 — (AP)—United States and Russian members of the Allied Council for Austria Friday promised the country 25,000 tons of food next month. The unexpected action will spare the Viennese from a diet reduction from 1,000 calories daily to a near starvation level of 700.

Wartime Kings, Exiled, Need Military Emily Post to Guide Their Destinies

By HAL BOYLE

Copenhagen, May 27 (AP) — Kings in wartime need a military Emily Post to tell them what to do if their countries are overrun. Should they stay and try to deal with the conquerors or take it on the lam?

It isn't easy to outline a rule of monarchial etiquette in such cases. There are pros and cons on both sides.

One—King Leopold of Belgium —stuck with his surrendered legions after directing them in the field and thereafter lived in compromise with the invaders.

Now he doesn't have a palace he can really call his own and lives in uneasy exile in Switzerland.

Exhibit two—George of Greece —Is the second King suffering from a housing problem in his native land. Accustomed to travelling on short notice — Greeks themselves wisecrack that he always keeps his bags packed— he now is sweating out his third exile.

Like Leopold, he is awaiting a popular referendum on the question of his return home.

Peter of Yugoslavia led a popular resistance movement against the Germans when Regent Prince Paul wanted to play ball with them. But Tito, who stayed, took over in the fifth inning from Peter, who left, leaving the young Monarch stranded in London without a throne.

Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands went to London and the "wise Queen" became even dearer to her people's hearts than before.

Zog of Albania is an example of "the King who looks and runs away may live to rule another day." But there is no evidence that Zog, who pulled out under the shadow of Mussolini, will never get a Soviet welcome.

Kings Haakon of Norway and Christian of Denmark rank with George of England among rulers least likely to suffer occupational unemployment.

British-American Bloc Being Waged Against Russia Says Molotov

London, May 27 (CP)— Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov, of Russia declared in Moscow today that a British-American "bloc" had waged an offensive against Russia at the recent Big Four Foreign Ministers Conference in Paris and that British-American capital was attempting to "subdue" war-weakened nations.

He said that Britain and the United States, "grouping themselves in a bloc, gave the conference no chance of reaching an agreed decision" on the disposition of Italian colonies or on the matter of Italian reparations. He said Russia could not agree to calling a formal 21-power peace conference until Big Four representatives reached preliminary agreement on treaty questions.

"On the question of former Italian colonies, it was particularly obvious that American and British delegations usually acted on previous agreement, although this ran counter to the lawful interests of other countries," he said,

"In the question of reparations, we encountered again an Anglo-American bloc which, here, too, did not wage an 'offensive for peace' but an offensive against the Soviet Union."

The Foreign Minister's statements were contained in a review of the Paris conference, published in Pravda and broadcast over Moscow radio.

Mr. Molotov asserted that State Secretary Byrnes of the United States had made a "somewhat inaccurate statement" in saying that he had obtained Prime Minister Stalin's "consent in principle" last December to a proposed 25-year treaty among the United States, Britain, Russia and France for accomplishing the disarmament and demilitarization of Germany.

Does Not Want Conference Yet

"In December Mr. Byrnes did not as yet have the draft of such a treaty and therefore Prime Minister Stalin's 'consent' to a non-existent treaty could not have been given," Mr. Molotov said.

Actually, Mr. Molotov said, the draft of the treaty which Byrnes presented at Paris and which drew strong Russian opposition "excluded the question of mutual assistance against German and Japanese aggression."

"It deals only with disarmament and for some reason ignores the most important decision in regard to Germany adopted by the Allies at Tehran, Yalta and Berlin and may lead to a weakening of inter-allied control aimed at preventing a recurrence of German aggression."

Mr. Molotov said if the United States insisted on calling a 21-power peace conference before preliminary agreement on treaty questions, "undesirable consequences" might result.

Mr. Molotov said the world press was "replete with reports that certain circles in the United States, having formed a bloc with their friends in Great Britain," are seeking to establish naval and military bases in all parts of the globe—on Pacific and Atlantic islands, in territories of the states of the western and eastern hemisphere."

Mr. Molotov said Russia could not agree to calling a formal 21-power peace conference until representatives of the "Big Four" had reached preliminary agreement on treaty questions.

GENERAL STRIKE CALLED BY SEAMEN ON LAKES, COASTS

Arrest of Canada Steamship Employees Causes Strike to Open Earlier Than Date Set

Toronto, May 27 (CP)—An estimated 5,000 Canadian seamen on the Dominion's coasts and the Great Lakes were scheduled to go on strike today to implement the Canadian Seamen's Union drive for an eight-hour day in place of the present 12-hour shifts.

A "complete tieup" of all vessels was demanded by President J. A. Sullivan of the union last night as he made public a telegram sent to Labor Minister Mitchell which said the arrests of Canada Steamship Lines employees at Montreal for allegedly deserting their ship was the cause of the general strike which originally had been set for June 3.

Two flareups were reported last night as a strike against the C.S.L., which went into effect Saturday, continued. A spokesman for the Union reported at Montreal that the City of Hamilton, C.S.L. freighter, was prevented from proceeding beyond Cornwall when its "scab crew" was forcibly removed by "about 300 persons who climbed aboard her" at that port.

Earlier, the crew of C.S.L.'s passenger steamer Noronic, strike-bound at Thorold, Ont., was reported to have barred an attempt to place a relief crew aboard her from the freighter Edmonton by swishing the Edmonton's decks with fire hose. C.S.L. officials at Montreal claimed beer bottles were thrown.

The Dominion Marine Association, representing operators of vessels which would be affected said in a statement that "other companies state that they will lay charges against any other seamen who strike illegally."

Charges are being laid under the Canada Shipping Act which in effect requires all crewmen to not "impede navigation" under possible penalty of three months' imprisonment.

Protest Arrests

Last night John Buckley, Vice-President of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada (AFL) and C. S. Jackson, Canadian Vice-President of the United Electrical Workers (CCL-CIO) protested against the six arrests at Montreal. Mr. Jackson said the seamen were being held without bail and added his union "condemned this misuse of the courts and laws as strike-breaking agencies."

GENERAL STRIKE—Page 14

WOULD ABOLISH TERMS 'OFFICER,' 'ENLISTED MAN'

U. S. Army Inquiry Group Favors Revision of Existing Difference

Washington, May 27 (AP)—The United States army's "gripe board" recommended today that the terms "officer" and "enlisted man" be abolished as one step to narrow the official and social gap between them.

An inquiry group headed by Lt.-Gen. James H. Doolittle proposed a thorough revision of existing differences in pay, promotion, furloughs, decorations and food, it called too for new measures aimed at raising the standard of army leadership.

But the big break with tradition came in the proposal that all military personnel be referred to merely as "soldiers."

Abolition of the hand salute except on army posts and in overseas occupied areas was among other recommendations made by the all-veteran board.

"Americans look with disfavor upon any system which grants unearned privileges to a particular class of individuals and find distasteful any tendency to make arbitrary social distinctions between two parts of the army," the group concluded in its 53-page report.

"There were irregularities, injustices in handling of enlisted personnel, and abuses of privileges in the recent war to such an extent as to cause widespread and deep-seated criticisms."

On the other side of the picture was the conclusion that "in the strict sense, the phrase "caste system," is inappropriately applied to our army at the present time since the selection of individuals for commissioned rank is based on democratic principles."

ELECTRIC AUTOMOBILE

London, May 27 — (Reuters) — An electrically-run automobile capable of 50 miles an hour is being perfected by a leading British motor manufacturing company working with an electrical engineering firm, the Daily Telegraph reported today. The usual drawback to electric cars — their great weight caused by lead plates in storage batteries—has been overcome by using plates made of magnesium, a light metal.

Muskrats Bring Highest Prices In Years at Winnipeg Sale

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 27 — (CP)—Highest prices for muskrat furs since the Dominion and Manitoba governments went into muskrat farming in a big way 10 years ago were received last week in Winnipeg when 285,000 pelts brought an average price of $3.57, the Mines and Resources Department announced today. Some pelts brought as high as $5.65.

The bulk of these furs, 233,000 pelts, came from the big Summerberry area in Manitoba which stretches from just east of The Pas along the Saskatchewan River to Moose Lake. The balance came from the areas in Netley Marsh, Fisher River and the Delta at the south end of Lake Winnipeg.

While the total number of pelts was down from the 1945 take by, roughly 87,000 skins, the price was up almost $1 a skin so that the total returns this year were $1,017,000 as compared with $967,000 a year ago.

The figures do not include the reserves in Saskatchewan operated entirely by the Dominion government which this year had a crop of 16,000 pelts. They have been sold but the returns have not reached Ottawa.

Muskrats are also trapped for private gain in every province in Canada and a normal crop is somewhat over 2,800,000 skins for the entire Dominion, including those taken in the government reserves. With prices so high this year, the returns from the rat harvest may well exceed $7,000,000 making it one of the most valuable spring harvests Canada has.

The largest crop comes from Ontario where last year around 650,000 skins were marketed. Manitoba came second due to the government activities, and Quebec third with around 230,000 rats trapped each year. The Northwest Territories produce about the same number as Quebec.

In Manitoba it takes between three and four weeks to harvest the crops and during that time some 1,000 families move into the areas and live in tents. The har-

Wholesale Price Ceilings on Two Grades Beef Off

Predict Early Improvement Of Supply in the Province

Ottawa, May 27 (CP)—In a move designed to free more beef for the consumer market, the Prices Board has suspended, effective today, its wholesale price ceilings on the two top grades—red and blue brands—of beef carcasses. The suspension, effective until July 20, will not affect consumer prices as retail ceilings remained unchanged.

Government sources today declined to estimate how much extra meat might be made available by the removal of wholesale ceilings, but it was understood the amount would probably not be large.

A board official, explaining the order, said the removal of wholesale restrictions was expected to facilitate movement of cattle during the current seasonal shortage.

In effect, it probably will mean retailers will accept a slightly lower mark-up on beef in order to obtain supplies, the spokesman said. In any event, the consumer will not be affected by any "squeeze" which may develop from the move except possibly to get more beef. It was understood a higher wholesale price might bring forward supplies believed to have been held back by feeders.

Unprecedently Low

Beef supplies, normally low around June 1 in the interval between marketings of grain-fed beef and grass-fed beef, have been unprecedently low this year with the shortage coming about a month earlier than expected. A Prices Board official said the supply situation has improved gradually since May 1 and should continue to do so. By July 20— when the present order is removed and wholesale ceilings again come into force—the supply of grass-fed cattle is expected to return the situation to normal.

DEALERS HERE UNCERTAIN

A feeling of uncertainty as to the possible reaction on the retail market was expressed by city butchers today following the weekend announcement from Ottawa that the wholesale price ceilings on red and blue brands of beef had been suspended until July 20. Retail ceilings will remain unchanged, it was stated.

The general consensus among city butchers was that it was just a bit early to determine what effect lifting of wholesale price ceilings would mean to the retailer, with wholesalers in many cases not yet having quoted prices to the local stores.

"I'm just sitting tight to see what develops", stated one butcher who had not yet heard from dealers regarding wholesale prices. Another butcher reported supplies were still short at his place of business, so short in fact that he had not opened for business Monday morning.

One butcher whose place of business remained closed on Saturday reported "plenty" of beef Monday morning and expected that in future supplies would remain fairly constant.

Denies Knowing Jews Were to Be Exterminated

Nuernberg, May 27 (AP)—Baldur Von Schirach told the International Military tribunal today that he had joined in a plan to ship Jews from Vienna to the occupied east, but insisted he did not know they were to be exterminated.

During cross-examined of the one-time Hitler Youth leader and Gauleiter for Vienna, the prosecution produced records of a conference between Von Schirach and Hitler in 1940, during which evacuation of 60,000 Jews from Austria was discussed.

The defendant has contended that he never participated in acts against Jews.

"You knew the Jews in Vienna were to be sent to Minsk and Riga," Prosecutor Thomas J. Dodd declared, "and you knew what happened to the Jews there."

Jury Selection For Rose Trial Opens at Montreal

Montreal, May 27 (CP)— Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure today dismissed a defence motion for a further adjournment of the trial of Fred Rose and ordered that proceedings go ahead against the Labor-Progressive Member of Parliament for Montreal-Cartier on charges of conspiring to communicate information to Russia.

The decision meant that selection of a jury started right away and His Lordship outlined the procedure to be followed.

Mr. Rose is free on bail of $25,000 and the trial was to have started last week but was postponed until crown exhibits, used in the conspiracy trial of Edward Mazerall in Ottawa, were available for use here.

Mr. Rose was in court early and sat with spectators on the public benches prior to opening of proceedings at 10.05 a.m. when he was called to the accused's box.

The choosing of a jury then got underway.

The court noted that the jurors must be independent and impartial. They must be fair-minded as between the crown and the accused.

A. Hobson, first prospective juror called, said he was secretary to the general manager of the Bank of Montreal here.

He said he had formed an impression but not an opinion after reading reports of the Rose preliminary hearing. It was a fairly deep impression.

Mr. Hobson admitted, after a question by Mr. Cohen, that defence would have to make a pretty strong case to eradicate this impression.

Mr. Hobson said he could not form an opinion from what he read, but he could have an unfavorable impression.

Mr. Cohen asked Mr. Hobson whether, if evidence was given that the accused was a member of the Labor Progressive party and that there was any connection between that party and the espionage investigation, he would have difficulty in arriving at an impartial verdict.

After short addresses by Crown and defence to the two newspapermen verificators, the reporters pronounced Mr. Hobson "impartial."

Mr. Cohen challenged the prospective juror peremptorily.

MILLION TOMATO PLANTS TO GO INTO FIELDS THIS WEEK

With ideal weather conditions prevailing and the soil in the best condition in years, upwards of one million tomato plants will go into the fields this week in this district, farmers stated over the weekend.

The rains of last week and the week previous not only accelerated growth in planted crops and pastures, but proved a valuable aid to farmers in their preparation of planting ground.

Tomato plants have come through the earlier stages of growth in excellent condition, a Wellington greenhouse operator stated, and barring exceptional weather conditions, should be the best in years.

Judge Cameron Acts in Dispute

Kitchener, May 27 —(CP)— A mass meeting late yesterday of rubber workers of the Kitchener area, representing five union locals of the United Rubber Workers of America (C.I.O.) endorsed a motion recommending to the union strategy committee that a rubber industry strike be called Monday, June 3, unless a satisfactory settlement is effected this week.

The union last week postponed the strike set for today if its wage and hour demands were not met. Twenty cents an hour increase and a 40-hour work week featured the demands.

Some 4,300 rubber workers of the Kitchener area are affected by the dispute. Postponement of the strike took place upon appointment of Judge Cameron of Belleville as a commissioner to look into the dispute.

Col. Merritt's Attempted Escape From Prison Camp Told in Book

By ROSS MUNRO

London, May 27—(CP) — The story of Oflag IVC at Colditz, Germany — the prisoner-of-war camp for Allied officers who escaped from other camps—is told in a new book called "Detour," edited by Lieut. J. E. R. Wood of Vancouver, who won the Military Cross in the 1942 Dieppe raid, where he was wounded and captured.

The 80,000-word book composes personal stories and commentaries by officer-prisoners of prison life in Oflag IVC and other camps, escapes and varied war experiences going back to Dunkerque and Crete.

"Detour" is financed by the British, Canadian and Australian Red Cross Societies and all proceeds from its sale go to the Red Cross. The first edition is expected to run 18,000 copies, selling at the equivalent of $3. Initial sale is in Britain, but it may be sold later in Canada.

Lieut. Wood, who was a prisoner at Colditz along with a handful of other Canadians, including Lt.-Col. C. C. I. Merritt, Canada's first VC of the war, in addition to editing the book, worked for months on producing it under a multitude of difficulties.

The type was set up by the Canadian Army before it withdrew from Holland, and the printing and binding was done by the British Army of the Rhine in Germany.

Contributing short pieces to the book are five Canadians who were confined in Oflag IVC, which was situated between Leipzig and Dresden and was considered by the Germans to be their camp for "bad actors" among POW's. Group Capt. Douglas Bader, Britain's legless fighter ace and escape expert, was at Colditz.

The contributing Canadians are Col. Merritt, V.C., Major G. L. Rolfe, DSO, of the Royal Canadian Signal Corps who was signals chief of the Calgary Tanks at Dieppe; Lieut. A. R. Marchand and Lieut. John Roy, both of Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal at Dieppe, and Lieut. Bill Scott, who won the Military Cross on the same raid with the Essex Scottish when he led a small group of infantry into the town.

"Detour" also has a detailed story by Lieut. Wood of the tunnel escape by 56 British officers and nine Canadians, the latter Dieppe officers, from Oflag VIIB at Eichstatt, south of Nurnberg, in June, 1943.

A tunnel 113 feet long was dug secretly, necessitating removel of 40 tons of earth. The Canadians who broke camp were Col. Merritt, Major Rolfe and Lieuts. Wood, Scott, Marchand, Barratt, Roy, A. G. Vandalac,, Fusiliers Mont Royal, and W. A. Millar, Royal Canadian Engineers.

After a few days' freedom they were recaptured. Returned to Echstatt, Major Rolfe and Lieut. Millar made another break through a window, but they were captured again. Finally all these Canadians were sent to Oflag IVC.

Tweed Man Drowns Despite Efforts Of Companion to Rescue Him

Despite heroic efforts of Percy Green to keep his head above water, Stanley Oakley Rogers, age 29, of Tweed, was drowned in Stoco Lake on Sunday afternoon as the two drifted helplessly for one and one half hours after their canoe upset.

The canoe in which the two were enjoying an afternoon's outing capsized near the middle of the lake and Green and Rogers were thrown into the water. Rogers was unable to swim and Green struggled to keep his head above water while the overturned canoe came toward shore. The plight of the two men went unobserved from the shore.

Dr. M. B. George of Tweed attended Rogers when he was brought ashore by his companion but although resuscitation was attempted he could not be revived. Death was due to exhaustion and exposure. Dr. M. G. Dales announced no inquest would be held.

Young Couple Near Exhaustion Before Rescued From Capsized Canoe

Miss Marion Diamond, 244-A George Street, and Bruce McAndrew, Hamilton, had a narrow escape from drowning on Saturday afternoon when they drifted helplessly for one-and-one-half miles in the Bay of Quinte after their canoe upset in choppy waves off the Government Dock.

Almost completely exhausted as they clung desperately to their overturned canoe, the two were rescued by Mr. Herb Collins and his son Ralph, who with Louis Romp, local fireman, went to their assistance in the Collins power launch. Other members of the department were readying another power launch to go to their assistance when it was seen the first boat was about to effect the rescue.

McAndrew was almost exhausted as result of his clinging to the overturned canoe in chilly water and told firemen when rescued that he could not have lasted another five minutes. Showing presence of mind McAndrews had assisted his companion to a position atop the overturned canoe while he remained in the water to keep it steady. Both had kicked off their shoes when rescued.

After a few hours rest, however, the two rapidly recuperated from their experience and were able to be about on Sunday. Today Miss Diamond returned to Montreal where she is taking a special course in a hospital in that city.

Truck Overturns, Burns, Driver Escapes Unhurt

Catching fire as it overturned after going out of control on a curve on Highway No. 2 near Napanee, a truck owned by the Quinte News Service and driven by Charles Palmer of this city was burned on Saturday night.

As the truck overturned the gasoline tank was ripped open, the truck apparently catching fire from the hot exhaust. Palmer, who was returning to Belleville after making his regular trip to Smiths Falls, received only slight facial lacerations as result of the accident.

Several other minor accidents were reported by local traffic officers over the weekend. Fortunately no one was injured.

On the Ferry Road near Deseronto a rear-end collision resulted in damage when a car driven by Jack Hill, Shannonville, crashed into the rear of a parked car. Owner of the second vehicle was Rhenos Maracle of Deseronto.

Two accidents occurred Saturday at Corbyville as a telephone pole and lawn fence came to grief in separate accidents.

Harry J. Spurgeon of Plainfield was driving north when his auto left the highway to tear out a portion of lawn fence, the property of Mrs. White. The telephone pole was broken by a motorist who failed to remain at the scene of the accident.

In the city a car owned by Kenneth Conley, Wellington, was reported stolen from its parking place on Pinnacle Street.

The Baccalaureate Service for the graduating class of nurses at the Belleville General Hospital was held Sunday evening in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The service was under the direction of the Rev. R. A. Cranston, B.A., Toronto. Approximately fifty nurses were present, accompanied by Miss E. Horton and her staff. Music was under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. John Deacon and a beautiful solo, "Let Not Your Heart be Troubled", was sung by Mr. Deacon. Mr. W. P. Youdale presided at the organ.

Addressing the members of the graduating class, Mr. Cranston impressed upon them their responsibilities as servants of the public and stated that their rewards, although not immediate, were definite.

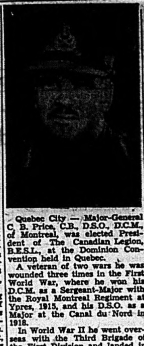
MAY EVACUATE ISLAND

Leawick, Shetland Islands, May 27 — (Reuters) — The 70 inhabitants of Britain's lonellest island, Foula, 20 miles west of the main Shetland group, may soon be evacuated. Often faced with the prospect of being cut off from the outside world for weeks at a time, J. G. Rae, missionary on the island, has appealed for more boats for passage to the "mainland," as the largest of the Shetlands is called; for a safer harbor and for footpaths so that peat can be carried to the crofts. Unless these improvements are made quickly the community will not survive, Mr. Rae said.



Quebec City — Major-General C. B. Price, C.B., D.S.O., D.C.M., of Montreal, was elected President of The Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., at the Dominion Convention held in Quebec.

A veteran of two wars he was wounded three times in the First World War, where he won his D.C.M. as a Sergeant-Major with the Royal Montreal Regiment at Ypres, 1915, and his D.S.O. as a Major at the Canal du Nord in 1918.

In World War II he went overseas with the Third Brigade of the First Division and landed in England, December 1939. Later he was placed in command of the Third Division. Following his retirement from this post he was appointed Overseas Commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross. Prior to the outbreak of World War II he was Dominion First Vice President of The Legion.

Circus Lions Cause False News of Escape

Detroit, May 27 —(AP)— Ten squad cars of armed police prowled northwest Detroit early today for a cageful of circus lions reported on the loose — then learned it was a false alarm.

A watchman started the hunt when he noticed a door ajar on the lions' wagon. No one knew if any, or how many, had escaped until trainer Terrell Jacobs arrived.

Jacobs counted lions and said all were present. The animals had clawed six square feet out of a canvas covering over their wagon door and broken both inside and outside locks on their cage.

Trenton, May 27 (Special)—The funeral of Frederick Berry, who died in the Belleville General Hospital on May 23rd., after an illness of five weeks' duration, took place from the Weaver Funeral Home on Saturday, May 25th. The service there and at Mount Evergreen cemetery was conducted by the Rev. A. S. McConnell, rector of St. George's Anglican Church.

The bearers were Herbert Smith, Robert Simpson, Ernest Seeds, Thomas Burden, Jesse Goodsell and E. Gregson.

The late Mr. Berry was born 62 years ago in Trenton and resided here all his life. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Berry. For many years he was employed as a conductor with the C.N.R., and was a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen's Association. He was a member of St. George's Anglican Church and was highly esteemed.

Surviving him are three sons, Reginald, Gordon and Thomas, all of Trenton; one daughter, Miss Margaret at home; two brothers, Harry of Montreal and Joseph of Trenton; three sisters, Mrs. Walter Collins, Montreal; Mrs. C. Lyons and Mrs. Ida Galna, both of Toronto.

CHARLES H. GREER
(Wellington)

Wellington, Ont. (Staff)— One of the largest and most impressive funerals in years took place here on Sunday when a large number of county and district residents paid the last tributes to the late Charles Hanson Greer, who died here on Friday after a brief illness. He was in his 67th year.

One of the highly respected residents of this part of Prince Edward County, the late Charles Greer was born in this lakeside village, the son of the late George Warner Greer and Mary Jane Pettingill. He resided here all his life with the exception of seven years spent in Weyburn, Saskatchewan.

Born to the soil, he followed the vocation of agriculture all his life and was held in high regard by farmers and other agricultural people of the village and county. Later he became associated with his brothers in the canning business and for a number of years assisted in the operation of a plant in his native village.

Easily Made Friends.

Possessed of an engaging personality, the late Mr. Greer easily made friends. He had the welfare of not only his own community at heart but also his district. He was beloved by all with whom he came in contact.

He was a member of the Wellington United Church, and devoted much of this time and efforts to the furtherance of its work here. Politically he was a Liberal, but never offered his services to the party in an official capacity. Municipal offices did not attract him, although he always had the welfare of the village and residents at heart.

He is survived by his wife the former Miss Del Stevenson; two brothers, Ernest D. and Lindlay J. of Wellington; two sons, George, of Brockville, and Joseph, of Toronto. The latter, who was in Vancouver on holiday at the time, was unable to reach his home in time for the funeral of his father due to transportation difficulties. Two daughters also survive, Mrs. George Watt (Mary), and Mrs. Terence Dorland (May.)

The funeral was held from the late residence, Consecon Street, on Sunday afternoon, amid a large crowd of sorrowing friends and neighbors. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. F. Lane, minister of the United Church here and the Rev. J. W. Robins, (retired), former pastor of this village, and a personal friend of the deceased. Many floral tributes exemplified the high esteem in which the late Charles Greer was held. Interment was made in Wellington Cemetery.

Honorary pall bearers were: Messrs. E. Parliament, Cecil Ritz, German Vandevoort, James Gassira, Frank Bell, Bruce Tice, Norman Webster, Albert Sanders and Hubert MacDonald.

Active pall bearers included Messrs. Eugene Greer, Malcolm Greer, Harry Stevenson, Bob Stevenson, George Dorland and Harry Pierson.

Magnificent Job

The six-man board's own criticisms were tempered with the assertion that the army, in meeting problems of a 40-fold wartime expansion, "did a truly magnificent job."

The board ascribed poor relationships between commissioned and enlisted personnel to "undeniably poor leadership on the part of a small percentage to those in positions of responsibility," and "a system that permits and encourages a wide official and social gap" between officers and men.

To improve officer leadership, the board recommended specifically that previous military training—preferably one year in the ranks—be required of all appointees, except technicians not placed in command positions.

Recommendations

Other specific recommendations included:

Retirement—A system to permit retirement after service of 10, 20 or 30 years, for enlisted men as well as officers, or after physical disability.

Pay—The present system of base pay should be "reviewed from top to bottom."

Allowances—Fixing allowances on a sliding scale base, with government-purchased food distributed equitable to all grades and ranks, and all ranks equally privileged to make private purchases. Clothing and uniforms should be issued to all ranks, instead of allowing officers to buy their own.

Terminal leave—Enlisted men as well as officers should be given terminal leave pay for unused furlough time, as provided in a proposal already before Congress; elimination of mustering out pay now given enlisted men and officers below Major.

Social relations—Off duty, all military personnel should be permitted "normal social patterns comparable to our democratic way of life." Use of discriminatory references such as "officers and their ladies; enlisted men and the wives" be eliminated.

Justice—Equality for all ranks, "the higher the rank the more severe the punishment" and provision for enlisted men to serve on courts.

Decorations—A system of awards to provide more equitable distribution based on merit and more difficult to obtain as rank increases.

Tabriz Place of Fear, Suspicion, People Have Forgotten How to Smile

By JOSEPH C. GOODWIN

Tehran, May 25 — (AP)—Tabriz is a place of fear and suspicion. Its people talk in whispers and have forgotten how to smile.

For eight days I walked and rode through the narrow, winding streets of this ancient caravan centre of Azerbaijan province, there post-war opportunists have established autonomous rule. I never once lost the feeling that the people lived in terror.

Stern, questioning looks follow foreigners. Everyone is suspected of being a spy. Residents retire behind clay walls and the streets are silent after dark.

Officials, except those at the top, pointedly avoid speaking to Anglo-Saxons.

Unseen by neighbors, some whisper that 90 per cent of the population opposes the "foreign-sponsored national government—but the other 10 per cent are armed."

A telegraph office porter to whom I offered a small tip for carrying a message to another part of the building dropped the bill to the floor. To a trusted friend he explained he was being watched by an "observer" of the Democratic party. He said he was questioned for hours about the incident and asked where he had previously known "this foreigner."

A young Iraqi interpreter was warned by a "friend" in the secret police to stay away from Americans.

One evening I heard shots under my hotel window. I saw a gang of civilian riflemen and soldiers quarreling. An army officer appeared and ordered two unarmed Azerbaijanians taken away under armed guard.

A group of American and English consular representatives in a cafe were threatened by an armed police officer, who asked, "Why do you laugh at us?" drawing his pistol, he said, "Some day I shall use this on you Anglo-Saxons."

A courier of the British Consul was denied admission to an airfield to take a plane to Tehran.

Jafar Pishevari, premier of unrecognized Azerbaijan, apologized for what he termed "isolated incidents" and said persons responsible would be punished.

Appeal to Tourists

These warm days show that the time is not far off when tourists will be making their entry into Canada from the United States to visit thousands of points of interest in the Dominion. Tourist trade will be one of the great businesses of reconversion from the war days for until this year such trade as comes with tourists has been hampered by the exigencies of the late war.

Canadians know that Canada is a land of appeal and United States residents know it too. With this attraction is the fact that our two peoples are racially related by the closest ties. When the tourists from the United States come to Canada they are in the land of friends, who were stout Allies and will always remain true friends for they have shown how they could be thus since 1814.

The United States and Canada are good customers of one another. One of the forms of that association is the tourist trade which will bring individual Americans by millions to visit Canada and carry home mementoes from this country. Canada in her forests and streams and other features has those things that please the mind and heart of a visitor in the summer season when it is a natural urge for people to travel and explore. Canadians themselves can well expend much more of their time exploring their own country just as Americans will be doing in Canada this year.

There has recently left Canada the Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, former British High Commissioner to Canada and just a few days ago installed as Governor-General of Malaya. Mr. MacDonald was a great traveller in Canada and knew this land better than many Canadians. He was tireless in his praise and study of the Dominion and her natural features and her people. Now there has come to this land a man who has played his great part in the Second World war with glory to the Empire and to himself, Viscount Alexander, the new Governor-General. He knows the world and is known by the world and he has already begun his visits to Canadian cities. He and his gracious lady the Viscountess Alexander will see and will know this Dominion as their predecessors Their Royal Highnesses the Earl of Athlone and Princess Alice and others before them came to know and appreciate Canada. Canada's Governors-General have been true friends of this country and have given of their time to serve Britain and this land and have seen Canada grow more and more in importance.

Canada's part in the Second World War in service of her armies for King and Empire and for the Dominion as well as for the United Nations has done much to expand the fame of this land. Her workmen and her agriculturists have made a high reputation which has given Canada high place among the nations of the world. Her navy was one of the great developments and the service of the R.C.A.F. and the Empire air project brought Canada renown.

It is no wonder that in this first full year of freedom from war since the fall of Germany and Japan, our cousins "across the line" will be drawn and attracted to Canada by many millions.

Every effort should be made by every organization and means and by every community and individual to make the welcome to the tourists a hearty one.

Lidice Avenged

Karl Hermann Frank, the Nazi paid with his life on the gallows at Prague the other day for one of the most horrible atrocities of the recent war, the murder of the men of Lidice in Czechoslovakia. He with the Nazi narrowmindedness doubtless thought at the time that it was the last of Lidice when he had the place destroyed by fire. But it was not the end. The Nazis were yet to be defeated and defeated they were and Hermann Frank was caught. He was tried lately and met his just dues for his cruelties and crimes.

This brutal "protector of Bohemia and Moravia "in the name of Hitler's Nazidom had wanted, to see "only corn growing" where Lidice had stood. But nature has been kindly, the graves of his victims are green. He would not have had it so could he have prevented it. He had made the name of Lidice one that will linger as the proof of Nazi barbarity and as well as of the courage and fortitude of the people of the Czechoslovakians.

A brave soul had shot German Hangman Reinhard Heydrich and so Karl Hermann Frank had set to work on his coldblooded deed of murder to punish the town of Lidice. Now justice has been done to the Hun who shed innocent blood.

The name of Hermann Frank will soon be forgotten but the name of Lidice will be one of the symbols of the inhumanity and barbarity that was Hitlerism and Nazism.

Now after the tempest of the Second Great World Conflict, justice is being done to many a savage Nazi. Hitler, himself the centre of the whirlwind of fate and retribution which struck the criminal Nazi organization has been considered a suicide in the awful days when Berlin was being blasted by the Allies and the Fuehrer found himself trapped like the rats he and other Nazis were. It is admitted he died by his own hand. Many other Nazis have been condemned and have paid with their lives for their bloody and inhuman deeds.

University Education in Britain

The United Kingdom Ministry of Education has just announced that from next October, any boy and girl in England and Wales who wins a university scholarship will receive government financial assistance, provided the parents' income is below £1,500 a year. The award will cover the full remaining cost of tuition and maintenance where the parents' income is below £600. There is a graduated scale for incomes up to £1,500. The scheme will bring state expenditure on scholarships and bursaries for university students from £520,000 to about £800,000 annually.

Most scholarships do not exceed a hundred pounds a year, and hitherto to meet the cost of a university career (usually three to four hundred a year) scholarship winners have often had to sit for other awards or borrow money from the local education authority. Hitherto there have only been three hundred and sixty state scholarships awarded annually — about half of them to holders of university scholarships. The new announcement follows the recommendation in June, 1943, of the Norwood Committee that "the winning of a scholarship at a university should in itself constitute a claim upon public funds for assistance."

Another recommendation of the Norwood Committee is also implemented in the Ministry of Education's announcement that the higher schools examination in its present form is to be discontinued and replaced by an examination in two parts, one of which will test for the award of university entrance or exemption from preliminary professional examination.

In accordance with the Norwood report, the schools certificate examination, now taken between the ages of fourteen and seventeen, is to be discontinued or radically reformed, to assure better provisions for the the individual needs of pupils by freeing them from the burden of external external examination before the age of seventeen. Instead, the Ministry of Education aims at the development of new techniques of school records, to discover individual aptitudes and intelligence.

Potatoes

Potatoes are very good to eat. Through what ordeals they have carried Ireland! On a diet of nothing but potatoes, parched corn and cocoa leaves the native Bolivian and Peruvian perform what to softer people seem miracles of endurance and power. in the Old World millions of persons now are starving. Yet in Alaska recently they were burning tons of potatoes. Questions of prices and distribution.

MEASLES

Measles are a child's disease,
Books say, for I've read them,
But I answer, ill-at-ease,
Grandpas also dread them.

Children with the fever burn;
Dry their skin and brittle.
When it's measles, grandpas learn,
They suffer not a little.

Mothers for the children care
Till the fever's ended.
Measles grandpas have to bear
By no nurse attended.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, May 27 — (CP)—Work of the Senate has been noticeably increased at the present session of Parliament and at the moment the Upper House has before it two important measures which have not yet gone to the Commons.

The practice, particularly during the war, was to introduce government bills in the Commons and after they had run the fire of criticism there they would go to the Senate for further consideration and final ratification.

There was objection from some groups in the Senate that they had insufficient work and they had been relegated to a very secondary position.

The two measures now before them — providing large scale amendments to the Bankruptcy Act and the Unemployment Insurance Act — will both require a good deal of work and are likely to lead to some fairly vigorous discussion.

The bill amending the Bankruptcy Act has received second reading and been sent to the Banking and Commerce Committee for detailed study. That Committee already has made it clear that it is anxious to receive representations from groups interested in the fairly broad changes proposed in the Bill and it is likely some time may be required for its consideration.

The proposed amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act are still before the Senate but once the Bill has received second reading it will go to the Labor Relations Committee. One feature about which there already have been indications of some objection is that which divides the authority of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

While the commission will remain autonomous so far as administration of the insurance fund is concerned it is, under the terms of the bill, to administer the National Employment Offices on behalf of the Labor Minister.

Redistribution: Under the redistribution legislation proposed by the government, only two former ridings will disappear. Manitoba and Saskatchewan each lose a constituency.

Electoral experts say that boundary ridings must be retained by very reason of their position so that the riding each in Manitoba and Saskatchewan that will be absorbed will be constituencies in the interior of those provinces.

Among the members in sparsely-populated interior ridings in Manitoba are John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader who sits for Neepawa and W. G. Weir, chief Liberal whip, who sits for MacDonald.

Among the members in similar-type interior ridings in Saskatchewan is John Diefenbaker, Progressive Conservative front bencher who sits for Lake Centre.

It is understood that the Progressive Conservative party has not made a final decision on its stand on the redistribution proposals. Neither have there been any indications of the attitude of the C.C.F. or Social Credit party.

New York, May 27 — (AP) — Yankee Stadium, long a bulwark of daytime baseball, will succumb to the lure of the arclights for the first time tonight when New York Yankees return from a long road trip for a night game with Washington.

Only Chicago Cubs, Detroit Tigers and Boston Red Sox now remain without night baseball equipment.

CHINESE PREPARE FOR POSSIBLE NEW BATTLE AT HARBIN

Groundwork Prepared by Gen. Marshall for Reopening of Peace Negotiations

Nanking, May 27 (AP)—Chiang Kai-Shek's forces pushed north today toward a possible new battle with Chinese Communists at Harbin, Manchuria, while Gen. Marshall prepared the groundwork for reopening of peace negotiations by the Generalissimo.

Dispatches to independent and pro-government newspapers place government troops in the vicinity of Tehwei, 90 miles southwest of Communist-held Harbin. Tehwei is 60 miles northeast of Changchun, Manchurian capital city retaken easily by Chiang's forces on Thursday as the Communists withdrew.

Recapture of Changchun and the renewal of direct negotiations between opposing factions brought the optimistic prediction from the Peiping newspaper Hsin Min Pao that a general truce would be arranged by Tuesday.

All observers agreed, however, that much will depend upon Chiang's next move. He and Madame Chiang were expected to return today from conferences with Chiang's generals at Mukden.

The Communists' Yenan radio declared that the "feeling for nation-wide peace and democracy by Chinese at home and overseas mounted with the growing civil war hostilities of the past month."

Gen. Marshall, special United States Envoy to China, conferred for 2 1-2 hours Sunday with Gen. Chou En-Lai, chief negotiator for the Communists. He also talked with Premier T. V. Soong, presumably on a projected $500,000,000 import-export loan to China.

Report Awaited

Gen. Teng Tai-Yuan, deputy chief of staff of the Communist eighth route army, arrived in Nanking aboard an American transport plane to report to Chou on progress of the Communist demobilization program. His report was awaited by both Nationalists and Communists. The former have charged that the Communists failed to carry out their part in the demobilization agreement.

A truce in the propaganda war waged by both factions was expected to be announced today. This would provide further evidence of the influence of General Marshall, who criticized such propaganda last week as fostering hatred.

Communists Hope Leftist Majority In Czechoslovakia

Prague, May 27 — (AP)—Unofficial and incomplete returns from yesterday's general election bolstered Communist hopes for a Leftist majority in Czechoslovakia's 300-seat National Constituent Assembly.

In general, the Communists were leading in Bohemia-Moravia, but were trailing the Rightwing Democratic party in Slovakia.

However, the returns indicated that Communists and the Leftist Social Democrats might be able to muster a majority in the Assembly, which will elect a new president as well as draft a constitution.

Showing unexpected strength, the Communists chalked up a plurality in Prague, upsetting the National Socialists, former party of President Edouard Benes.

Final unofficial figures for the capital gave the Communists 240,000, National Socialists 222,000, People's (Catholic) Party 105,000, and Social Democrats 97,000.

In Slovakia, with 500,000 votes counted, the Democrats won 59 per cent of the total and Communists 32 per cent. The Democrats are approximately equivalent politically to the People's Party in Bohemia-Moravia.

The voting was compulsory and Czechoslovaks turned out in large numbers to participate in the nation's first free election in 11 years. Perfect weather prevailed.

Only a relatively few ballots were cast in protest against the National Front Government, unofficial returns showed. Representatives of each party were assigned to the polling places to guarantee fair play.

WARTIME KINGS.

They are brothers—one stayed and one left his country before the spreading Swastika. Both are old men and both guide small nations in the forefront of world democracy. Haakon refused to leave for London until popular demand showed it the will of his people. He became in absentia a symbol of Norwegian resistance both in and out of Norway.

He came back a hero to a secure throne.

His brother stayed in Denmark and became a show piece of incorruptible Danish home front antagonism to Hitler.

The classic story of that resistance concerns the time the Germans, who had agreed to respect Danish sovereignty, flew the Swastika over a Danish flag on a Copenhagen government building.

Christian said if the Swastika wasn't lowered he would send a Danish soldier to do it.

"That Danish soldier will be shot," was the German reply.

"That Danish soldier will be myself," said the King.

The Germans then lowered their own flag.

BAD MEDICINE FOR CHILDREN.

Having become quite a coffee drinker in the Navy (writes F. W.) I would like to know why you consider coffee "definitely harmful for children" but consider it harmless if consumed in moderation by adults.

First, without looking up what I said about it, I'll bet you the works—complete set of 25 Little Lessons in the Ways of Health against a pipeful of passable fuel that I did not say what you quote. If I did I was suffering at the time from a lapse of consciousness. That word "definitely" was invented by—well, I can't say it here, but I can tell you I'll feel humiliated if you can show that I ever used the word as in the phrase you ascribe to me.

A cup of good coffee contains approximately 1½ grains of caffeine, which is a medicinal dose. Caffeine is a kidney, heart, nerve and brain stimulant.

Most adults can take two or three cups of coffee daily with benefit—provided they do not take it within four of five hours of bedtime. This is my belief and opinion and advice about coffee drinking. A few adults who are or should be under medical care should not drink coffee unless their physicians approve of it.

Children under sixteen years of age should not drink coffee at all. They need no such stimulation. If they do take coffee or even the bottled colored, flavored, sugared, carbonated beverage which contains about ½ grain of caffeine or caffeine-like drug to the glassful, it tends to disturb the functions of kidneys, heart, nerves and brain. For youngsters who are growing the health beverages, aside from water, are milk and plain fruit juice drinks sweetened as desired with sugar. The least injurious of the stimulants, if a boy or girl under sixteen must resort to stimulates, is cocoa or chocolate drink, but that too, stimulates kidneys, heart, nerves and brain; the less cocoa or chocolate and the more milk or cream used to prepare it, the better.

I shall not even mention here the many ill effects a child suffers from drinking coffee, tea, and other stimulants which adults may use with impunity, except on complaint which, judging by the number of requests for advice I receive nowadays, is on the increase—bed-wetting. I do not mean to imply that use of these stimulants in childhood causes bed-wetting. I do believe even occasional use of any of these stimulants by a youngster who has the bed-wetting habit is bad medicine.

On written request, if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope, I'll send a pamphlet about The Habit of Bed-Wetting.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Electro-Coagulation

Ten years ago you recommended a doctor who gave diathermy treatment of tonsils. Some time after it was done a specialist in this city examined my throat and remarked that it was one of the cleanest tonsillectomies he had ever seen! When I told him about the diathermy treatment he squirmed a bit but having committed himself he had to let it go at that. (E.W.S.)

Answer—To the best of my knowledge, even if a considerable amount of tonsil tissue remained in the throat, the treatment still might have been entirely adequate. If your original trouble had been cancer of the tonsil, your present "specialist's" opinion might have some weight, but a "clean" tonsillectomy is hardly the ideal to achieve in everyday practice. On the contrary it is better, I believe, to leave some tonsil tissue in the throat whenever this is at all feasible—as it is in most instances. On written request (no clipping, please), if you provide a stamped envelope bearing your address, I'll send you a pamphlet on "Tonsils and Adenoids."

Do honeybees gather beeswax?

It is a common mistake to suppose that honeybees collect wax from flowers.

Beeswax is a product of digestion and is secreted by the worker bees in the form of tiny scales that appear between the segments on the under side of the abdomen.

The notion that bees collect wax from flowers no doubt arose from the fact that many people confuse wax with the pollen that bees collect and carry to the hive in small masses attached to the hairs of the hindmost legs.

This pollen is used in making "bee bread," which is a yellowish brown substance consisting of pollen mixed with honey stored in the wax honeycombs for use as food for the young bees.

Beeswax has many industrial uses. Wax produced by bees and other insects is used in gun lubricants, cartridge wax and grease, ski wax, polishes, leather dressings, carbon paper, electric cable installation and water-resistant paints and varnishes, coatings for munitions, airplane parts, compositions for water proofing canvas and many other products.

Vegetable waxes obtained from sugar cane, cotton, a Central shrub (Candelilla) and other plants are used as a substitute for beeswax.

Beeswax is added to modeling wax to toughen the mixture.

Normally the United States imports several million pounds of beeswax from Brazil, Portugal, Cuba, Egypt and other countries.

"Sealing wax," the resinous composition used to seal letters and documents, contained beeswax in medieval times, but now it contains no wax of any kind. Modern sealing wax is generally made by fusing shellac with turpentine and coloring matter.

The Mummy Wheat Myth

By H. J. BUNKER, M.A., F.R.I.C.
(BBC Press Service)

London, (By Mail)—From time to time, we read of claims that wheat grains and other seeds recovered from ancient tombs have been planted, and, in spite of great antiquity, have grown to produce fine healthy plants.

These stories are usually put out in perfectly good faith. A few years ago an Englishman of unimpeachable honesty brought home from Egypt some seeds which were undoubtedly genuine; it was quite certain that they were several thousands of years old. The gentleman had these seeds planted in his garden, and to the amazement of those "in the know" they produced a very fine crop of plants, indistinguishable from modern varieties. On further investigation, however, it was found that the gentleman's gardener thinking it most unlikely that the poor-looking seeds his master had brought home from Egypt would produce much of a show, had planted modern seeds alongside the old, in order, as he said, not to disappoint his master! The deception was certainly well-meant

• • •

Mummy grains and seeds taken from ancient Egyptian tombs and of undoubted authenticity have, from time to time, been planted under strict scientific supervision, and it can definitely be said that whenever this has been done in no single instance has any of this seed or grain ever germinated. Such are the facts, disappointing though they may be.

What, then, are the actual facts as regards the longevity of seeds? Naturally, it varies immensely with different types of seeds, and without going into great detail, I can give you two interesting cases cited by Dr. Ramsbottom, Keeper of the Botany Department at the British Museum of Natural History at South Kensington.

• • •

As the result of air-raid damage to the Herbarium of the Museum in 1940, the seeds of some plants got damp, including a type of Mimosa which had been brought home from China in 1793. In spite of their long sleep of 147 years in the Herbarium the seeds germinated. But this is not the record. A seed of the Sacred Lotus Plant of the Nile (Nelumbium speciosum) was treated with concentrated sulphuric acid and then with water, and in a matter of a few hours it germinated, and is actually growing now at Kew Gardens. This specimen is known to have been collected 237 years ago. This is the longest period of seed viability of which we are absolutely certain. It is true, certain seeds of the same plant taken from peat deposits in Manchuria were germinated, and these deposits were thought to be three to four hundred years old, but we cannot be certain.

We do not know what determines the ultimate length of life of seeds, or why there is any limit to their viability. So far, we only know that the toughest don't normally germinate after two or three hundred years.

Perhaps one of the most interesting tests which has been done on the length of life of seeds or spores was a little experiment I was able to carry out some years back when Tutankhamen's tomb was discovered. It occurred to some of us that here we had a case of a tomb which had definitely not been opened for over 3,000 years, so that we would have an opportunity of seeing whether bacterial spores (which are highly resistant) or indeed any other form of life, had managed to survive thirty centuries of dormancy. So when the inner chamber of the tomb, embodying the golden shrines round the royal sarcophagus was opened, sterile swabs which we had sent out from England were wiped on the walls and on various objects in the chamber. They were then sent home to us for bacteriological examination. In every case the contents proved to be sterile. Indeed, the same applied to the various mould fungi and insects which were also found in the tomb: all were dead. The last spark of life had gone out sometime during those three thousand years.

• • •

So the cold facts of science have shattered these two stories about mummy wheat and disease producing microbes living on in the tombs of the Pharoahs. It might have been more exciting had the wheat grain germinated to a living plant, or the bacteriological spore to an active culture, but science only recognizes one knd of romance, that of truth. It was Thomas Huxley who said "A tragedy is a beautiful theory killed by a fact," and unfortunately such tragedies have to happen every day in the world of science.

French Political Tension Grows

By HAROLD KING

Paris, May 25 — (Reuters) — French politics have become so heated in the last three days that a cabinet crisis may explode when the council of the ministers meets next Wednesday — four days before polling day for the new interim constituent assembly.

Tension between Communists and Socialists has reached a high pitch following repeated references by Andre Letroquer, Socialist minister of the Interior, to the "desertion from the army" of Maurice Thorez, Communist leader and vice-premier.

The Communist party retaliated with charges that M. Letroquer "went to see Laval" (Pierre Laval, head of the former Vichy government) during the German occupation.

The Communists are believed unofficially to have requested their Socialist colleagues in the government to exercise restraint in their election speeches unless they wish to endanger the existence of the present three-party government, composed of Socialists, Communists and the Mouvement Republican Populaire.

As the election approaches, the question of whether the Soviet Union, through the French Communist party, is exercising undue influence on French policy, is assuming increasing importance.

The Socialist party, after siding with the Communist party to support the proposed constitution, defeated by popular referendum May 5, has taken a prominent part in making "Communist dependence on Moscow" an election issue.

The Radical, Conservative and M. R. P. parties have not lagged behind in stressing that the right or wrong way of voting means the difference between the maintenance of freedom and the institution of a totalitarian dictatorship.

BE KIND TO ANIMALS

DR. BAKER'S COLUMN
Edited by Dr. Charles B. Baker, B.V.Sc.

HINTS on Feeding the Young Puppy

A young puppy requires to be fed at least four times a day. As the puppy advances, this should be reduced until the young dog is being fed only twice a day—morning and night. A grown dog requires to be fed only once a day—preferably at night. Quantity, of course, is governed by weight. It is mistaken kindness to overfeed any dog.

Dogs are carnivores. That means that their natural diet is meat. Meat, cooked or raw, is good even for the young puppy. It may be supplemented by the milk foods, table scraps, green vegetables and the branded biscuit products of reliable firms.

This advertisement is approved and endorsed by THE SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

Man's Best Friend... Just when the dog first entered into his alliance with man, no one knows...but he has proven to be a truly sincere and unselfish friend of man down through the ages.

When misfortune strikes, the faithful dog remains at his master's side to defend against danger, to guard his home and, if necessary, to lay down his very life to protect those he holds dear.

All kindness begins with understanding. Be kind to your dog. Understand and appreciate the nobleness of his nature and character. He will repay in affection, gratitude and loyalty every kindness you can bestow.

The Rev. J. G. McKee, of Grace United Church, officiated. Mrs. J. Gould was soloist singing "Because".

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a two-piece rose street-length dress with a corsage of Talisman roses. She was attended by Miss Gena Elizabeth Simpson, who wore a grey ensemble with a corsage of American Beauty roses.

Mr. William Smith was his cousin's groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the flower-decorated rooms of the bride's home, the bride's mother receiving in a two-piece turquoise and black figured dress. Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Frankford, and Foxboro.

For the wedding trip to Toronto, the bride donned a brown suit and topcoat with matching accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Smith will take up residence in Trenton.

33rd Birthday Rebekah Lodge Is Celebrated

A very pleasant event took place in the Oddfellows' Temple on Tuesday evening last, when Quintena Rebekah Lodge, No. 133 celebrated their 33rd. birthday.

A large number attended the regular meeting, the Noble Grand's chair being occupied by the Vice-Grand, Miss Evelyn Frost, in a very capable manner.

Guests were present from several sister lodges, among them Mrs. Mildred Morrow, District Deputy President of Belleville District, No. 30, who was introduced by Miss Phyllis Twiddy, Jr. P.N.G., and officially welcomed by the lodge.

Presented with Bag.

Before the closing exercises Mrs. Irene Aman, who has resigned from her position as Degree Staff captain, after a number of years' outstanding work in that capacity, was presented with a plastic bag as a token of the esteem of the degree staff. The presentation was made by Mrs. Georgina Charlton, Noble Grand, and Mrs. Eva Turvey, P.N.G.

Delightful speeches were given by Mrs. Mildred Morrow, D.D.P.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frost, the only charter members present; Mr. Wm. Brooks, a former charter member of Madoc Lodge; Mr. Gordon Miller, D.D.P.; Mr. Geo. Kerr, P.G.C.P., also Mrs. Sharpe, who was the eldest veteran member present, initiated the night the lodge was instituted, and spoke on behalf of the other members present, also initiated the same night.

Party Held.

After lodge closed a delightful birthday party was held. The refreshment committee was in charge of Mrs. Rosetta Kerr, and the decorating and serving in charge of Mrs. Margaret Cherrie, while the games and social part held later were under the direction of Mrs. Lena MacMillan and Mrs. Lena Belnap.

The lace covered table was beautifully decorated with tulips, bleeding heart and lighted pink and green tapers. An immense birthday cake, which was later cut by the D.D.P., Mrs. M. Morrow, formed a beautiful centrepiece. Tea was poured by Mrs. Irene Aman, P.D.D.P., and Mrs. Ethel Frost, a charter member.

"HOLINESS OF WORK" SUBJECT OF SERMON

"The Holiness of Work", was the subject of the Rev. R. F. Palmer's sermon in Christ Church on Sunday night. Taking for his text from Colossians 3, "whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." Dr. Palmer led the congregation from our Lord's experiences as a carpenter at Nazareth down to their own everyday work. "When we do a good job, God is glorified because all work is holy." The preacher is the superior of the society of St. John the Evangelist at Bracebridge.

ST. PAUL W.A.

Marmora.—The life of Rudyard Kipling with allusion to his poems was interestingly portrayed by Mrs. Gerald Clute of Stirling, guest speaker at the May meeting of St. Paul's W.A., held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. R. Pearce. The President, Mrs. J. M. Brownlie, occupied the chair. The meeting opened with prayer by Rev. J. M. Brownlie, who also led in a brief Litany which was followed by the membership prayer. The Bible reading was taken by Mrs. C. V. Wallace. Thank-offering boxes to be used by the members during the summer months in which meetings have been suspended, were handed out by the Secretary, Mrs. W. D. Lavender. The treasurer's report was presented by Mrs. J. W. Hickey.

Rev. J. M. Brownlie read a letter received from Rev. H. Watts, of the M.S.C.C., in which the latter quoted extracts of a letter he had received from a Japanese missionary, describing conditions in his land.

The guest speaker was then introduced to the gathering and at the close of her subject, received a hearty vote of thanks.

Refreshments were served.

The next meeting will be held in September.

Mrs. Clute was accompanied on her visit by Mrs. C. C. Brazill, wife of the rector at Stirling.

MARMORA

Interesting Replies Given in Novel, Original Contest

Marmora.— Some interesting replies were forthcoming in a novel and original contest held by the Publicity sub-committee of the Deloro Safety Committee this month. The fact that there was a decrease in safety suggestions sent in by employees in 1945 to the number submitted in 1944 gave birth to the idea of this sub-committee to hold a contest which was named, 'Why Didn't I Turn in More Safety Suggestions?" The entries were submitted on the usual entry blanks upon which the contestant's name is not written. These blanks are numbered and the contestant retains the counterfoil for later identification of the winners. In the case of this particular contest just closed, the replies are being kept strictly confidential and those thought by the sub-committee to be worthy of consideration will be laid before the General Safety Committee for whatever action they consider necessary.

The winners of this "Why" Contest are: 1. Jack Reynolds, 2. William Brown, 3 Patrick Bertrand.

Chase Away Dry Skin Blues

Use a heavy cream at bedtime

By HELEN FOLLETT

HUMAN SKIN performs many duties. It sends off vapors of which the body must rid itself. It pours forth oil that keeps the epidermal coat soft and pliable. It has much to do with regulating body heat. And all the time it is doing a hail and farewell act, fluffing off dead scales, building new ones.

When the scaling is more than normal, the complexion is dry. Powder shows up plainly. Also, the dry skin is likely to take on early wrinkles. Something should be done about it.

Mild Dermatitis

The victim of a mild case of dermatitis must use lubricants lavishly. Remove make-up with a thin cream. Use a heavy one after the face washing at bedtime, letting it remain on over night. When summer comes with bright, flaying sunlight, oil the complexion before going out of doors.

It may happen that a complexion of this character will kick up a fuss when soap is used. Keep experimenting with soaps until you find one that will get along with your temperamental skin.

Cosmetic Meal

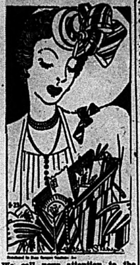
If no can find, then you must use a cosmetic meal that serves as an understudy for soap. These meals are not drying, and they do a first class cleansing job. Moisten a washcloth, sprinkle on the meal, go over the flesh lightly. Rinse, dry gently, then on with a cream.

Dryness may be due to a diet deficiency, not enough butter on the bread, not enough cream in the coffee. More fat in the daily intake of groceries will cause the sebaceous glands to get on the job, behave as they should. It is their business to keep dryness away.

Drink more water; your skin may be thirsty. Few women drink as much water as they should. Four glasses are not too many; if one is active six are better. Take one before breakfast. It will wash out your tummy, aid digestion.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON



We call your attention to the contents of the handbag

Good grooming makes the grade.

Smart simplicity of dress, and fastidious regard for the little things, create the lady of fashion. She may indulge in what appears to be over-fussy millinery but, depend upon it, the lids she wears will not be goofy. To be conspicuous spoils the picture. She realizes that, if one has chic, one has no reason to bawl about Nature having been niggardly in bestowing good-looks gifts.

Now, my children, let's list the sartorial slips that occur all too frequently among the rush-abouts. You know them. They'll make a train by the skin of their teeth. As hair-combers they are record breakers, with the result that there are rag-tags and bob-tails of tresses to mar the smoothness of the hair-do. We regret to record that the shampoo date is often postponed. Ambrosial locks lack luster, curls go stringy and sometimes—let us whisper—there is an unpleasant odor to the scalp. Something should be done about that.

We will now call your attention to the contents of handbags that reflect careless grooming and slovenly personal habits. The handkerchief is soiled, so is the powder pad. The bag contains just about everything except the spareribs for dinner.

One must deplore runover heels that throw the foot to one side do damage to tendons, cause corns and calluses to form on the little toe. And how horrid they look! Crooked seams in stockings make men rage and rant. You wouldn't think they'd notice such trifles, but they do. As for the slip showing! The members of the stern and growly sex seem to consider that a crime. A slip that is visible at the neckline is a sartorial error. Skirt plackets that are not zipped all the way are the result of just plain slipshod carelessness.

Worse than all else is an untidy face. We are referring to the technique—or lack of it—of the lady who puts her make-up on a skin that is not scrupulously clean. She washes her face at bedtime, rinses it in the morning, but does numerous retouchings with rouge and powder pads during the day and evening. She pays. The skin becomes coarse, and blackheads appear.

Peeling nail polish makes the hands look unlovely. If a girl will not pay attention to this detail she should not use the rosy veneer, but revert to a dry polish and buffer. Polish should be removed and renewed at frequent intervals. Patching up the application does not make for daintiness of appearance.

Good grooming calls for a foundation garment that molds the figure neatly, yet does not impart an appearance of rigidity. Quivering flesh is not attractive, as some misguided dames seem to fancy.

Y.P.U. Meets

3rd. Sidney—Centenary Young People's enjoyed a "hay-riding" party and box social on Friday evening.

Meeting about nine o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Aikens, the jolly party started out on a rubber-tired wagon, loaned for the occasion by Mr. Gordon Woods, and driven by Mr. Denike with his rubber-tired tractor.

On their return the boxes were auctioned by Mr. Burton Hubble, convener of missions for the Y.P.U., and the proceeds, which amounted to $26.70, will be used to further the work of Miss Dorothy Pearson, M.A., a missionary in Madras Christian College, India.

Mr. and Mrs. George Denike, Eudora and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Denike spent Sunday at the home of the latter's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Farnham, Cannifton. Mr. Farnham was celebrating his 83rd. birthday and a family dinner was held in his honor.

Mr. Wilmot Bailey spent Tuesday in Toronto.

Mrs. Allan McDonald of Shannonville, is visiting her daughter, and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Grills.

Mrs. Ken Jones, president, and a few members of Aiken's W.A. attended the convention held in Albury church on Thursday.

Actually Dependable

By PRUNELLA WOOD

This is an unusual tale, in that it tells of an earrings which hangs onto the ear, rather than of an earring whose owner tries to hold on to it. . .hopelessly, and in pain.

The pretty jet and fake diamond ear-bob is fitted with a new wingback gadget, so-called, which neither screws onto the lobe, nor clasps it viciously. Instead, it slips into the dip of the ear, whence it hangs comfortably and surely, over the lobe in the usual effect. A delicate rod braces the bottom of the earring the lobe. There are necklaces and bracelets to match the earring, all designed to "go with" and enhance your new black and white hot weather clothes.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

She Shouldn't Write "Mrs." in Her Signature

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please settle a discussion between my husband and me? I use my maiden surname as a middle name: like this, Leona Smith Jones. My husband says that when I sign my name to a letter I must sign "Mrs. Leona Smith Jones". I say that I may sign it "Leona Smith Jones". Who is correct?

D. D. D.

You are right . . . the correct signature to a letter is your informal name, Leona Smith Jones. In no case would it be correct for you to sign a letter "Mrs. Leona Smith Jones". If you are writing to a friend, you would sign only your first name. If you are writing to someone you don't know very well but who does know your husband's name, you would sign "Leona Smith Jones". But when you are writing a business letter or to someone who doesn't know your husband's name, this is the correct form:

Very truly yours,
Leona Smith Jones

English Girl Plans Her Wedding in America

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Having recently arrived from England, I am not yet accustomed to American ways. But since my arrival I have been reading your column, have learned much from it, and would so much appreciate your help in planning my wedding next month to an ex-GI. It is to be a home wedding, very informal, and the reception will be at an inn.

1. At the reception is it proper to receive and greet every guest?

2. Who toasts the bride? And what would be a proper toast?

3. How is a 2-tier wedding cake cut? And who cuts it before it is served?

J. T. B.

A hearty welcome to our country. . . and may every wish that you can wish, come true for you in your marriage! I'm delighted to be of help to you in your wedding plans.

1. Yes. You and the bridegroom (you at his right) stand together to greet each arriving guest. If you are to have an attendant, she stands at your right. (The best man does not stand in the receiving-line, and neither do ushers.) And if, at the inn, it is convenient to have others in the receiving-line, you may, if you wish, and if it is possible include someone (a relative perhaps, or a friend here) as a representative of your family, and also in the line may be the bridegroom's mother and possibly his father. (I must mention all these "if's" because you did not tell me who is to be at the wedding. I wish you would write me again, more fully about your plans, so that I can answer your question about the reception more definitely.)

2. Customarily it is the best man who proposes the first toast, the toast to the bride and her bridegroom, and the bridegroom replies with thanks for his bride and himself. Other toasts may be proposed and usually are. . . and I'm pretty sure that on this occasion there will be toasts proposed to you, toasts to welcome you as well as to offer you "best wishes for your happiness always!"

3. You, the bride, should cut the first slice of cake, from the bottom tier, and share it with the bridegroom . . . symbolizing your promise to share with him now and always. When only a few guests are present at the reception, the bride sometimes cuts the rest of the cake for the guests. Or a waiter or caterer's assistant may cut and serve it. Or if the service is buffet, the guests may cut the cake for themselves.

Why should a $500,000,000 BUSINESS ESCAPE INCOME TAX ?

The Dominion Government depends for almost half its revenue on Income Tax and Excess Profits Tax from industry and business. There is one large section of business which at present is not contributing one cent of this revenue. We refer to co-operatives in all parts of the country.

We are not attacking the principle of co-operative trading, but we do stand for equality of taxation. We believe that all enterprises, from great organizations handling farm produce to small country stores should bear their share of taxation whether they are operated by co-operatives or privately owned by one or more citizens.

Here are a few facts we would like you to bear in mind:

—The business turnover of co-operatives was more than $527,000,000 in 1944—an increase of 50% over 1943, and more than double the 1942 turnover.

—Co-operatives have an investment of more than 40 millions of dollars in plant and equipment, and total assets of more than 200 millions.

—Co-operatives are engaged in buying, selling, processing, manufacturing, servicing; in flour milling, oil refining, the manufacture and distribution of farm implements, printing, publishing, the business of owning and leasing property, bus transportation, home building, trucking, rural electrification, telephone service, etc.

Expansion through non-payment of Income Tax

The rapid expansion of the co-operatives in recent years has been due to the fact that they have escaped paying income tax.

Privately owned businesses have paid Income and Excess Profits Taxes ranging up to 100% of their profits. Co-operatives claim they have no profits. What they call "savings" are either added to reserves or paid out as "patronage dividends" to their customers.

A Royal Commission has declared that co-operatives do make profits, and recommends that these profits be taxed. But this Commission has also recommended that profits paid out to customers as "patronage dividends" be allowed as an expense in computing taxable income.

Are all profits to be tax-free?

If such a recommendation were to become law, it would leave the door wide open for the payment of all profits as "patronage dividends". Co-operatives would still continue to escape the payment of income tax. "Patronage dividends", which are paid out of profits, must be placed in the same category as dividends in any privately owned business.

Revision of The Income War Tax Act, insofar as it concerns Co-operatives, will come before the current Session of Parliament. It is of utmost importance that such revisions shall bring tax equality to all groups. We urge that the income tax payers of Canada insist that their elected representatives in the House of Commons see that the heavy burden of income tax is shared fairly by all.

The Income Tax Payers Association has no objection to the principles of co-operative trading. It should be the right of every Canadian to trade as he desires. Our objective is to ensure that no section of business unloads its share of income taxation and cost of the war on other business or on individual income tax payers.

Moselkatse, Tyrant of the Matabele

This story of the extraordinary friendship of Moselekatse, one of the most ruthless dictators of nineteenth-century Africa, for Robert Moffat, the missionary father-in-law of Livingstone, gives a fascinating picture of the mission-field of the period. The Moffat Journals, just published, and here reviewed by V. S. Pritchett in "London Calling," recount the story, and place on permanent record the earliest European account of Rhodesia.

"I am in the Lord's service and He will order all things well. After forty years of His goodness in the mission field, I have no reason to complain. I see the finger of God pointing during my course through the labyrinth of my life."

Those pious words were written by Robert Moffat, the African missionary-explorer in the middle of the last century, and they bring back to our minds an Africa we have forgotten: Livingstone's Africa, the Africa of the Christian missions, the Africa of the hymn book and the manse, 'where every prospect pleases and only man is vile.'

Let us be frank about it: missionary Africa is not a subject which many of us find very sympathetic. And yet, if we allow prejudice to blind us, we shall miss an important phase of African history and exploration. And we shall also miss a fascinating aspect of the human character.

Even when we have set aside the gigantic figure of Livingstone, who was the greatest explorer of the nineteenth century, indomitable, and fated like the great tragic figures—even when we set him aside, there are smaller men in the opening-up of Africa who repay attention. Robert Moffat, who was Livingstone's father-in-law, is one of these. Mary Kingsley, whose opinion everyone will respect, once said that Moffat was in the first rank.

Robert Moffat's Journals from 1829 to 1860, and John and Emily Moffat's journals and letters about the Matabele mission, have just been published in three handsome and brilliantly edited volumes for the Government Archives of Southern Rhodesia. Take these three books together, and you get a fascinating, intimate, domestic, but dramatic picture of missionary life and travel. For Rhodesians, it has the interest of being the earliest European account of the country.

The centre event in Robert Moffat's life was his dangerous journey to Moselekatse, the bloodthirsty chieftain of the Matabele, through country wasted by all the horror of tribal war; the central mystery is the fact that this unemotional, unresponsive, literal-minded Scot elicited the awe, the friendship, and, one must indeed say, the infatuation of one of the bloodiest tyrants Africa has known. One of the charms of this impossible relationship is that Moffat was inadequate to it, and remained all his life stolidly bewildered by the personal emotion he had aroused.

Moffat was the first white man to see Moselekatse, who was astonished that a stranger should come to see him alone, not to beg or threaten, but to preach.

"My heart is as white as milk," said Moselekatse, laying his hand on Moffat's shoulder. "I am still wondering at the love of a stranger who never saw me. You have loved me, you have fed me, you have protected me, you have carried me in your arms. I live today by a stranger of another nation."

A Drama of Imperialism or Power Politics.

Metaphorical, almost Biblical words. One can see, though they could speak to each other only thru' interpreters, that they, the two men spoke in a common metaphor. Is that the explanation of Moselekatse's passion? I hardly think so. One must look further into Moselekatse's life. He was a tyrant, a conqueror, who ruled a devastated country by murder and terror. The rise of the Matabele under Moselekatse is one of those dramas of imperialism or power politics the pattern of which is the same for the jungle as it is for civilization. Listen to this from Moffat; does it not sound rather like today?

> In this way Moselekatse carried his conquests, in the first instance generally cultivating acquaintance and intercourse; then familiarity followed by haughtiness and overbearing conduct; then would follow temptation of cattle allowed to wander in the way of the natives, who also appear to have been easily duped. When such cattle were taken or other offence given, Moselekatse considered himself the sufferer, with a right to retake his own and punish the aggressors.
>
> When any town or towns, like the Gideonites of old, sued for his friendship, he promptly acceded, immediately sent consuls with the professed object of assuring them of Moselekatse's friendship, and defending them and their property; but in reality to represent their sovereign, and to be spies on all their transactions.
>
> The result was that the warriors of the town were soon called to unite with those of their new ally, and very likely on their first return from the capture of cattle, they would seize those of their unconscious assistants on the pretence that they would be safer under the care of Moselekatse. From thence would commence the vassalage of the whole body, whom Moselekatse endeavored as soon as possible to amalgamate with his own people.

Such was Moselekatse. Moffat went straight to him, rebuked him for his wars and his murders, spoke of Divine retribution, and pegged away at the most difficult points of Christian doctrine. How far Moffat was responsible for the slow amelioration of conditions among the Matabele, is hard to say justly.

Tyrants are more apt to become liberal through weakness and necessity, rather than from rational conviction. But what is certain is that Moselekatse's feelings were touched by Moffat. The ugly, old hippopotamus— for Moselekatse was fat from gluttony and drink—craved for Moffat's company, wanted always to be near him. He especially liked getting into Moffat's comfortable bed in his wagon, and the anxious missionary used to inspect it for lice afterwards.

Moselekatse certainly did not regard Moffat as "a white god"; it may be that he regarded the missionary as an astonishing curiosity. What seems, however, most likely is that Moselekatse saw in Moffat a man as independent, perhaps as lonely, as himself; honest, disinterested, capable and self-possessed.

Longing for Moments of Honest Speech.

All Moselekatse's advisers and subjects were simply human gramophone records repeating his own voice. He had built up a system of automatic flattery. The fact is that Moselekatse was the isolated tyrant, bored to death by his own propaganda, longing for small moments of truth and honest speech.

Moffat went to Moselekatse several times in the course of years. The chieftain aged quickly and was presently a dropsical horror, plaintive but shrewd, affectionate but as inattentive as a child; but the emotion was still there. Here are a few lines describing one of the last visits:

> On turning round I saw him. There he sat—how changed!—the vigorous, active and nimble monarch of the Matabele, now aged, sitting on a skin with feet lame, unable to walk or even stand. I entered, when he grasped my hand, gave one earnest look, drew his mantle over his face. It would have been an awful sight to see the hero of a hundred battles wipe from his eye the falling tear.
>
> None saw the whole of the scene, except one or two of his wives, who sat behind their lord to minister to his wants. He spoke not, except pronouncing my name, Moshete, again and again. Withdrawing his head, he looked at me again, his hand still in mine, and again covered his face. My heart yearned with compassion for his soul.

Moffat surprise us by displaying some of Livingstone's humor, for example, describing the scene when a young man was made to put on Christian clothes:

> But to return to the scene in the king's private enclosure. He ordered Monyebe to go to his wagon, his storehouse, and bring some clothes. These were brought, trousers and a hat. These were for Macheng, whose head and posterior never were adorned with such articles. As he had to dress there and then, he, with the assistance of one or two more, happened by chance to get the right side of the unmentionables before; but the buttoning of them was a failure, till I put them to rights. A shirt was wanting, and the king ordered one.
>
> Among the presents sent by Mr. Swartz were five gowns for his wives. They were made from coarse stuff, with large vulgar red flowers interspersed with black horses, big enough to be sure. One of these was given as a shirt for Macheng, and, being a large size, reached nearly to his ankles. What had taken place was funny enough, but this was the farce. I laughed outright and the king laughed, too, though not at the ridiculous spectacle as with me. They got his head into the wrong end. I told them to turn it, and on it went with a great deal of work, wrong side foremost. I protested against his wearing it, pointing out the impossibility of stuffing all the material into his trousers; and besides it was not a shirt, it was a woman's dress.

The passage shows that Moffat is not all piety and daily round and common task. He is, within his limits, an excellent observer. What is maddening of course, is that his mind was narrow. Calvinistic and made up in advance. He was not in the least interested in the customs and beliefs of the tribes, except to condemn them wholesale.

One gets the other side of the picture of missionary life from Robert Moffat's son, John, and his wife Emily. They came out on a later mission and found old Robert a family tyrant. John, more sensitive and imaginative than his father, began to see the defects of the missionary attitude.

John was intolerant, priggish and sceptical; and Emily, a delightful creature who wrote a number of vivid letters, gives a pitiless description of the domestic misery of the mission communities. Cut off, half-starved, without any native help, the women worked themselves to the bone merely to keep alive; fever killed many, and few children survived. The death of the whole Helmore family is a lugubrious, but not untypical, episode.

One by one, on their journey, these wretched people and their children, died of thirst, fever or poisoning—a total and senseless waste of human life. Nor had they the consolation of knowing they were saving the heathen from damnation; they were too busy keeping alive to preach, pray or proselytise. It is one more chapter in the strange, the fascinating history of human folly. And Emily Moffat—soon broken in health herself, but not in spirit—quickly lost her illusions.

The visits and letters of Livingstone come like a rough, cold, exciting gust of air, into this desolate scene. Ruthless and self-sufficient, he had been the prime mover in John and Emily Moffat's mission to the Matabele. He was in his best, his most vital period, before the disaster on the Zambesi.

One is moved by his moments of indulgence to people who were lesser, frailer, certainly less daemonic figures than himself. Whether you read them as history or human documents for their picture of an epoch which came to an end with the decline of the Matabele people, or as psychological documents, these three volumes will have a permanent place in African literature.

ESCAPED DEATH BY MINUTES

Richard Green, 17 months old, looks over the crushed baby carriage in New York from which his mother removed him a few minutes before it was struck by the truck in background. The truck ran wild when the driver lost control and struck the empty carriage and one, parked next to it, with 20 months old Donald Pacifici inside. The Pacifici boy was caught in the tangled wreckage beneath the truck, his coat pinned under a wheel. Outside of bruised legs he appeared unharmed, however.

MEN OF VISION
Calvert · 1622 Strathcona · 1885

In 1885
BARON STRATHCONA and MOUNT ROYAL
United Canada

At Craigellachie, high in the Rockies, in 1885, Donald Alexander Smith drove home the golden spike to complete the Canadian Pacific Railway . . . and thus was Canada linked from coast to coast. Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, Member of Parliament, Canadian High Commissioner, this great statesman dedicated his life to the cause of unity. Well may it be said . . . there was a man of vision, a clear-headed Canadian.

300 Years Ago
CALVERT United Two Continents

IN 1622 CALVERT, famous English statesman and Secretary of State to King James I, helped to unite the Old World and the New. Founder of colonies in Newfoundland and Maryland, Calvert's ideals of unity did much to foster understanding and friendship between two great continents.

Man of Vision, Calvert, early in the 17th century, said, "Preserve unity . . . prepare for the future" . . . and he set the example by his own actions.

Calvert's ideals of unity have been shared by all men of vision since Calvert's time. Today . . . let each of us be a man of vision . . . let us work earnestly for a united Canada.

Upon unity of purpose depends the full measure of our stature as a nation. There is only one Canada for clear-headed Canadians.

Atlantic Island Perennial Menace to Merchant Ships

By MURRAY J. MACLEOD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Halifax (CP)—Sable Island's shifting sands, which have menaced mariners for four centuries, have claimed another victim with the Greek freighter Alfios hard aground at the island's southern tip.

The freighter, inbound for Halifax, 170 miles northwest, struck a sand-bar. Two salvage tugs tried to pull the vessel loose but finally gave it up and the crew and passengers of the 5,116-ton freighter were taken off, leaving her in the grip of the sands.

Now the Alfios has gone with the other 350-odd ships that have found a last resting place on the island.

The first recorded wreck on Sable was a Portuguese galleon in 1552. The crew reached shore, later leaving the island by means of a small vessel which they built from wreckage. A year later, the reefs claimed the "Delight," flagship of Sir Humphrey Gilbert.

The Marquis de La Rouche tried to colonize the island in 1598 but failed. The French nobleman left 50 convicts there, returning to France where he was thrown into the Bastille.

He was later released, returning to Sable 15 years afterward to find all but 15 of the original 50 convicts had died, not of starvation or disease, but at the hands of their fellows.

Plundered Ships

In 1774 the government of Nova Scotia sent a party of coast-guards to the island, but instead of bringing aid to shipwrecked mariners, they plundered the stricken ships and killed the crews. They had planted false beacons on the island to lure even more ships to their doom. The plundering ended in 1781, when the news reached the Duke of Kent who was living in Halifax at the time.

The shaggy ponies which inhabit the island still are descendants of those put there by an expedition headed by Thomas Hancock of Boston in 1756. This expedition brought cattle and horses to the island as an aid to the survival of shipwrecked mariners. The horses dwindled in both size and numbers until now there are only about 200 left there.

When John Cabot made his voyage to North America in 1497 Sable Island was 209 miles long and 70 miles wide, with sand dunes rising 600 feet above sea level. It has dwindled since then until it now is only 20 miles long and 1 1-2 miles wide, with the highest point on the island 110 feet above sea level.

The visible island is merely an above-water portion of an immense body of sand with shallow sand-bars and reefs which stretch out 25 miles east and west of the shore while others parallel its shores for a distance of several miles. The island thus forms a dangerous area in the ocean about 75 miles by 10.

At the present time there are two lighthouses and a wireless station there, manned by department of transport personnel. Supplies are brought to them by the Canadian government ship Lady Laurier which makes regular voyages.

Hog-Nosed Snake Just a Bluffer

—(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto, May 25 — (CP)—Apparently nobody loves a comedian in the animal world, and the hog-nosed snake, now rare in Eastern Canada would undoubtedly be more plentiful if his habits were more orthodox.

This reptilian zany, also known as the blowing adder, is quite harmless but terrifies potential enemies by assuming a threatening attitude, lunging at them with head and neck flattened and hissing in a most alarming manner.

Actually Hog-Nose is bluffing and can't even be teased into biting anyone, but he generally frightens people so thoroughly that they kill him first and investigate afterwards.

The snake will often try to rid itself of a persistent opponent by feigning injury and death in a convincing way. It will turn over on its back, writhing as if in agony with mouth agape and tongue trailing in the dust, then suddenly becomes still and deathlike. Even when picked up it remains limp and can be draped unresisting over a branch or fence. It will remain perfectly still until the observer hides, then slowly raises its head, looks around, rights itself and crawls away.

Chief food of the hog-nosed snake is the toad or an occasional frog. The toad, something of an actor too, inflates itself when attacked but Hog-Nose, wise to the tricks of the Thespian trade, uses his fang-like teeth not only to hold his struggling prey but also to deflate it.

Visitors to Peking and other centres in China have been amazed to hear soft, woodwind music when a flock of pigeons flew overhead. Making pigeons provide outdoor concerts is an old Chinese custom. They catch the birds young and attach small bamboo whistles to their tails with fine copper wire.

Each whistle in a selected flock is given a different tone, so that when the birds dip and soar in the China skies, the combination of sounds is musical and exciting. For protection against atmospheric changes, the whistles are carefully lacquered in various bright tints before being tied to the aerial musicians.

Smiling Chinese sometimes explain that the tiny whistles have a practical purpose apart from delighting the ear. They are said to frighten away the hawks that prey on the pigeons. It is doubtful if any hungry falcon could be discouraged by a whistle, however, Hawks, it could be, like a little music with their meals.

Sometimes called the "hairbird" because it invariably lines its nest with horsehair, the chipping sparrow has to line the family quarters pretty thinly these days with that cozy material. Since the coming of the automobile and the vast reduction in the number of horses in urban and rural haunts, the chipping sparrow has to search farther and more assiduously for the hair. Yet the bird always contrives to find at least a modest supply.

Says Russia Will Achieve Success In A-Development

London, May 27 (Reuters) — Prof. Ivan Brodsky, corresponding member of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, today expressed conviction that the Soviet Union in the near future would achieve successful results in development of atomic energy, Moscow radio reported today.

"An examination of the problems of atomic energy is laid down in the new five-year plan in relation to the transport industry and the highly important matter of development of new technical processes in production," he said.

"The release of atomic energy is the result of persistent hard work by scientists and chemists of many countries. A large part of this work was done by Soviet scientists."

CATARRH,

BRONCHITIS, CATARRHAL AND BRONCHIAL COLDS ALSO SINUS AND ANTRUM TROUBLES

THE CAUSES OF CATARRH

Catarrh, Sinusitis, chronic Bronchitis—the name varies according to the parts most affected—are due to bacterial infection of the mucous membranes, the lining of the respiratory tract, or air passages of the head and chest.

An inflammation results which causes the tissues to be irritable and tremendously increases the secretion of the normal membrane.

This condition may persist year after year with all its distressing symptoms—sniffling, coughing, spitting, choking, with splitting headaches and frightening head noises.

SIMPLE RULES OF HEALTH

To cure a condition of this kind requires every effort:—Improved home and working conditions to ensure clean air and adequate sunshine . . . Proper rest . . . Attention to diet . . . Avoidance of constipation, and removal of any focal infection such as diseased teeth or tonsils.

WHAT IS LANTIGEN?

Lantigen is a dissolved Vaccine containing such dissolved Micro-organisms which are peculiar to the particular disease requiring treatment. It contains no live germs. They are all destroyed by dissolving thus releasing the antigens contained therein—the natural antidote.

Lantigen works two ways; firstly, by absorbing into open tissue such as the tongue, throat, and intestinal tracts; secondly, it is operative by means of its distribution through the alimentary—stomach—system.

LANTIGEN-A DISSOLVED VACCINE TO BE TAKEN BY MOUTH

To raise the defense of the body against this bacterial infection, LANTIGEN has prepared a special oral vaccine made from the organisms which cause the condition. Taken as directed the dissolved antigens cause an increase in the formation of antibodies to appear in the bloodstream. This is the greatest defense in the body against infection. The designation of this member of the series is LANTIGEN 'B'.

Washington Senators New Dark Horse of American League As They Move Into Third Place

Team Wins Ten of Last Twelve Games and Boast Leading Hitter of Loop

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Don't look now, but those amazing Washington Senators practically are breathing on the necks of the second-place New York Yankees and have closed within 7½ games of Boston's American League leaders.

Overshadowed by the Red Sox with their spectacular early-season 15-game winning streak, the Nats kept pecking away and since May 12 have won 10 of their last 12 games to climb from deep in the second division to third place.

Spearheading the advance has been first baseman Mickey Vernon, who leads all major league hitters with a .405 batting mark and has hit in 22 consecutive games.

Vernon collected three of Washington's eight hits yesterday, including his fourth home run, in a 3-2 triumph over Philadelphia Athletics. Rain washed out the second game of a scheduled double-header.

The Red Sox, aided by Tex Hughson's masterful pitching, gained an even split with the Yankees Sunday for a 2-1 game edge in the "crucial" weekend series. Hughson blanked the Yanks with three hits in the opener to shade Floyd Bevens 1-0. The Yanks took the nightcap 4-1.

Dodgers Increase Lead

Brooklyn Dodgers extended their latest streak to 7 straight by sweeping both ends of a doubleheader from the Phils in Philadelphia 5-4 and 6-2. The twin triumph, together with the St. Louis Cards' split in Cincinnati, increased the Dodgers' first-place lead to 2½ games.

Cincinnati came from behind to defeat the Cards 5-4 after the Red Birds had won the opener 4-3.

Chicago White Sox celebrated Teddy Lyons' debut as a big league manager by trimming Detroit Tigers twice 3-1 and 2-1.

Bobby Feller was just another pitcher to St. Louis Browns who slammed the vaunted fireballer for 15 hits to whip Cleveland 8-2 in the opener of their double-header. Steve Gromek handcuffed the Browns, 2-0 with four hits in the nightcap.

New York Giants used a barrage of extra-base hits to bury Boston Braves under 12-4 and 7-0 scores.

Pittsburgh handed Chicago Cubs their fourth straight defeat by belting a trio of hurlers for an 8-2 decision in the opener of a scheduled twin bill. Rain forced postponement of the second game.

Chips Off The Sports Block

The Whippah raised two

The board was aimed, at Henning's nob,
It landed—and new stars

Lee Henning, the gent of pachydermic tendencies, and the grimacing puss, ruefully rubbed a nub on his noggin the size of a hen's egg the other night after the Donnybrook at the Hume Arena, when he attempted to part Whippah Watson's hair with a hunk of plank without the customary conventional warning of "timber".

• • •

"Thou twert a bit rambunctious this eve" commented Brother Jonathan, looking up from a magazine in which he had been perusing an article on Chin Husbandry, or When it's Barber Strike Time in Mormondy.

• • •

Without waiting for an answer, the "Beard" glanced more or less sternly at the Man from Iowa. "Doust thou not know that it is against the regulations of the Mayhem College of Applied Pachydermy to coddle the conk of an opponent with wood, unless it is contained in a ring post, which of necessity is the hard kind?" he asked.

• • •

"It was not," quoth the perspiring Mr. Henning, brushing a blonde forelock from over his right eye which had given him a Veronica Lake appearance, "with malice aforethought that I seized the hunk of lumber, when I fell out of the ring."

• • •

"There was a dame down there that didn't like me. She had ripped the lumber from a seat, and was tapping it gently on her unoccupied hand. As I rolled near her feet she started to sing, and brother, there was murder in her eye, 'Onesy, twosy, I'll crown you'sy; twosy, three'sy you'll be wheezy; three'sy, four'sy, there'll be more'sy; five'sy, six'sy, here's your stick'sy.' Then, she looked as though she was going to bounce that timber off my noggin. So I grabbed it and leaped back into the ring."

• • •

Lee'sy cocked an innocent eye towards the ceiling. He anticipated the question. "Who me. Hit the Whippah? You're crazy. Why I wouldn't hurt a hair of his East York head."

He reached upwards and gingerly picked three pieces of substance from his cranium. He turned them over, looked again, then lightly tossed them away. "That proves it," he said, "that piece of board has been in that seat since before the war. Those chunks that decorated my bean, were hunks of chewing gum, 1939 vintage."

• • •

The "Beard" looked up from his magazine. "Tell me," he murmured "when that timber bounced off your permanent, did it hurt much?"

"Nah," snarled the blonde from Ioway, "that chawin' gum softened the blow, and besides, he hit me with the flat side of the board."

SOFTBALL GAME IS OFF

In case sports fans miss the story published in another column, the SACOS-Goodman Junior league softball tilt scheduled for tonight at the Fair Grounds, has been postponed, due to work being done on the diamond.

• • •

There has been a lot of well-deserved tributes paid to the Stewart Warner Alemite Company by a number of fans since the opening game of the City Baseball League last Friday for the fine condition of the new Recreation Park and the facilities installed this year for better baseball and fan comfort.

• • •

The diamond was in excellent shape for the league opener; the new seats and bleachers fill a long-felt want and the fenced-off enclosure aids in no small way the collection of admission fees. The new Recreation Park is a distinct asset to the sports set-up of the city, and with the installation of floodlights, ranks with the best of its kind in the district.

• • •

South of the Park, work is going on apace on a new softball diamond, primarily intended for the girls team representing the company, but which no doubt, will be for league games, if and when such a loop is formed. Here, too, are facilities for floodlights, and, it is understood these will be installed in the near future.

• • •

So the wash-day columnar orchids go to the SWACO people for a fine job in promoting and furthering a sport that prior to last year, had been in a decadent state since long before the war.

• • •

BUT HE'LL DO

Frankie Dyer, the Picton pitching sensation, who used to walk ten miles per evening in order to practice baseball, has been released by Manager Ben Lady of the Kingston Ponies of the Border League. Lady, however, thinks the world of the youngster, but says that he needs more seasoning before being ready for the pro ranks. Kingston reports state the young fellow, who throws 'em with either hand, will join the Locos squad of the Kingston City League.

• • •

WOULDN'T BE SURPRISED

Ken Colling, who keeps a wary eye and an eager finger on baseball happenings while convalescing down Kingston way, comes up with the prediction that professional baseball will be flourishing all over this part of Ontario within the next few years. Baseball magnates, south of the border, are gazing with increasing interest at players of Canadian origin, are beginning to realize that the Johnny Canucks can play the Yankee national pastime, and that in several Canadian necks-of-the-woods is potential big league baseball timber.

• • •

"Don't be surprised" whispered the old maestro of the belly-pad and mask, plus the chawin', "if you see a pro loop comprising Kingston, Peterboro, Oshawa, Smith's Falls, Belleville and other Central Ontario centres operating within the next 36 months.

LIKE IT, GANG? IT'S A C·C·M·

WITH growing pride every new C.C.M. owner asks this question and the answers vary only in verbiage — "Sure!" — "Super!"— "And How!" and the whole gamut of childhood exclamations of enthusiastic approval.

Little wonder that every child and, indeed, youth and "oldster" is keen about a C.C.M. bicycle, when he knows of the long years of trouble-free pleasure and satisfaction that may be enjoyed by riding a C.C.M.

These desirable qualities are built right into every C.C.M. Bicycle from the very start of their building. Suitable steels and alloys are selected for each part and these are carefully machined and shaped, where hardness is needed for the long life of moving parts they are heat treated, and accurately ground to size.

This same care and choice of the most suitable materials obtains throughout the whole manufacturing process.

To be sure the bicycle you buy is a genuine C.C.M. embracing all these fine qualities be sure the trade mark on the front steering post carries the three trade mark letters—"C.C.M.". This is your guarantee of satisfaction in the years to come.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 396

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A blind lead is no relation to a pig by the same name. Nor has it anything to do with a seeing-eye dog. It is a lead you must select without any hint from partner.

Blind lead is an appropriate expression. It was handed down to us from our antedeluded ancestors of whist. Those were the days when leads were not standardized into the set of signals they are today.

Their leads were just a stab in the dark. Their partners were almost blind to the meaning of any lead. They used to let many of their tricks fall where they dismay.

Blind leads of the present are codified into a very scientific communications system. Each lead has a special little meaning of its own to partner. This column has spent weeks telling how it works.

A lead is either blind or directed. A directed lead is one that partner has hinted at or asked for. Like when he has bid a suit, it may be assumed that he would like that suit led.

Does this mean you must learn another set of lead rules? You slaved four weeks away to learn blind leads. Must you now batter your brains against a set of rules for directed leads?

No. No. A thousand times no. The Horse Sense system has all its feet on the ground. It is made up of pure basics. The rules for the directed leads are found in what you learned for blind leads.

During the bidding your partner mentioned spades. Make a direct lead from these spades:

♠Q 7 5 4

Which spade will you lead? If you have learned the rules that apply to a blind lead, you know what applies for a directed lead.

A blind lead from a long suit not headed by a sequence is the fourth best. That is exactly what you lead from a directed suit.

Horse Sense rules do not change with the seasons.

Column Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 27 (AP) — A few years ago a Broadway actor named Van Heflin stole "Johnny Eager" out from under the classic profile of Robert Taylor. Heflin must now know how Mr. Taylor felt.

A Broadway actor named Kirk Douglas has snaffled "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers" from Van. Mind you, the more experienced actor is excellent in his return to the screen from the army. But he plays only a semi-bad guy, whereas Douglas enacts a complete heel. It's tough to compete against such parts.

This Douglas guy is going to be a big name in this business. He is well prepared for his oncoming fame—he already has his own fan club. It consists of his six sisters, Ruth, Ida, Fritzie, Marion, Katherine and Betty.

Kirk came smack in the middle of the feminine parade being born in Amsterdam, N.Y., 29 years ago. The scent of ham pervaded the whole family, and the Douglases were constantly winning oratorical contests or starring in school plays. However, Kirk was the only one who pursued an acting career.

He got some featured roles on Broadway, served a couple of years in the navy, then returned to the stage. Upon recommendation by Lauren Bacall, he was snapped up for the movies by Al Wallis.

Of course it's early yet, but Kirk seems to lack the pretension which some successful actors adopt. When we attended the preview of "Iver's" he was wearing his old navy overcoat. "I've got an actor's overcoat — one of those long things with shoulders out to here," he remarked, "but I've only worn it twice."

Second Baseman, Lew Klein, Joins Mexican League

Second baseman Lou Klein, late of the St. Louis Cardinals, was on the Mexican baseball scene today and pitchers Max Lanier and Fred Martin, who also deserted the National League club, were expected shortly.

Klein arrived last night by plane with Bernardo Pasquel, vice-president of the Mexican League.

In Cincinnati, meantime, Stan Musial, star Cardinal outfielder, reiterated yesterday that he had no intention of jumping to the Mexican League.

In St. Louis Lanier and Martin visited the Cardinal clubhouse to pick up personal belongings and were believed ready to head for the border today.

Yvon Petra, France's Davis Cup ace, virtually sent France into the European zone semi-finals single-handed as he scored two singles victories and partnered Marcel Bernard in a doubles triumph to give the French team a 3-2 edge over Switzerland in the second round of the tennis classic. Petra has yet to drop a set in two rounds of Davis Cup play.

The touring Liverpool Football Club roamed through a Philadelphia All-star soccer team at will to rack up a 12-0 triumph for their fifth consecutive victory of the tour.

Sweden's Anna Larsson claimed a world's record for women over the 400-metre distance when she won a race in 61.4 seconds yesterday. Record books do not list any world standard for women for the distance.

Wee Ben Hogan won the Rerd Western Open all by himself at St. Louis yesterday, shattering the tournament record with a 17-under-par 271 — four strokes ahead of war veteran Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles. The Texan shaved two strokes off Tommy Armour's record of 273, set at Milwaukee in 1929.

Maulin Manuel Ortiz of El Centro, Calif., retained his world bantamweight title Saturday by hammering out a technical knockout over Kenny Lindsay of Vancouver, B.C. in 42 seconds of the 4th round at Hollywood Legion Stadium.

Two new American League managers made their debut over the weekend, but while Chicago White Sox presented Ted Lyons with both ends of a doubleheader against Detroit Tigers, Bill Dickey had to settle for one out of three in New York Yankees' series against the league - leading Boston Red Sox.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, May 23 —(AP)— Warning to Linotypers: The Notre Dame 1946 Varsity (tentative) plays its annual spring game against the old-timers a week from today and here are a few of the names you're liable to get . . . Michael Swisztowicz, Ray Iannuccillo, Frank Kaskowski . . . "Swish" is a freshman halfback from Chicago who hasn't been getting any publicity during spring drills but has been nominated as "most likely to succeed" by observers. Ray, a 232-pounder fresh from three years in the army, probably is the biggest fullback in collegiate ranks, and Kaskowski is the end from Fleet City who drew so much praise from Cmdr. Bill Rinehart . . . A likely Varsity line for the game is Davlin and Lloyd, ends; Czarobski and McBride, tackles; Roval and Mastrangelo, guards; Walsh, centre. All but Lloyd are lettermen of past years and the Irish have 12 lettermen in the backfield.

B. M. Atkinson, Jr., Louisville Times: "An Ohio man has recovered after being hit by lightning the 10th time. He'll probably turn up as Billy Conn's technical adviser."

AT THE CAPITOL — The three fliers who vie for the affections of luscious Lizabeth Scott in Paramount's gay and tender love story of our times are Robert Cummings, Charles Drake and Don DeFore. Now at the Capitol Theatre, Paramount's "You Came Along" is a Hal Wallis production which launches the lovely Scott as his newest screen "find." She stars in her very first film. On the same program, thrilling new murder mystery, starring Stephanie Bachelor and Robert Livingston.

AT THE McCARTHY — Romantic surprise of the year is furnished by co-stars Myrna Loy and Don Ameche in the gay new Universal release, "So Goes My Love," now at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE — Billy Severn as the child brought up in the forforest, with Snoopy, the Squirrel, one of the fourteen animal friends in the all-color drama, "The Enchanted Forest," closing at the Belle Theatre tonight.

KINGARVIE WINS THE KING'S PLATE BY SIX LENGTHS

McLaughlin - Owned Colt, Unbeaten in Last Ten Starts, Too Much for the Opposition

By HARRY ECCLES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 27. (CP)—Kingarvie was all alone at the finish of the King's plate Saturday, the Parkwood stable's unbeaten colt —owned by R. S. McLaughlin of Oshawa—finishing the mile and an eighth classic with a good six lengths margin over Dave Turner's David T., and the late Harry Hatch's Bluesweep third in a field of ten.

Kingarvie was a winner all the way in the 87th renewal of the plate for the King's 50 guineas and $10,000 added by the Ontario Jockey Club. Saturday's running was worth about $13,000 and the winner collected $9,850.

The Governor-General, Viscount Alexander and Lady Alexander were there and so were about 33,000 others, the racegoers jammed into an immovable mass in and around the stands by steady rain which made the track sloppy. The rain didn't let up until after the fifth race—the plate was the fourth—and the congestion in the stands and betting sheds was indescribable.

Chatted With Trainer

Lord Alexander in a grey topper walked into the winner's enclosure to make the formal presentation to Col. McLaughlin and he chatted with Trainer Arthur Brent and Jockey Johnny Dewhurst who rode Kingarvie.

Dewhurst said he'd never had an anxious moment. His mount broke nicely in their position and was held in strong restraint for the first half-mile. Around the back-stretch Dewhurst let the colt run and he moved to the front with no trouble. Entering the stretch Kingarvie was three lengths to the good and he extended his margin with apparent ease.

David T., with George Courtney aboard, chased Kingarvie down the stretch and the horse's youthful owner, Dave Turner, of London, said afterwards that Courtney twice challenged Kingarvie under strong urging. But Kingarvie "simply walked away each time", said Turner.

Bluesweep was slow to get going but was running strongly at the finish. The Hatch colt however was four lengths back of David T.—and David T. for his part couldn't get near Kingarvie.

The winner, a Teddy Wrack—forsworn chestnut colt, returned $3 for a $2 straight ticket.

ROYALS STRETCH LEAD, SPLITTING WITH THE LEAFS

Win First Game 2-1 but Lose to Charles Mistos in Nightcap 6-3

(By The Associated Press.)

If the Mexicans continue to raid St. Louis Cardinals' pitching staff, Eddie Dyer will have to look to his Rochester farm club for pitching reinforcements like Bud Byerly and Max Surkont.

Although the Red Wings are in sixth place in the International League 8 1-2 games behind the leading Montreal Royals, Byerly and Surkont have been showing recent promise.

Byerly, a starter with the parent red birds last season earned his fifth victory of the season yesterday by trimming Buffalo 9-4, in the first game of a doubleheader. Surkont, who was turned back to St. Louis after he had been purchased by Boston Braves, completed the job with a 2-1 triumph over the herd in 12 innings.

Montreal stretched its first place margin to 2 1-2 games by splitting two with Toronto while runners-up Syracuse was bowing to Baltimore.

Jack Banta was throwing a two-hitter going into the ninth inning of the opener when he hit a wild streak and had to give way to Cy Buker who saved the 2-1 victory.

Ray Hathaway couldn't find the plate in the finale, walking six and giving up three blows before he was yanked in the third inning, as Toronto took a 6-3 verdict behind Charley Mistos.

Stanley West of Baltimore turned in the best pitching job of the day with a one-hit, 4-0 victory over Syracuse.

Herb Karpel, Newark left-hander, continued to baffle the League's hitters, earning his fourth straight victory, 4-2, over Jersey City. The Little Giants bounced back in the second contest for a 6-3 edge, snapping a 13-game losing slump.

What's Doing in Sport

Wilfred (Bucko) McDonald, best defenceman in the House of Commons, will legislate at first base for South River Bears in the North Bay District Baseball Association this summer. The Liberal member for Parry Sound and former N.H.L. rearguard played defence for Hull Volants of the Quebec Senior Hockey League last winter.

The touring Liverpool soccer club of the English League chalked up another victory in their first game under lights, defeating Fall River, Mass., 3-2 in a fast-played game at Fall River.

Alva Javery, considered good enough to make the National League's all-star team in 1943 and 1944, has been optioned by Boston Braves to Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League. The big right-hander had his best season in 1943 when he won 17 and lost 6 for the lowly Boston club.

Sid Barnes, Australian test match cricketer, has decided to take up baseball this winter. Barnes says he'll play any position the Marrickville team wants him to and promises to knock a few boundaries off opposition pitching once he finds his batting eye.

New York, May 27. (AP)—It sounds silly to use the word "altruistic" in connection with a race track these days, admits Horace Wade, tub-thumper for the new Monmouth Park, but he insists the folks who are putting up the dough for that impressive permanent-looking dollar trap in New Jersey aren't concerned with big profits. . . .Horace may be right; the place will have just as many places to cash mutuel tickets as to buy them . . . The windows are in place now, of course, though it calls for a tremendous rush job to finish the rest of the joint for an opening two weeks from today. . .Incidentally there's a $7,000 building going to waste on the backside because someone thought a blacksmith shop was necessary and ordered it built before he learned they shoe race horses right in the barns.

Monday Matinee

With Joe McCarthy, the "push button manager" and Jimmy Dykes who gave him that tag resigning on the same day, would you say the American League is a short circuit?. . . .Joe DiMaggio's autobiography, "Lucky to be a Yankee," hits the bookstores next month. . When the Phillies of the King's Plate Saturday, the turned down a juicy Mexican League offer "because I'm happy here with the Phils," the Herald-Tribune's Bob Cooke said: "That qualifies Northey as the most satisfied man in the world."

Ottawa, May 25—(CP)—Things seem to be going well at the spring training camp of Ottawa Rough Riders of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union.

Tommy (Ottawa Citizen) Shields, now returned to his typewriter after a turn as an army major overseas, reported that coach Fred (Baldy) Baldwin is seeking a drum majorette as the initial step in a long-range "dressing-up" plan, which may even include sponsorship of a Rough Riders boys' band.

"Accepting the coach's proposal, the Riders are undertaking to accord the young lady selected professional instruction in a recognized school, probably in Buffalo or Philadelphia," Shields says.

As background for the young lady's cavorting, the club apparently will hire a band for this fall. However, Baldwin wants to recruit and develop young bandsmen for a future boys' band and advances two sound arguments why it shouldn't be too difficult:

1. Most youngsters like to watch football.
2. Most youngsters would like to travel with a football team.

While the Riders weave about under Baldwin's now-famed barbed wire entanglements, designed to encourage low-blocking, at the other end of Lansdowne Park, the Capital's second senior grid squad — the Trojans of the Ontario Rugby Football Union—are nearing the end of a four - week grind.

Coach Arnie McWatters has put his charges through several heavy sessions in preparation for a two-game exhibition series with Hamilton Wildcats, in Hamilton June 5 and here three days later.

"WHIPPAH" MEETS WADY, THE POLE FRIDAY NIGHT

Well, the fans asked for it and here it is. Fresh from his victories in Montreal over the best the down-easters had to offer, Wladyslaw Talun, the Ponderous Pole, who breathes stratospheric air, will arrive in town sometime next Friday, ready and rarin' to de-atomize one "Whipper" Billy Watson.

The last time this pair met, the gong stopped a whirling bout that had the fans in a daze and the combatants out of the ring the most of the time—a melee that was stopped by the time-keeper's gong. This time, that won't happen. "The Voice" Phil Lawson, loquacious master-minder of the Whippah states emphatically that the two will battle to the finish no matter if it takes until Saturday afternoon.

It looms up as one of the best bouts of the season with both principals intent on victory.

And look who's here. None other than the ferocious Lee Henning the originator of the "Battle of the Planks" which ended disastrously for him last week. He will go to the mat with Pat (Long time, no see) Flanagan, a popular mat idol hereabouts. And that old showman, the guy who stands 'em in the seats and keeps 'em there, Bunny Dunlop will be, here to "hotcha" his stuff against tall, dark and sling-'em-around Mike Sharpe. Looks like a gala evening's entertainment.

COST PRACTICALLY NOTHING

Philadelphia, May 27 — (AP)— Philadelphia Phillies have spent $200,000 in an effort to build a National League winner — but may have made their best buy for practically nothing.

That best buy is Delmer Ennis, 20-year-old kid outfielder who never played major league ball until released from the Navy a month ago.

Ennis has clubbed four home runs, six doubles and batted in 12 runs. He's hitting around .300.

MOONHOLLOW

By Maurice Dekobra and Jessie Ernst

CHAPTER 9

"This was when Cora Leroy sung here the first time. Newspaper feller like you, took the picture. This guy Oliver is over there on her left side. See? Morley's on her right."

He held out the print of a group of ten, all woven around a vivacious dancer in a feathered costume—Cora Leroy. The sharp-faced, thin-lipped man at her left was Oliver, Audrey's butler at Moonhollow.

"Is he the guy you know?" the bartender asked.

"No, never saw this man before in my life," Gordon lied, and handed the picture back to the bartender as though he had no interest in it.

"This fellow Oliver did six years in our State pen. He loved writin'—writin' other people's names on checks. Sent up for forgery. After he got out on parole, they say he forged Morley's name on a check, too."

"So they nabbed him again?" inquired Gordon.

"Nabbed him yes, but had to let him go. Funniest thing ever. They were all ready to heave him in the calaboose; thought they had the evidence and everything on him. Then along comes Morley and as sweet as a cactus pear says his signature on the check was genuine. They had to spring Oliver."

"After that he and Mr. Oliver," interrupted the bucktoothed miner, "became trailmates."

"Thick and friendly as two ticks on a sheep. Queer huh?"

"Damn queer!" Gordon agreed. Oliver an ex-convict! Oliver, Morley's butler at Moonhollow. Oliver still there. Why? And these men were friends, not master and servant. What was the story behind this? Protection? Threat maybe? Did Audrey know about it.

Gordon assumed as logical the fact that Oliver was bell-hop to Morley's quickest wish. Since he saved him from doing another term. That would mean that Oliver was at Moonhollow because Morley wanted him to be there! Gordon's clean cold jealousy turned to troubled suspicion.

Suspicion about what? He couldn't tell. But he intended to do his best to find out the reason for Clifford Morley's friendship for Oliver.

He struck out for Cora and Morley's table like a hound on scent.

Laughing couples were leaving the floor—the orchestra players were relaxing, wiping the mouthpieces of their instruments.

Gordon was smiling when Morley and Cora stopped dancing.

"Brad," gurgled Cora, "I want you two fellows to shake, and be friends."

"How do you do? Delighted," said Gordon. Morley held Gordon's hand in his left for a moment, motionless, then released it as one releases a trigger, saying, "Excuse my left hand, my right one has been hurt. Cora's told me all about you. That was a clever stunt you two worked up for my benefit. I mean that story about your eloping with her tonight. Cigarette, Mr. Lewis?"

"Thanks, yes."

Morley snapped open a heavy gold case, on it a large "A. M." monogrammed in diamonds. Morley drew forth his right hand from his pocket where he had been hiding it.

"A bad accident to your hand?" inquired Gordon.

"Electric drill nicked it right in the palm. It's been slow to heal. I can use the fingers a little, But it hurts."

"You be careful of that," warned Cora. "Go see a doctor."

"Yes, my dearest darling," murmured Morley laughingly, as with care he tucked the hand back into his jacket pocket of his chalk striped suit. "I hear you're from the east, Mr. Lewis. What brings you out to these diggings?"

"Magazine story, local color, the people of Denver. Perhaps I could write you into one of the stories. Would you like that?"

"That's very nice, thank you. Guess I wouldn't make interesting reading, though."

"I think you would," said Gordon. "You Westerners are open and frank; clean like the snowfields, open as the valleys. People back East like to read about you. The real American, the outdoor Americans."

"Thanks for the compliment," chuckled Morley. "You overrate me."

They sat down at a table and were silent for a while, Morley looking steadily at Gordon from eyes that looked like two round stones under cold water — two stones flecked with green. Then Morley looked at the pink table lamp. Gordon kept his eyes on Morley.

"Brad's a hundred per cent, Cliff. Take it from me you can tell him anything he wants to know," said Cora and got up. "I'm going to my dressing-room for a few minutes to change my dress. I'll be right back." She brushed the back of her hand against Morley's tanned cheek, Morley laughed and blew her a kiss.

"Save it," she taunted. "You know me—the real stuff."

"Grand girl, Cora. Bright as quartz, but not as hard. I take it she's talked about me."

"Nothing but," Gordon nodded. "Madly in love, I'd say."

"Then you know how we stand. She's my girl. There are no other claims. I have an exclusive."

"That's O'kay with me," said Gordon. "There's no argument about it."

"I want to thank you for being so friendly to her while I was gone," Morley added dryly.

"She told me the second day I knew her that a fellow had already planted a claim on her heart, and that she was waiting for that man to come back. Nobody else has a chance. I give you my word on it. I never interfere when a man has sole right to a girl."

For the first time Gordon heard Morley's voice ripple low and pleased. "Glad to hear you say it, Mr. Lewis. Let's drink to it. They still have some excellent Chateau Rothschild. You know, I thought you might give me a little trouble."

With that, he signalled to a waiter who presently brought a holder and silver bucket.

"Mr. Lewis, want to be a millionaire?" inquired Morley as the waiter loosened the cork. "Just invent a bottle cork that says 'Mom' instead of 'Pop.'"

Gordon smiled politely, feeling that Morley was trying to be pleasant, and almost succeeding.

Cora joined them. They toasted her as Scheherazade, goddess of red jade, Princess of the Persias, lovers' dream, and the best strip dancer of the Great Muddy Water.

Morley hurled his glass against the side of the wall of the Gold Nugget. "No other lips shall sully the glass that toasted Cora Leroy."

When Cora and Morley wound arms tight around each other Gordon volunteered to go.

"Well, I'd better rush away and leave you sparkers alone. This is your first night together, and here I've been in the middle of it."

"O' course, O' course, Brad me boy. Good-bye, good-bye. I'm not leaving for Chicago tonight. I'm going by plane some time tomorrow...."

Morley's head was wiggling, but his eyes were sharp. He turned for Cora to approve the statement. She studied the saturnine face, the thin high nose, the expressive forehead and the dark hair thinning at the temples.

Gordon blessed them both, pledged eternal friendship, and wound his way out the rear door to the starlit night.

Morley and Cora soon afterward disappeared behind the velvet draperies that led backstage. Morley swaggered, deep in his cups, struck a pose, kicked open Cora's dressing-room door, circled her waist with his left arm, lifted her up to his shoulder and carried her inside the feminine arbor, the room warm and heavy with the scent of her.

"Don't let me go, honey," she whispered in his ear as he lay her down on the couch. He sat on the edge of the couch, looking at her, twisting the cinnamon ringlets around the fingers of his left hand, tugging at them, smoothing out strands of them and trailing them across her nose and eyelids.

"Cliff, why didn't you write me? God, how often you break my heart. First you tell me you have to go to South America on business—and you'll write me to come down there and we'll be hitched. That made me so happy, lover, you'll never know. Then the letters, mailed from Rio, swearing you wanted me and I believed it. You sure write scorcher letters, honey.

"Then I saw the Double Jackpot springing into action and found out the money was coming from a cut-glass baby out in Long Island and that you'd double-crossed me and married her. No wonder I was sore at her and told her I'd plug you and her, and I meant it! Tell me, Cliff, daddy darling, you didn't really love that dame, did you? Be honest with me!"

"No. But she was wild about me, and she showed it! But she's not the tiger you are. You're mine and no other woman will ever come between us; no sir."

"That's so—that's so! And no one better try," she warned him.

"You're fire and ice, Cora. It's your kind of love I need. Love that comes beating down everything in its path, like a prairie fire....or a plague."

"You're lit up, like a chandelier," cooed Cora, placing both arms around his neck and drawing him closer, saying, "And I like it. What would that Audrey of yours do for you? Look, I'll show you what I'd do for you."

She seized a book of matches, lit one, then lit them all. The cluster of them spurted fiercely into yellow flame. She was ready to put her arm into the flame. Her face was drawn thin and tight, but Morley aware of her idea, quickly snatched her arm away just as the flame scorched her. He rubbed her arm with cold cream from a jar muttering, "You damn idiot!"

"An idiot that adores you," she whispered.

His kisses were hot. She turned her eyes upward, persuasive, her body yielding.

"C'mon Cliff, let's go home."

He wrapped her tan, white-buttoned topcoat about her and led her out the rear passageway to the parking lot.

"No, let's walk, Cliff. I'm so happy I want to skip the sidewalks. It's only a few blocks."

"But I want to get there quick—the two of us, alone." They romped to Morley's car.

He pushed her in; she fell face forward. When he climbed in the other door she was laughing.

He tried shifting the handle on his steering-wheel with his left hand; then tried his right and winced with pain. The car rolled out the drive, sped down a deep hill, burrowed into the darkness ahead.

"Left here, Cliff; sharp."

The car slowed, gripped smooth pavement with its rubber pads, screamed as the wheel spun it left. Morley cursed because of the terrific pain of the pressure on his right hand pressing the wheel, and let go of the spokes. The car struck hard, a sidewise blow at a stumpy traffic standard in the center of the road. Morley's head was hurled forward into the shatter-proof glass of the wind-shield and dribbled blood.

The car stopped abruptly. There was a moment of silence.

"Cliff!" Cora screamed at the sight of blood oozing from the side of his forehead. He cursed her dispassionately, ending with, "Dammit, you women are all alike. Why in hell don't you get your directions straight. Pick this stuff off my face."

With her handkerchief, she dried the blood on his skin.

"Thank God," he said, "I'm not blind. It must have been the jolt of the steel frame of the window. How are you?"

"Okay, Cliff. Tie this handkerchief around your head. Here comes a car; I'm going to stop it."

A police patrol car drew up beside them. Two bluecoats fumbled with first aid, then sat Morley and Cora in the rear seat of their own car and raced off to Willoughby Hospital. Morley refused to let the sympathetic interne stitch the wound, but let him close the flesh with a metal suture until a practiced medico should arrive.

They waited in a private room for a Doctor Burns, Cliff stretched out on the white metal hospital bed, smoking. Cora sat at his side, holding his hand.

Urge Blood Banks In Every Centre

Toronto, May 27 (CP)—A suggestion that blood banks be made available in all parts of the province, not just in the larger cities, and a review of surgical methods used on the battlefields of Europe featured a paper presented to the closing session of the Ontario Medical Association convention here Friday.

Dr. C. C. Ross, of London, Ont. presented the paper and in it he emphasized that there was no greater advance in surgery during the war than the treatment of shock of resuscitation through the use of blood plasma, glucose, etc.

The association heard, too, a detailed report by Dr. R. F. Farquaharson, of Toronto, president of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada, on the certification of specialists.

He said certification without examination will not be granted after September 21 this year and that each candidate's paper will be set and examined by two specialists in each specialty. If the candidate successfully passes the examination he will come up for oral and clinical examination, a month later.

Giant 'Jacks' No Match For Speedy Wellington Hunter

Skeptics, who raised quizzical eyebrows when they read last week of the appearance near Wellington of jack rabbits, "the size of full-grown dogs" to which statement a doubting editor added "not St. Bernards" can now see the proof of the story if they feel so inclined.

For over the weekend a "Gingerville" (suburb of Wellington) nimrod, aiming four feet ahead of one of the speeding bunnies, shot one of the jumping "jacks" and it measured four feet from nose to hind legs.

The jack was in prime condition after a few weeks dining on the lush growth of new grain and succulent alfalfa.

The hunter, a bit of a wag himself, stated that the rabbit had been handpicked for its fat condition. "For," he added with a wink, "I ran alongside two or three of them and felt their ribs before I decided which one I wanted for a family stew."

TEN DROWNINGS.

had wandered from home until his sister rushed home after the accident.

When a 50-ton railway crane plunged into Halifax harbor Sunday the operator Grover Dearmond, 61, of Truro, N.S., was unable to extricate himself and received internal injuries and was scalded by escaping steam. He died in hospital.

Search parties were organized on Saturday and dragging operations were carried out in an attempt to find the body of Carl Hoffman, 16, believed drowned in Cloud Lake, King's County, N.S.

The death of Alexander MacDougall in hospital at Antingonish, N.S., Saturday brought to two the number of persons killed as a result of a highway accident. MacDougall was driving in a gasoline truck with John T. Chisholm on Friday when the truck left the road and burst into flames. Chisholm was burned to death in the accident.

At Hamilton, Andrew Shearer, 45, of nearby Beamsville, was killed Saturday when the light truck he was driving smashed into a railway train.

On Friday Clark Nelles, 40-year-old farmer of Caledonia, near Hamilton, died as a result of injuries he received when kicked by a horse.

Friday night the body of a 40-year-old Chinese, Lee Don, was taken from Toronto harbor by police.

GENERAL STRIKE

Mr. Sullivan also sent a telegram of protest to Justice Minister St. Laurent.

He said in part: "It has been brought to my attention by our representatives at Kingston that arrests are being made here... also that Provincial and Mounted Police are to be moved into the Welland Canal zone either tonight or tomorrow morning..."

Mr. Sullivan also released a copy of a telegram sent to Mr. Blackwell which read in part:

"Have just heard with amazement that you intend using Provincial Police in the seamen's dispute. Does this mean that the Ontario government does not even respect their own 48-hour week?"

Mr. Sullivan said the only lines which will not be affected by today's strike are McColl-Frontenac tankers and the Quebec and Ontario Transportation Company. He said they already have agreed to the eight-hour day.

Seven Await Arraignment

Montreal, May 27 — (CP) — While the Canadian Seamen's Union strike action was extended effective today to all lake and coastal vessels, seven men awaited arraignment here following their arrest Saturday under the Canada Shipping Act.

The six members of the crew of the Canada Steamship Lines' S.S. Battleford and Marcel Gagne, a C.S.U. delegate, spent the weekend in police cells, allegedly because bail had been denied them. Police would neither confirm nor deny refusal of bail. The crew members were charged with deserting their ship and Gagne with intimidation.

A strike against the C.S.L. having been declared early Saturday morning following a dockside dispute here the previous night, pickets were assigned outside the company sheds on Ottawa Street. When two cars filled with men went through the picket line preceded by a motorcycle police escort, and later returned empty, pickets shouted "scab" and "we will get you." The cars went to the shed at the end of which the Battleford was docked.

Prepare to Man Ship

Canada Steamship Lines prepared to man other strike-bound ships. Capt. Norman Reoch, operating manager of the company, announced that "with the aim to prevent any further crippling of Canadian economy through strike action, Canada Steamship Lines is taking steps to man its ships and to carry on its operations in face of whatever action subversive elements may care to undertake."

He said that in Ontario, where provincial police had at first hesitated to take part in the dispute, an arrangement had been reached with the Attorney-General's department to insure police protection for the operation of services.

Union officials said that the company would be unable to find a sufficient number of non-union seamen to man more than a small percentage of vessels tied up. Eighteen men hired by the company, said the union, changed their minds and joined the strikers.

A union spokesman said that at Kingston, eight men had been arrested, to be released on $100 bail.

On Way to Home

Thorold, Ont., May 27—(CP)—About 450 American passengers from the strike-bound steamship Noronic are on their way to their Detroit and Cleveland homes today after an excursion cruise which saw the first clash of the lake shipping strike.

They had boarded the Canada Steamship Lines' vessel at Detroit last week for a cruise to Prescott. The cruise ended abruptly Saturday when the crew walked off the ship here in response to the strike call issued by the Canadian Seamen's Union.

The passengers swarmed on deck yesterday afternoon to witness a clash between the union pickets and seamen aboard the C. S. L. freighter Edmonton. The Edmonton drew alongside the Noronic, in what the pickets thought was an attempt to land a strike-breaker crew aboard the passenger vessel.

Gangplanks Closed

The gangplanks were closed, but about 15 picketers scrambled hand-over-hand up the mooring cables, manned fire hoses and sprayed the Edmonton's crew and decks. The Edmonton sheered off and continued up the Welland Canal.

Acting Chief Constable Dennis Harold ordered the pickets off the Noronic. He said warrants, charging violation of the Canada Shipping Act, had been issued for the arrest of the 31 seamen who walked off the Noronic. He added further warrants might be issued as a result of the disturbances.

About 50 passengers left the ship Sunday morning to make their own arrangements for the journey to the U. S. The company later obtained rail and bus transport for the rest of the passengers.

TRUMAN KEEPS

His outspoken criticism of the railroad tieup brought Alvanley Johnston and A. F. Whitney of the two striking brotherhoods to terms even before he made good his threat to demand greater powers from Congress.

Summoned to White House

The President summoned Mr. Lewis and U.M.W. Vice-President John J. O'Leary to the White House only to have Press Secretary Charles G. Ross announce at the end of the 30-minute conference that Mr. Truman had nothing to say about the miners' returning to their jobs today.

"You'll have to see Mr. Lewis about that," Mr. Ross added.

Before seeing the President yesterday Mr. Lewis met for 1 1-2 hours with Interior Secretary Krug and Vice-Admiral Ben Morrell who are operating the seized mines for the government.

Mr. Krug handed the government's offer to Mr. Lewis on Saturday, but what it contained with regard to his main demands for a Health and Welfare Fund, higher pay and shorter hours and unionization of mine foremen was not disclosed.

Mr. Lewis turned down the offer, and yesterday's evidently futile meetings followed.

Came with Suddenness

The end of the 48-hour railroad strike came with dramatic suddenness three minutes before the 5 p.m. E.S.T. deadline Saturday which Mr. Truman had set for the army to start running the trains. It came when Messrs. Johnston and Whitney capitulated on the terms Mr. Truman proposed last Wednesday.

The compromise called for a 16-cent-an-hour pay increase recommended by a presidential fact-finding board plus an additional 2 1-2 cents an hour in lieu of any working rules changes for a year.

John R. Steelman, Presidential Labor adviser, announced the agreement. The 16-cent increase was to be retroactive to Jan. 1, the addition 2 1-2 cents retroactive to May 22.

Mr. Whitney, standing beside Mr. Steelman said the two hold-out brotherhoods had taken their course in the public interest, "realizing that a strike could not be continued indefinitely because of the needs of foods and the many other provisions necessary in our economy".

The trainmen's chief added a glum postscript a moment later when he declared, "well, we lost our case."

WHOLESALE PRICE

Ceiling prices at both wholesale and retail of all grades and qualities other than red and blue beef will remain unchanged.

Predict Early Improvement

Toronto, May 27 (CP)—The Toronto area meat situation today started back to normality after a near-famine which lasted approximately six weeks. With announcement in Ottawa last night that wholesale price ceilings on all red and blue brand beef have been suspended, livestock men as well as packing plant and government officials predicted an early improvement in the meat situation and an effective blow dealt the black market.

There was, however, disapproval of the Prices Board action expressed by retail butchers. The actual effect upon them, it was felt, would be to decrease their margin of profit and to leave them little margin of safety in their operations. They will, it was estimated, have to pay approximately two cents a pound higher for meat, but will not be permitted to pass the increase on to the consumer.

Representatives of the large packing houses — Hunnisett's, Canada Packers and Swifts—were cautious in commenting on the Ottawa announcement, but agreed the change would permit them to resume large scale activities.

Withdrew from Market

Cause of the critical meat situation in the Toronto area was refusal of the large packing houses to meet prices asked by farmers for cattle. The packers contended they could not do so and sell at a profit under the existing ceiling. They claimed they were losing $10 a head and abruptly withdrew from the market.

The rail butchers then were forced to look to small packers for supplies. As farmers withheld their cattle from market, stocks dwindled and black markets in meat sprang up.

While officials saw in the Price Board action an effective curb to wholesale black market activities, others feared that it would mean a transfer from a wholesale black market to a retail black market.

Seriousness with which retailers view the new developments was shown in the statement last night by John King, president of the Toronto Retail Butchers' Association. He said he would consider calling a protest meeting and expressed the opinion that retail butchers would be lucky to break even with higher costs facing them.

Lumber Strike Negotiations Still Stalemated

Vancouver, May 27. (CP)—Renewed efforts to effect a settlement in the 13-day old strike of 35,000 British Columbia loggers and sawmill workers were scheduled to start today following Saturday's collapse of negotiations under government appointed mediator, Chief Justice Gordon M. Sloan.

In this latest attempt to attain a solution, the commissioner proposes to hear the full case of the International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL) representatives and the company representatives and then recommendations to the two parties "as a completely neutral party."
